"They'll Never Get Me Alive," Former Crown Prince Tells Post-Dispatch Man

Says British and French Would Not Give Him a Fair Trial---Blames Gen. Ludendorff for Prolonging the War.

By CYRIL BROWN,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(By Mail.)

ISLAND OF WIERINGEN, Zuider Zee, Holland, Dec. 10.

THE German ex-Crown Prince has made up his mind to commit suicide rather than face criminal trial by a jury composed wholly or in major part of French and British.

"They will never get me," he repeated several times in an informal interview today.

I made the wearisome journey to Wieringen from Amsterdam on the chance of catching his ex-Royal Highness at home, and in an unburdening mood. As I drove up to the modest red brick two-story house I caught a glimpse of him at his bedroom window.

Though I had come to his dreary, godforsaken island unannounced, he received my professional card and sent word that he would be pleased to see me, though his time that day was very limited.

I was shown into the only sitting room, the billiard room, containing a shabby, moth-eaten, second-hand billiard table and two wornout leather armchairs. A few minutes later the ex-Prince entered wearing a salt-and-pepper sporting suit and decidedly self-conscious of his changed position. After we had chatted a few minutes his manner became natural and unaffected; he talked freely and answered questions readily.

> THE highest leadership went badly wrong about America. It refused to believe that there was a large American force in France and pooh-poohed every report to that effect. Before our offensive at Rheims, July 1, I reported to great headquarters, on the basis of the reports of the intelligence officers of my army group that there were 40 American divisions (approximately 1,200,000 men) in France. Great headquarters sent back the answer to me: "Nonsense! Impossible! There are only 14 American divisions in France and five of these are no good and cannot fight!"—WILHELM, FORMER GERMAN CROWN PRINCE, TO A POST-DISPATCH CORRESPONDENT.

Perched on the edge of the sorry billiard table, the former Prince lit a cigarette and faced my informal cross-examination. I had seen his arrival on the dull Devil's Island of Wieringen and I observed that since then he had pulled himself together, had recovered his nerve and, in relative solitude, had done some tall thinking about his situation and future.

I asked what he thought about the much-discussed possibility of being "extradited" with the Kaiser and placed on criminal trial.

"I don't give a hang about it," he said, in the American phrase with a decided English accent. In his next sentence he explained this real or pretended indifference as to what the allies might decide to do about his person.

"They'll Never Get Me."

"They'll never get me," he said, with a quiet smile. "They'll never get me—alive," he repeated.

I asked if, in view of his reported statement that he was innocent of complicity in the outbreak of the world war, he would not welcome a court trial as offering an opportunity of clearing himself, if he could. But the ex-Crown Prince expressed and stubbornly clung to the opinion that he would not get a square deal at a criminal trial, "certainly not if the French and the English had their way."

"They want my head," he said. "And I know it. But they won't get me. Clemenceau and Lloyd George are looking for someone to put the whole blame for the war on. They're looking for a scapegoat. And they've picked my father and myself to be the goats. Clemenceau is a bloodthirsty old man."

In response to a hint that he might be willing to face a jury on which Americans were sitting, or a high-class neutral jury, he would not commit himself.

His present plan obviously is to sit tight on Wieringen as long as the Dutch will let him.

I asked him if as an interned German officer he was not free to go back to Germany.

"Mind Own Business."

"Free enough," he answered, "but it would not do me any good. Germany would give me up quick enough to the French. 'The present Government is in such a kowtowing, boot-locking frame of mind that they would readily fulfil any demand made on them by the Entente, including the demand for my head or my person.

"If I were alone and nobody else was concerned I could tell a whole lot of things. But I must be loyal to my father, mustn't I? At heart I still feel like a Prussian officer and regard my father as my 'Highest War Lord.'"

The ex-Prince asserted that he had no hand or voice in starting the war. He had been continually squelched, not allowed to have anything to say in the imperial councils, and he had been repeatedly told to mind his own business.

When asked how he explained the world's opinion that he was one of the principal moving figures in precipitating the war, he answered: "Because I was always in favor of a strong army. King Edward's 'Einkreisungspolitik' was the real beginning of the war. He told me—not once but several times—that Britain couldn't put up with Germany's tremendous economic and commercial development and that he intended to isolate Germany and squeeze Germany hard.

Says Edward Liked Him.

"King Edward didn't like my father, but for some reason he liked me very much. He used to call me 'Willie, dear,' and talked freely and frankly to me.

"I was at the seashore with my family, playing tennis, flirting and indulging in the other usual summer pastimes when the news of the murder of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand came. I knew at once that that meant world war. Unlike many others, I knew that England would come in. I knew the British character too well to misjudge them.

"After the first battle of the Marne I steadfastly worked for peace, but was balked by a military clique.

"Ludendorff was the driving power of the war and, as such, principally responsible for its prolongation.

"Before our great offensive reacted in March, I knew we could not win. And my Bavarian cousin (Prince Rupprecht) held the identical views that I did.

Father Closed His Ears.

"The highest leadership closed its eyes and ears to everything unpleasant and believed only what it wanted to believe. The highest leadership went badly wrong about America, for instance. It refused to believe that there was a large American force in France, and pooh-poohed every report to that effect.

"Before our offensive at Rheims in July I reported to great headquarters, on the basis of the reports of the intelligence officers of my army group, that there were 40 American divisions in France. Great headquarters sent back the answer to me:

"'Nonsense. Impossible. There are only 14 American divisions in France and five of those are no good and can't fight.'

"In the same way the highest lead-

GOOD STORIES ABOUT COL. ROOSEVELT

Novel Events in His Career, Illustrating His Amazing Energy and Versatility

His Life a Succession of Dynamic Events and He Put Action Into Everything With Which He Came Into Contact—Fought Red Tape Continuously as President—Always Impatient With Slow Functioning of Congress.

Here are some of the stories that have been told of Theodore Roosevelt and that illustrate his amazing energy and versatility:

AT THE beginning of his first administration as President he insisted on frequent target practice for the navy. He requested and received one very large appropriation for ammunition, and Congress expressed amazement when he demanded almost immediately more money. Asked what had happened to the first fund, he said:

"Every cent has been spent for powder and shot, and every bit of powder and shot has been fired."

When he was asked what he intended doing with the additional sum, he said:

"I shall use every dollar of that, too, within the next 30 days in practice shooting. That's what ammunition is made for—to burn."

Soon after that, Roosevelt, as President, prescribed that officers of the army, navy and marine corps should ride 90 miles in three days as an endurance test. He rode 98 miles himself in a driving storm of rain, snow and sleet in one day. He left the White House at 3:40 a. m., rode to Warrenton, Va., and got back to the White House at 8:30 p. m.

Here is an anecdote told by the Rev. George C. Richmond, an Episcopal clergyman, in a sermon in Syracuse, May 3, 1903. He said:

"When President Roosevelt was graduated from Harvard and went home to New York, he decided, as thoughtful men often to, to devote part of his energy and ability to the work of the church. He had been born and bred into that branch of Christianity known as the Dutch Reformed Church. But at this point in his life he decided to give his strength, vitality and sympathy to the Episcopal Church, which, in his mind, had the best field for work.

"To a man of his strenuous constitution, its mission in the present age, its chance for work among God's people of today, was, of course, the prevailing motive for his choice. He entered into the work of a New York parish and took time to teach the boys of the Sunday school. Here in this church he met the spirit which shocks and confounds a real, true man, the spirit of medievalism, the spirit of the unessential, the semblance of the real.

Why He Quit Church

"At several of the services he failed to bow when the rubric required such a posture. He waited to kneel, as those who noticed him watched with chagrin. If they had left him alone he would have learned. These people were ill-bred in those manners which win men and make new souls. They told this young fellow of all his ways as they had watched him, and urged him to be more correct. As a result, he left the church and threw up his work. He went back to that body of Christians where manliness is worth more than manners and strength of character more than ritual."

Jacob A. Riis wrote of Col. Roosevelt once:

"His love for children, especially for those who have not so good a time as some others, is as instinctive as his championship of all that needs a life. I doubt if he is aware of it himself. He does not recognize as real sympathy what he feels rather as a sense of duty.

"Yet I have seen him, when school children crowded around the rear platform of the train from which he was making campaign speeches to shake hands, catch the eye of a poor little crippled girl in a patched frock, who was making frantic but hopeless efforts to reach him in the outskirts of the crowd, and, pushing aside all the rest, make a way for her, to the great amazement of the curled darlings in the front row."

Owed Marshal McCarthy a Penny

There is one New York man to whom the Colonel owed a small financial debt—United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy.

"Yes, the Colonel was my debtor to the extent of 1 penny," said the Mashal yesterday. "Here's how it came about: On March 3, 1909, just as President Roosevelt was to retire in favor of President Taft, I was sent to Washington to present to him a handsome hunting knife, the gift of Justice, later Ambassador, James W. Gerard, with whose court I was associated at the time.

"'Be sure to get a coin, a penny, from the President when you give him the knife,' the Justice told me. 'Remember the old superstition that a gift of that sort cuts friendship unless a small payment is made for it.'

"When I gave Col. Roosevelt the knife I asked him for the penny. He didn't have one in his pocket. Neither did his secretary, Mr. Loeb. Neither did Senator Chamberlain, who was present. So I volunteered: 'Here, Mr. President, I'll lend you a cent.' He took it and put it in his vest pocket.

"After 10 minutes of conversation, during which time he gave me an autographed photograph for myself and a book for my father, who always admired him, the President suddenly reached into his pocket, withdrew the coin and said: 'Mr. McCarthy, it gives me great pleasure to hand you, in return for Judge Gerard's gift, this 1-cent coin.' Ever since then I have prized the photograph and the book Mr. Roosevelt gave me is one of the most cherished possessions of my father. And I always have been proud of the fact that a President of the United States owed me a penny."

Roosevelt's impatience of red tape was proverbial. The story is told of one committee that had been meeting him daily for a week in Washington, always to adjourn without perceptible progress. When the committee left on this occasion one of them said they would do something "tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" the President exploded. "Gentlemen, if Noah had had to consult such a committee as this about building the ark it wouldn't have been built yet."

Bested Western Bad Man

George William Douglas, in his book, "The Many-Sided Roosevelt," tells the following story of his life as a young man in the West:

"One evening after supper he was reading at a table in the public room of a frontier hotel, where he was passing the night. The room was office, dining room, barroom and everything else. A man, half-drunk, came into the hotel with a swagger, marched up to the bar and, with a flourish of his arm, commanded everybody to drink. Everybody was willing to obey; that is, everybody but Mr. Roosevelt. He still sat at the table busy with his book.

"'Who's that fellow?' the man asked, pointing in Roosevelt's direction.

"'Oh, he's a tenderfoot, just arrived,' someone said.

"'Humph!' he grunted. Then he turned square around and called out: 'Say, Mr. Four-eyes, I asked this house to drink. Did you hear me?'

"Mr. Roosevelt made no reply. The man swaggered over to him, pulling out his pistol and firing as he crossed the room.

"'I want you to understand that when I ask a man to drink with me, that man's got to drink,' he threatened, folding his still-smoking pistol.

"'You must excuse me tonight. I do not care for anything to drink,' said Roosevelt.

"'That don't go here. You just order your drink or there'll be more trouble.'

"'Very well, sir,' Roosevelt replied, rising slowly to his feet and waiting till he was firmly poised on them before completing his remark. 'I do not care for anything, but if I must'——

"With the word 'must' he let his fist fly, striking the bully a terrific blow on the jaw and knocking him on the floor. In an instant Roosevelt was astride of him, with his knees holding down the man's arms. After taking away all the weapons he could find, he let the man up.

"'Now, I hope you understand, sir, that I do not care to drink with you,' said the young tenderfoot, who had hardened his muscle to some purpose before he went West."

Helped a Photographer

Probably no man of his time had more pictures taken of him than Col. Roosevelt. They are stacked up in every newspaper office. Many stories are told of his experiences with photographers, and here is one.

On his trip to South America, where he discovered the "River of Doubt," he was accompanied by several motion picture photographers. One was a free lance who was a trifle sensitive about his standing on board.

During the celebration of the Feast of Neptune, when the ship crossed the Equator, there was a pillow fight on a rail over a tank of water. The photographers lined up to get the picture of the struggle with the Colonel in the background. One of the regular photographers slipped a cap over the free lance's camera.

One of the contestants had just been knocked off the pole into the water and Col. Roosevelt, laughing and applauding, turned to the free lance, who was grinding away at his useless machine, and said:

"Take off your cap, young man!"

The free lance frowned at the Colonel, thinking he was being joshed, and said:

"I am an Austro-Hungarian subject and have never become an American citizen. I don't see why I should."

The Colonel, continuing to smile, said:

"I was merely going to say that if you will take the cap off the lens of your camera we will have the bout fought over again so you can obtain a good picture."

The free lance sheepishly took off the cap from the camera, and then bared his head to Col. Roosevelt.

R. J. Cunningham, the famous African hunter, who was in charge of Col. Roosevelt's hunting expedition in East Africa, said he had never found "any other so easy to get along with, and no other man who, by his character, made every man in his service so anxious to do the best possible for him." He tells the following story of "one very near squeak" the Colonel had. Said he:

"The Colonel was determined to get an ele-

Famous Epigrams Uttered by Roosevelt

THEODORE Roosevelt was a great maker of epigrams. The short and pithy phrases of his coinage now are part of the lanauge of the country. It will be long before any one who sees or hears the words "Bully!" and "Dee-lighted!" or the phrase, "the strenuous life" will not think at once of Col. Roosevelt. Some of the striking expressions of Col. Roosevelt's making, or of his so pointed use that, although he did not originate them, they always will be associated with him instead of the author, follow:

''Speak softly, but carry a Big Stick.'' This was his early definition of his political creed. And for years thereafter no cartoon of the Colonel was considered complete unless it entained the artist's conception of the Big Stick.

''My hat is in the ring,'' was the way he announced he was a candidate for President.

''My spear knows no brother,'' was a quotation that he used so effectively that it generally is associated with him.

''Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead,'' was the Roosevelt answer when the bandit Raisuli captured and held for ransom Perdicaris, an American citizen.

''I have teeth and I can use them.'' So said Roosevelt when he was arguing with Gen. Miles over the case of Rear Admiral Schley.

''The short and ugly word,'' became a popular phrase throughout the country just as soon as Roosevelt used it in his verbal brush with the late E. H. Harriman.

''Malefactors of great wealth,'' was a phrase made famous by Roosevelt.

''Dam the law! Build the canal!'' That is what Roosevelt said when his advisors started to tell him the legal obstacles in the way of linking the Atlantic and Pacific at Panama.

''I am for the square deal'' was one of the expressions in an early speech that gave the country a popular catchword.

''The police board does not make nor repeal laws. It enforces them.'' So said Roosevelt when he was Police Commissioner of New York City. And those were widely quoted words at the time.

''We stand at Armageddon and we battle for the Lord.'' When Roosevelt used that phrase to describe the political fight he and his followers made in the so-called Bull Mose campaign there was great business of looking up Armageddon which was found in the Bible.

''I feel like a Bull Moose,'' was an expression that gave that name to the Progressive wing of the Republican Party.

''Better faithful than famous,'' was the aphorism he evolved for himself when he entered politics.

''I took the Canal Zone and let Congress debate,'' was another widely quoted sentence.

''Never strike soft. If you must hit a man, put him to sleep.'' That was a sentiment frequently expressed by Roosevelt in his latter day speeches.

''Some one asked me why I did not get an agreement with Columbia,'' he said on another occasion. ''They might just as well ask me why I do not nail cranberry jelly to the wall.''

''If you ever print anything without my permission I shall deny it,'' he said when newly inaugurated as Governor to newspaper reporters. And they remembered it.

''I do not number party loyalty among my commandments.'' This was one of his most famous expressions, made when he declared war on political bosses.

''Weasel words,'' was the phrase he applied to words of President Wilson.

''Mollycoddles!'' ''Ananias!'' ''Traitor!'' ''Pussyfooter!'' ''Cravens and Weaklings!'' ''Muckrakers!'' were among the superlatives that Col. Roosevelt put with verbs and names in public attacks on those with whom he was displeased.

Clemenceau, "the Tiger"

DESCRIBED BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

as He Is in His Lair

A Peculiarly Vivid and Timely Story of a Hitherto Unpublished Interview the Post-Dispatch's Military Expert Had in 1916, With the Man Who Now Is Presiding Over the Peace Council.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS,

The Post-Dispatch's Military Critic and Author of "The Great War" and "They Shall Not Pass."

NEARLY three years ago, at the moment of the German attack upon Verdun, a London friend of mine furnished me with a letter of introduction to M. Georges Clemenceau, then holding no other political position than a member of the French Senate, but since become the President of the Council, the leader of the French nation and the savior alike of France and of the allied cause. But even in the Verdun period he was, as he has been for at least a quarter of a century, the most interesting of French public men and, through his newspaper, he was the single outspoken critic of allied mistakes and the champion of vigorous and concerted action against the common enemy.

> RARELY in human history has it been given to any man to represent his country at a supreme hour in its history and so to represent it that his own personality and figure became the expression of a nation which itself was the object of world admiration. Such was and is the achievement of Georges Clemenceau.—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

Leading me down a long and dusty hallway, and old sergeant ushered me into Clemenceau's study, the room of which I had heard so much, and there, seated at the wonderful desk, which is a part of the stage properties of political Paris, sat Clemenceau. For the moment the desk seemed even more remarkable than its owner. It was a huge circular desk, shaped like the emplacement of a heavy gun, with long sides stretching backward as if to protect the gunner from flank fire. And as he rose from his chair to greet me, Clemenceau seemed almost like one of the short howitzers rising to the discharge.

I had expected to see an old man, for Senator Clemenceau is 78; instead I saw a man whose first motions suggested the energy and force of 50. I had expected to see a stern, even bitter face, but instead it was the smiling face of one who welcomed a friendly guest. The first impression was of energy, the second of courtesy.

When I had sat down he retook his place at the desk, at the gun-emplacement, for the figure is more than a figure. From behind that breastwork he daily bombarded Paris, France, ministries and Generals, with those articles which had overset many ministries and were, in a later time, to overset the last, before he came back to power.

Traces of the Mongolian.

And as he sat down again, M. Clemenceau placed upon his bald head one of the familiar soldier's fatigue caps, well pushed back on his forehead, and it gave him a most amazing appearance. The enemies of Clemenceau—and he has spent a life time collecting them—will tell you that he is a Mongolian, that he represents the survival of some ancient Tartar invader of prehistoric France. This is probably a mere legend and yet, unmistakably, there is about the man the suggestion of the Oriental, something about the high cheekbones, the deep-set eyes with their enormous gray eyebrows, which suggests, not the Oriental we know in America, outside of Washington, but the Oriental of high rank and equally unmistakable intelligence.

Yet cap and desk, and almost fantastic appearance, it was still a kindly and vigorous old man, with hardly a trace of the burden of years, who welcomed the invading Americans.

"I knew America onec, I knew it well," he said; then with a touch of mock sadness, "but that was long ago, too long ago. For you see, I am an old man." Then for a moment he gossiped about the New York which he had known, the New York of Dana and of Greeley, whom he had visited in the days between the end of the Civil War and the other coming of the German, of the days when he was in exile, an instructor of French, I believe, in a girls' school in a Connecticut suburb.

Despaired Sometimes.

"But you come to talk about the war, about France," he said, after a moment.

"Well, I am not going to tell you what France is doing, I am not going to praise France. You must look around you for yourself, you must see it for yourself, you must feel it for yourself."

Then, after a moment, he went on with quickening tone:

"There have been times in the past," and he waved his hands toward the busy street beyond the lattice window, "there have been times when I have despaired of my country, when I have been afraid of the future for my countrymen—but now, look at them, look at France."

Then he repeated details of the Verdun episode, of the tragic opening days about Douaumont, which all Paris was then repeating, but I shall not repeat here.

"We need a man, we need a General, we need a man," he said, with sullen intensity.

"And Joffre?" I asked, recalling the name of the man, who then still commanded, but whose sun was then sinking rapidly.

"I have nothing against him," he said sharply, "nothing, but he is not the man; he is not the man."

No Interest in Foch.

"And Foch?" inquired, making my own hero.

But Foch did not arrest his attention.

"What of Petain, then?" I inquired, naming the man who was just coming to world notice as the defender of Verdun and was to succeed to the rank and power of Joffre, before Clemenceau, himself, became Premier.

"Perhaps, I do not know him," he replied, "but we must have a man."

"What of Kitchener?" I queried, naming the man who then commanded the British armies and was at the moment in Paris. The question roused Clemenceau. All of a sudden his whole demeanor changed, he leaned over the emplacement for all the world like a big gun in action.

"Kitchener," he said with extreme deliberation, but in a tone of unmistakable ice—"Kitchener is a symbol."

"A symbol?" I asked, a little puzzled.

"Yes, a symbol. A symbol is a man about whom some people still believe what was never true."

"I am the Opposition."

Here at last was the "Tiger," the Clemenceau of the legend. This was the man who, a few months before, had said of Viviani, then Premier, "He has spoken, he speaks, he will speak," and Viviani had fallen together with a whole Cabinet of eloquence.

The conversation drifted to politics.

"What of the opposition?" I asked.

"The opposition, in the Chamber," I explained.

"Opposition?" he puzzled over that for a moment and then said with calmness::

"But I am the opposition."

It was the famous phrase of Louis XIV, "L'etat, c'est Moi," but it was repeated without the smallest note of personal vainglory; it was not a boast, it was a simple statement of fact.

"I am the opposition," he repeated,

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

From the Verdun Front.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Although the armistice is on and peace at hand it is a pleasure for me and I feel it a duty to just let my friends and folks at home have an idea of how lucky we boys of the 128th Field Artillery, Battery B, consider ourselves. It seems as though ever since the big drive in the Argonne Forest that our organization had up to the eleventh day, eleventh hour been getting into some pretty bad ruts, but were fortunate enough to come out with only a few casualties. What I mean when I say "fortunate:" We could just as well have been completely wiped out of existence, and only our little aluminum identification tags tacked to a little wooden cross would be left to identify us in the hereafter.

It has been pretty hard for me to figure just why we have not been given more credit in the St. Louis papers, for we have been just as important a factor in the Thirty-fifth Division as any other organization. There is no doubt that we as artillerymen adore our famous infantrymen of the 138th, etc., as they adore us, for I have seen man after man lying either killed or wounded along the path of which they forced the inhuman Hun from his underground haunts in the Argonne Forest and where some of the heaviest fighting that the American army had to contend with took place.

It is a fact that as a whole the Thirty-fifth Division's reputation doesn't seem to impress the correspondents as others do, or is it they are so important that censorship regulations have forbidden the use of our name.

Of course, we know that the First Division and a few others have put some awful dents in the Hindenburg line, but I can say that our own Missouri and Kansas boys broke through the mighty Hindenburg defenses on the well remembered morning of Thursday, Sept. 26, and later took such towns as Vanquais, Bois-de-Rossigne, Courage-de-Aden, Cheppy, Charpentry, Baulang and Bois-de- Montrebeau Epermont. It was not the First Division and a few others who have been so well represented in your papers that started this drive at the said point, but it was our National Guardsmen, whom you so often read about.

I think we did well; all that was asked of us, and I hope in the near future to give a better account of ourselves without exaggerating.

PRIVATE LIONEL L. MAZZIA,

Verdun, France, Dec. 6. 1918.

The Eighty-Ninth Division.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Let me congratulate the Post-Dispatch on being the first St. Louis paper to give prominent place to the splendid fighting record of the Eighty-ninth Division. This division, trained at Camp Funston, contains all the Missouri drafted men. One of its regiments, the 354th Infantry, is mainly composed of St. Louis men. An officer in this regiment, a St. Louisan, writes: "We may not have been much in the papers, but we have been mighty in battle." Mighty in battle they have been, with a fighting record that extends from St. Mihiel through the Argonne Forest to the Meuse River. And except in the casualty lists, which show that one-fourth of their number has paid the great price, they have not been much in the papers. The 138th Infantry and the 128th Field Artillery are St. Louis' own regiments. They should receive the recognition the press continues to give them. But why this neglect of the 354th?

The Eighty-ninth Division has the honor of being chosen for the army of occupation. This period of watching throughout the winter may be as trying as any fighting it has had to face. Let the men of the 354th feel the gratitude and appreciation of St. Louis and give St. Louis the privilege of doing honor to everyone of her soldier sons. Even the most recognition she can give to those who have gone forth to die for her is a small, small reward.

A FRIEND TO THE 354TH.

Overseas Mail Service.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On recent dates I have noted that articles appearing in your paper relative to the poor overseas mail service, to which I would like to add my complaint. On Dec. 16 I received a letter from my son, who is in France, stating that he sent me a money order through the Y. M. C. A. as a Christmas present, and up to the present writing we have not received same.

It was forwarded fully two and one-half months ago. He further states that he has not received any mail from home since arriving overseas and complains that we must have forgotten him.

I have written on an average of three times a week; also tried my luck with registered letters without success. It seems very strange that he does not receive a letter now and then after all that were forwarded. I know of another young man who has sent money to his mother and she has never received a penny of it.

I think an investigation of such complaints that have been appearing in your paper from time to time should be started.

A MOTHER OF TWO IN THE SERVICE.

STATE TAX BOARD'S OFFENSE.

Unless the Senate intervenes to save it, the State Tax Commissioners will be legislated out of office, with no provision for naming their successors, according to the news from Jefferson City. House sentiment is said to be strong for the board's abolition.

The offense of these commissioners is a very serious one. They have not merely sought revenue sufficient for Missouri's pressing needs. They have done more. They have exposed the illegal methods of the State Board of Equalization. They have aimed at an impartial application of the tax laws.

The success with which, as evidenced by the State Treasurer's books, they fought the tax dodger during their brief term of office shows that evasion of just dues will be rendered increasingly difficult, if they are permitted to continue in office.

They have caused assessments to be made as the law directs in a large area of Missouri. Unless speedily turned out they will soon have assessments on a lawful basis throughout the State. The cause of equal taxation has made rapid progress under their supervision and leadership. To allow this cause to prevail will cost some men too much money.

The large tax dodgers form a powerful element which is not averse to receiving assistance from a class of small tax dodgers. Up-State counties make tax discrimination in their favor at the expense of other units and counties a condition of political support. This sinister tax-dodging combination of finance and politics is one whose hostility is deadly. Out with the offending commissioners who tried to enforce the law. Out with equal taxes. Welcome the return of tax favoritism, tax evasion, tax chaos!

But with whatever apparent favoritism the support of the small taxpayer is purchased for the perpetuation of lawless, tax-dodging methods, he really suffers in the end. If he is enabled to save pennies on his due to the State, the big tax dodger save dollars, by the hundreds and thousands. If the board is abolished, what is to follow? Missouri is at a stage where taxation according to law has become not only a matter of justice, but a matter of expediency and necessity. Abandonment of the progress so far made means that within a few months the State will again be facing deficiencies and bankruptcy.

A DRY WORLD.

As the Pilgrim Fathers, according to the late lamented Bill Nye, came to America to find a wider field for their intolerance, so, naturally, the prohibitionists are branching out into wider fields for their special brand of bigotry.

Having conquered the great republic of America—the greatest democracy in the world—the prohibitionists have good reason for optimism. When the free men of America permit the "verboten" yoke to be placed on their necks, why should not nations which have just emerged from political imperialisms submit?

To be sure, the Czar of Russia, who was the first to establish nation-wide prohibition by ukase, has passed, but his Bolshevik successors have bettered his example of tyranny and may be depended upon to proclaim and enforce anything that smacks of intolerance.

The proposed league of nations offers an excellent instrumentality to enforce world-wide prohibition and thus, while making the world safe for democracy, make it secure for the latest despotic vagary of democracy. Why not make world-wide prohibition the fifteenth point of the peace terms and create a special tribunal with an international military and naval police to enforce it? Let us have a dry world at any cost.

PUBLICITY WILL CONQUER.

If "open covenants of peace, openly arrived at" were not the very first of President Wilson's 14 points, which all of the belligerents have accepted, there would be nothing strange in the adoption of the rule of secrecy by the supreme council of the peace congress.

There has never been a peace in the past that was made in the open. And the United States has observed this customary obligation quite as consistently as have the Old World Powers. In the peace of Paris, in 1898, settling the war between the United States and Spain, for example, the rule as to secrecy was agreed to and observed throughout.

In the peace of Portsmouth between Japan and Russia, in 1904, the suspected breach of the rule of secrecy by the Russian delegates almost threatened the success of the negotiations, owing to the resentment aroused among the Japanese representatives. Thus M. de Martens, the distinguished Russian publicist, commenting on the matter, naively attempts to shift the blame to American newspaper men:

> Heretofore it has been an axiom in the diplomatic world that absolute secrecy concerning the proceedings of a conference is a sine qua non of its success. Consequently, in all international congresses the delegates of the various Governments represented agree to reveal nothing that transpires there. This rule was also observed on the opening day of the Portsmouth conference. In European countries the keeping of the promise is nearly always possible. In the United States the contrary is found to be true. It is an admitted fact that most of the secret negotiations of the conference were revealed and immediately published by the American newspapers.

The compliment paid by M. de Martens to the enterprise of American correspondents appears still to be deserved by the shipload of them now in Paris, not that they have thus far been able fully to inform the world of what is going on, but the old spirit is revealed in the storm of protest they have let loose against the apparent repudiation of the first of the 14 points.

Newspaper correspondents may not be actually admitted into all of the conferences, but they can be relied upon to bring about such a modification of the rules of secrecy as will permit of supplying full information to the public. The force of world opinion is behind them and no statesman or group of statesmen can long withstand its pressure. The first victory in the preliminary conference points to a complete understanding, in which all essential facts will be published. This is necessary for popular confidence in the peace conference and for the enlightenment of world opinion.

THE FUTURE ARMY.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

NOTHING could be more reasonable than Secretary Baker's reminder to the House Committee on Military Affairs that plans for the future organization of the army cannot be seriously considered until after the peace conference. The while future military policy of the United States must depend upon the outcome at Versailles. Argument and bickering now in relation to the military program of the future can only serve partisan, sectional or personal interests. Until the new European policies are definitely fixed, no one can foresee what is best for America.

In the same category of problems that must be left for consideration in the light of future developments is that which is growing from the friction between West Point men in the officers' corps and the newer men from the training camps.

If the sort of peace which Mr. Wilson is trying to bring about cannot be realized, the country is sure to be stunned by the immensity of the militaristic program which will be forced upon it by necessity. It is the unfortunate habit of men in the House and in the Senate, as well as the man in the street, to speak and think of military preparedness in terms of the present. As a matter of fact, military nations of the future will have to draw heavily on all their wealth, on the population, on their supplies of raw materials and on their energies to maintain the accelerated pace which scentific evolution and machine methods make necessary in the war game. If there is to be no settled peace, we shall certainly require a vast standing army and we shall have need of all the best officers who served through the recent war. Otherwise there should and doubtless will be a plan for the promotion of all officers on their merits, whether they are West Pointers or not.

WILL FRANCE DISINHERIT HER OWN IDEA?

From the New Republic.

President Wilson is asking France to accept an idea which belongs to France more than it does to America. In the end she will not refuse. Sooner or later France will officially take back into her arms her own child. The appropriate capital for the league of nations is not Constantinople, or The Hague or Berne or any international District of Columbia, but Paris, the defense of which has just required millions of British, Australian, Canadian and American democrats to cross the seas. It was in Paris that modern men first conceived democracy as a faith for which they were commanded, if necessary, to die. Most Americans under the President's leadership are coming to conceive the league of free nations also as a faith, and the kind of faith which brings with it certainty of spirit if not safety of body. They have the support of many Frenchmen. In the end France, too, will seek its certitudes not by pursuing an egocentric political realism but, as she formerly did, in pursuing, regardless of risk, those political ideals which she can share with all mankind.

THE POE ANNIVERSARY.

ONE hundred and ten years ago today, in Boston, was born Edgar Allan Poe, perhaps the greatest and certainly the most pathetic figure in American literature. The hundredth anniversary of Poe's birth, which was observed in American literary quarters in 1909, was so dwarfed by the Lincoln centennial celebration that many lovers of Poe were unaware that there was a celebration in memory of their great idol. True, the literary journals of 10 years ago all contained essays of more or less importance on Poe and his work, yet the average American reader, who concerns himself little with biographies or criticism, passed by the event without a pause in his daily grind. Since 1909, however, a number of new Poe verses have been discovered, some of which could scarcely bear the dignity of being called poems; and in addition certain new facts concerning Poe and his writings have come to light; and several very important critical estimates of his genius have appeared, so that it seems appropriate, on this date, to recount briefly these recent acquisitions to our knowledge of the unfortunate author of "The Raven."

For many years it was thought that all documents relating to Poe had been carefully and exhaustively examined, but the discovery, several years ago, of the Ellis and Allan papers found in the Library of Congress by that eminent Poe authority, Mr. J. H. Whitty of Richmond, Va., have upset this opinion and the literary world has set about amending its estimation of Poe and his work.

It was in the offices of the firm of Ellis and Allan, in Richmond, that Poe spent what must have been two very cramped and narrow months of his young manhood, dreaming of a career in literature—dreams that were sadly at variance with the hopes and plans of his fosterfather, John Allan, partner in the firm, and a man of decidedly commercial instincts.

The documents of this firm, which, prior to their discovery by Mr. Whitty, reposed contentedly, for many years, upon the shelves of the Library of Congress, comprise a collection of about 450 volumes and portfolios, containing the letters and accounts of the business from 1795 to 1889. By these papers much light is shed upon Poe's early career, the most puzzling period of his life.

Among the letters found are two that indicate emphatically that young Edgar Poe was not so entirely abandoned by his kinsfolk, after his adoption by John Allan, as some of his biographers would have us believe.

There is an interesting letter to Poe from a friend, Edward G. Crump. It is dated March 25, 1827, and was evidently received by Ellis and Allan after Poe had left Richmond. On the reverse side it is indorsed, "To E. A. Poe, alias Henri le Rennet." It was not known, until this letter was discovered, that Poe had ever used such an alias as "Henri le Rennet."

Other papers indicate that Poe was 18 years of age when he first offered his verses for publication. There are also documents which show the influence of Goldsmith upon the mind of the youthful poet.

Among the verses discovered in Washington by Mr. Whitty, and published in a new volume, "The Complete Poems of Edgar Allan Poe" (Houghton, Mifflin Co.), edited by him, are two of fair poetical proportions, though none of those found can even approach the standard of Poe's best work. These two poems are "Life's Vital Stream" and "Stanzas." The former contains the beginning of Poe's lifelong poetical wail of despair in the following lines:

See, see, my soul, her agony!
  See how her eyeballs glare!
Those shrieks, delightful harmony,
  Proclaim her deep despair.

This "beautiful misery" is typically Poe. And in direct contrast are the lines in "Stanzas:"

  The fullness of a cultured mind.
  Stored with the wealth of bard and sage
Which error's glitter cannot blind,
  Lustrous in youth, undimmed in age.

It is quite possible that the latter lines were written under the healthful influence of Goldsmith, and antedate "Life's Vital Stream."

In addition to these remarkable finds by Mr. Whitty, which certainly stimulate the study of Poe, there have appeared, since 1909, two critical studies of him, by foreign authors, that certainly deserve mention here, one a scintillating review, published in 1910, by that brilliant Englishman Arthur Ransome, that is probably the best yet written; and the other a short but exceedingly sympathetic essay, published in 1916, by the celebrated German poet and critic, Hans Heinz Ewers. These two critics have struck high notes in their estimates of Poe.

Ransome says: "In reading and rereading his collected works I learned that, perfect as his best things are, he has another title to immortality. It became clear that Poe's brain was more stimulating than his art, and that the tales and poems by which he is known were but the by-products of an unconcluded search. Throughout Poe's life he sought a philosophy of beauty that should also be a philosophy of life. He did not find it, and the unconcluded nature of his search is itself sufficient to explain his present vitality. Seekers rather than finders stimulate the imagination."

And Ewers sums up his sympathetic study with this: "After a hundred years they will gather the rotting bones; they will erect a mighty monument and write thereon—'The United States to its great Poet.'

"Let them keep the bones in America. We (in Europe) will listen to the Poet's soul, which lives in the nightingales' throats in the Alhambra."

The mere mention of the nationalities of Ransome and Ewers is evidence that today Poe sways an infinitely greater and more cosmopolitan audience than he did 10 years ago, for these two criticisms are the most laudatory that have ever come out of the old world, with the possible exception of that by Baudelaire, who, many years ago, did in France, for Poe, what Ransome in England and Ewers in Germany, have recently done. But France has long loved Poe, and her early appreciation is a golden link in the chain of world circling fame.

Thus Poe's horizon has broadened and he has become much more than ever a refining influence upon the literature of the world; thus does Poe, the immortal, on the one hundred and tenth anniversary of his birth, gain the fame that should have been his when he was given the princely sum of $10 for the manuscript of his masterpiece—"The Raven."

Russia Should Be Given Representation at Peace Council, Says Dr. Dillon

She Fought Loyally for Allies for Three Years and Gave Her Soldiers Without Stint and Must Not Be Abandoned in Her Hour of Need.

By E. J. DILLON,

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Jan. 11.

THE many sided but disconnected movement to substitute a moral relationship of nations for a latent state of warfare known as equilibrium is still waiting for the last touches to its appointed organ. Meanwhile, the subtle skill of old-world diplomacy is working hard to revive, under specious names, its lost causes, while the new-world policy, naively ignoring historical forces and secular prejudices, is boldly reaching out toward modes of ideal arrangements which take no account of concrete circumstances.

Generous idealists, on the one hand, are pitted against old diplomatic stagers on the other hand, and both are secretly endeavoring to conclude hastily made bargains before the conference, which is supposed to ignore these preliminaries, actually begins its work.

I have been present at several of these interesting meetings and endeavored to gauge in advance the distance which will separate what Americans, with their imperfect historic sense, have designed from what the conference, under the urge of haste, will ultimately achieve. My first impression is that if things go forward as they are moving today the outcome will fall far short of reasonable expectations. The first striking difference between the transatlantic idealists and the Old World politicians lies in the appreciation of haste and the future bases of European state system.

British Locksmiths Arrive.

The former contend that the territorial and political balance of forces has utterly broken down and must be definitely scrapped in favor of a league of nations, whereas the latter assert, on the contrary, that the principle of the equlibrium, far from having spent its force, affords the only groundwork of international stability and requires further to be intensified. The manner in which these divergent maxims would be applied is thrillingly interesting, but had best form the subject of another dispatch, dealing with what may be termed the esoteric side of the peace conference.

In material preparations for meetings of the congress the headway being made is perceptible to all. For example, special representatives have arrived in Paris from a well-known firm of British lock and key manufacturers, to make sure that boxes, trunks, safes and other receptacles for documents are trustworthy. The Hotel Majestic is divided into two very unequal sections, one comprising certain parts of the ground floor and the other all the remainder. Access to the latter portion, which is reserved exclusively for members of the British mission, will be denied every caller, without exception.

The rooms in the palace of the Foreign Office in the Quai d'Orsay are also almost ready to receive the new world architects, whose task is fully as momentous and will become as historic as that of the enterprising builders in the land of Shinar, who, when the whole earth was of one language, undertook to build a city and tower whose top might reach to heaven. Soft, sumptuous carpets, gilded chairs, heavy, square armchairs, artistic marble tables and wonderful damasks, which have so often figured in former descriptions of brilliant assemblies since the early days of the third Napoleon, are once more become the theme of articles in Paris papers. Some connoisseurs of these objects demand that the sumptuous carpets of the Balkan committee room be covered or removed, in order to allow the plenipotentiaries of those heroic countries to smoke cigarettes at ease, even when absorbed by passionate debates.

A Mysterious Atmosphere.

The room in which the plenary sittings will be held is already provided with a horseshoe table, capable of accommodating 120 delegates. The number of windows admitting the sunshine is disproportionately few, as compared with the vastness of the apartment, so that the light is appropriately subdued as it is mysterious and diplomatically discreet.

Russia's claims and, incidentally, her qualifications to appear by delegates, will be left until the British Premier's views have been announced and it is all the more natural since neither Polish nor Rumanian delegates have yet been appointed. The Russians are not overanxious about the conference, feeling as they do that the logic of circumstances is considerably more forcible than the logic of diplomacy and that the delegates resemble bills of exchange, whereas the concrete values behind them are contributed by the peoples. This view is intelligible to those who judge it from the standpoint of history.

Russia's peoples having fought heroically for the allied cause, sacrificing more men and vaster interests than any other belligerent, she is become the victim of zeal and devotion in which she literally flamed herself away, and now these services are no longer appreciated at their real value, hence her former allies, who, at one time, were prepared to swerve considerably, even from their fundamental principles, to humor her caprice, are now unwilling to stretch a point to save her from bitter enemies whom her loyalty and selfishness created within her own gates. If Russia's frontiers and if her destinies are to be determined by the great Powers without obtaining her assent and without giving her a hearing, she will abide by the consequences just so long as she must.

Russians Prepare Data.

Under the general direction of a council of eminent Russian statesmen foregathered in Paris under the chairmanship of Prince Lvoff and composed of former Ministers, former Ambassadors and parliamentary politicians, a number of committees and subcommittees are working strenuously preparing reports on territorial, economic, financial and political problems which interest Russia and seem to deserve due weight in the deliberations of the world's delegates. It is more than probable that the materials will be laid before the conference not by anonymous committee, but by authorized spokesmen, invested with powers of delegates, and this can come to pass only if the Russian Governments, now formed and united in spirit among themselves, are formally recognized by the Cabinets of the great Powers.

I hope I am not revealing any of the momentous spirits which the secrecy office, with its patent locks and keys, has been instituted to preserve from profaning the light of publicity when I state that this question of officially proclaiming Russia's various Governments as the legitimate organ of the nation and recognizing the committee of united Russians, which exists and works here in Paris as its legimate representative in Western Europe, is now ripe for solution.

Moderating Our Expectations.

As the day draws near for the work of the conference to begin, the exhortations of its own more clear-visioned spokesmen to moderate our expectations and broaden the temper of our criticisms grow more and more insistent. These chilling whiffs from the forest of diplomatic pens have a sobering effect on those who stand close enough to the quarter whence they blow. At the same time it is only fair to recognize that despite the relatively long period that has elapsed since the armistice European Governments are still unready to solve the tremendous problems affecting 23 states and the resettlement of the political world, which is still torn asunder by bitter feuds and split up by conflicting national interests and racial hate. The only real antidotes against these virulent poisons lie in psychological and ethnical domains, which are inaccessible to political physicians.

This conviction is apparently gaining ground in those restricted circles, which radiate official views and already press organs as influential as Le Temps are putting their opinion on record that "it cannot be gainsaid that the coming peace treaty will clinch all questions to which the war has imparted actuality or that for many years to come it may be necessary deliberately to decide and then revise decisions before fixing definitely the status of the German and Russian lands, to say nothing of others."

If this announcement specifies merely that no arrangement by the conference can be semi-paternal, it is a bald truism, but if it portends as seems more probable, that the work of the conference will be a mere torso, the repercussion of this failure on the interested states and especially on the taxpaying masses will be far more resonant and more sinister. Already new names are being coined for old institutions and complaints are heard from the champions of Wilsonian ideals that evil-sounding terms like "strategic frontiers" are being transferred into "legitimate guarantees," and states which have claims to vindicate argue that they cannot do better than tread in the footsteps of the great Powers; whether the policy of these are inspired by a desire to realize the league of nations or by a resolve to secure legitimate guarantees against future agression.

To a prosaic outsider who watches the circuitous march of the world's trustees toward two different goals it seems that final results would be unsatisfactory if a definite choice were courageously made and acted upon. At the same time it is pertinent to remember that mankind can be led to such self-abnegation as the pursuit of a better goal calls for only by ideas which adequately express their own highest social aspirations.

Victory Ball Is Being Planned by Prominent Members of St. Louis Society to Be Held at the Hotel Statler on Feb. 14, Which Bids Fair to Outrival Anything of the Kind in Former Years.

SOCIETY is anticipating with a marked degree of pleasure a large Victory Ball which is to be given in celebration of the ending of the war and which will in a measure serve as a fitting start of the after-war reconstruction era of the social world. This affair is to be given on February 14 at the Hotel Statler and bids fair to rival any similar event of its kind in former years. It is being sponsored by the Board of the St. Louis Maternity Hospital which numbers among its membership many of the most prominent women of the fashionable set. The board includes Mmes. Allen T. West, J. Harrison Steedman, Dwight Davis, John Holliday, Harold Kauffman, J. L. D. Morrison, Eugene Cuendet, Ewing Hill, Benoist Carton, William J. Lemp, Orion Willis, Benjamin Chapman, Lon Hocker, Edgar Niggeman, Emmet Myers, Firmin Desloge Jr., Clarance Stratton, George Marion Brown, Wallace Simmons, E. D. Nims, Arthur W. Lambert, Herbert Parker, Kenneth Green, Scott Porter, Kennett Burnes, August A. Busch, Alvin Goldman, Fidelio Sharp, John C. Roberts, J. D. Wooster Lambert, Thomas May, Harry Lesser, Dewey Hickey, J. I. Epstein, W. S. Thompson, Adolph Singer, John T. Milliken and William C. McBride.

SEVERAL thousand invitations have been issued and acceptances will be registered to the capacity of the ballroom and many novel features are being planned to lend variety and charm to the evening.

Every entertainment that the Maternity Board has undertaken has been a marked success and society is still talking about the fashion show at the Coliseum several years ago, given by the board members, when prominent women posed in made-in-St. Louis garments and over $6000 was cleared for the hospital. It was this same organization which first made fashionable the large society benefit bridge parties which have proved a boon to so many charity boards that must raise funds. The series of moving picture shows last spring was another undertaking which added many dollars to the hospital's working capital and with such signal successes to their credit in the past, everything points to the victory ball being the biggest social event of the season.

THE musical tea, which, owing to the influenza ban, was obliged to be postponed several times, will take place tomorrow afternoon in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler at 4 o'clock, and the numerous postponements has but enhanced the anticipated pleasure of those who will attend. This affair is being given for the benefit of the social service department of the St. Louis Children's Hospital, of which department Mrs. Philip Bond Fouke is chairman. The St. Louis Children's Hospital has as its officers Mrs. Robert McKittrick Jones, president; Mrs. Louis Marion McCall and Mrs. John Fowler, vice president; Mrs. George D. Markham, treasurer; Mrs. Louis La Beaume, recording secretary, and Mrs. Tom Meston, corresponding secretary. The institution is nonsectarian in its management and its benefactions and its work is of much importance in ministering to the needs of the community.

Last year a similar musical tea was given, which proved so successful that a repetition was deemed advisable and the well-chosen program tomorrow will include Max Steindel, cellist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra; Miss Florence Traubel and Rudolph Gruen. The Committee on Arrangements for the affair comprises Mrs. Louis Marion McCall, chairman; Mmes. Philip Bond Fouke, George Warren Brown, John Fowler, D. B. Hussey, J. W. Scudder, J. Herndon Smith, A. R. Smyth, Matt Reynolds, Herbert L. Parker, George D. Markham, H. J. Pettingill, William J. Lemp, Miss Mary Lionberger and others.

ONE of the notable out-of-town weddings of interest to St. Louis society was the marriage on Wednesday of Miss Barbara Norman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradford Norman of Newport, R. I., to Daniel William Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Jones of 45 Portland place. The ceremony was solemnized at high noon at St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Portsmouth, which is near the Norman estate. The bride was attended by Miss Alexandra Dolan of Philadelphia as maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Misses Mary D. Jones and Frances Jones, sisters of the bridegroom; Miss Dorothy Willard of Newport, Miss Ellen Williams of Camden, S. C.; Miss Barbara Loew of New York, Miss Dorothy Collins and Miss Suzanne Pierson of New York.

The best man was Lieut. Frank James, U. S. N., R. F. The ushers were Lieut. Bradford Norman, brother of the bride; Lieut. John K. Brachvogel and Ensigns Donald Bayne, Arthur L. Hickman, Marion Niedringhaus, Duncan Houser and Field Goltra, U. S. N., R. F. After the ceremony there was a breakfast and reception at Brook Farm, the home of the bride's parents, after which the couple started by automobile for the first part of their honeymoon journey. Mr. Jones was a former Ensign in the Naval Reserves and it was while stationed at Newport that he met his bride, who is a prominent member of Newport society. She is quite a noted sportswoman and active in war work, and last summer was a farmerette of the Volunteer Land Service League. Mr. Jones will bring his bride to St. Louis to reside.

ANOTHER interesting wedding of Wednesday was that of Miss Annie Maude Kennedy to Ernest Eddy, which was very quietly celebrated at 5:20 o'clock in the afternoon at the residence of the bride's father, Samuel G. Kennedy of 4947 Maryland place. Owing to recent mourning in the bride's family only relatives were present, and all the arrangements very simply carried out. Miss Margaret Kennedy was her sister's maid of honor, and only attendant, and the bridegroom's brother-in-law, William Bedford Turman, served as best man, with the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt of St. John's M. E. Church officiating. The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and is related to a number of well-known families here, her mother having been Miss Mary R. Kennard before her marriage. Mr. Eddy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eddy of 6158 Washington boulevard, and is a graduate of Yale. After a honeymoon trip the couple will be at home after March 1 at 4947 Maryland place.

THE marriage of Miss Alma Tiemann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Tiemann, 3029 Shenandoah avenue, to Allen G. Jehle, son of Mrs. Johanna Jehle, was one of the weddings yesterday of interest, especially in South Side circles. The ceremony took place at 7 o'clock at the residence of the brides' parents, the Rev. Ludd Spivey, cousin of the bride officiating and there were no attendants. The bride's gown was of white satin heavily embroidered in imported crystal beads. Her tulle veil was held over the coiffure with a cap of real duchess lace, which is a family heirloom and was caught with orange blossoms, and formed a long court train. She carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. A small reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. Jehle and his bride departed to spend their honeymoon in the south. On their return they will reside temporarily with the bridegroom's mother, at 3512 Halliday avenue. The bride's brother, Walter Tiemann, who was in active service with the marine corps, is now at a rest camp at Toul, France.

The bride was graduated from Washington University in 1915, and recently returned from a 10 months' sojourn in California. The bridegroom is also an alumnus of Washington University, and was graduated from the Engineering Department the same year. He recently received his discharge from an officers' training camp.

AND still another wedding of yesterday was that of Miss Elsie M. Eyssel of 3619 Lafayette avenue, to Lieut. Webb L. Kammerer, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Kammerer, 5537 Waterman avenue, which took place last evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. Eyssell, the Rev. Dr. John L. Roemer of Lindenwood College officiating. The young couple were unattended, with the exception of the bride's little niece, Virginia Eyssell, who was flower girl. She wore a white frock and carried a basket of pink roses. The bride wore a gown of white satin and tulle and duchess lace, with court train of satin and a veil of tulle. Only members of the two families were present and Lieut. Kammerer and his bride departed for their honeymoon trip immediately after the ceremony. After Feb. 1 they will be at home at 3619 Lafayette avenue. Lieut. Kammerer recently received his discharge from the balloon corps, at Arcadia, Cal., after completing his training at Fort Omaha.

THE coming week has few weddings scheduled, and one of the most important is that of Miss Ada Luedinghaus, who will become the bride of Clarence J. Buckman of Langhorne, Pa. The ceremony will take place Saturday morning, followed by a bridal breakfast. The couple will be unattended and the Rev. Martin S. Sommers of the Grace Lutheran Church will officiate. Miss Luedinghaus is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Luedinghaus of Gast place and was graduated from Mary Institute several years ago, followed by a year of European travel.

The prospective bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and is president pro tem of the Pennsylvania State Senate. After April 1 the couple will be at home in Langhorne, Pa., following a honeymoon trip.

league which received 50 per cent of the profits for its St. Louis welfare work. This welfare work will go on as it did before the Allies' Shop was opened. Members of the Junior League in addition to participation in many war and patriotic drives, have carried on uninterruptedly for several years such admirable public service agencies as the lunch room for children at 817 North Nineteenth street, where nutritious food is served at less than cost prices and a work shop for convalescents at Barnes Hospital. The latter is an interesting place to visit with beautiful woven bags and blankets, toys and furniture, on display as examples of the work taught the patients who are paid for their time while convalescing and learning under an experienced arts and crafts teacher. Liberal contributions to the St. Louis School for Reconstruction Aides and the St. Louis Children's Aid Society have been made by the Junior League, and the members for several years have assisted Miss Gregg in social settlement work, and have also done much to relieve conditions among the poor blind of the city.

The Allies' Shop which will close on Feb. 1 will have an enormous rummage sale to close out the stock. However, spring hats are much in demand, and if any one has any last year's ones to dispose of please take them to the shop, 608 North Broadway, or notify the shop so they can be called for.

An event of decided interest will be the reading of The Players at the Aritists' Guild, Wednesday evening, of Gilbert Murray's translation of the Medea by Euripedes, under the direc of Otto Heller. The readings is for members of the Players and their guests, and the cast is as follows: Mmes. George Blackman, David O'Niel, George Norton, F. B. Clarke, Percival Chubb, Henry Boeckler, Robert Kissack, J. A. Rouveyrol, William Schevill, Lelia Hattersley, Lodge, Misses Mary McColl, Pearl Gehner, Mary White, Rev. Russell J. Wilbur, Percival Chubb, George Blackman and Percy Werner.

The engagement of Miss Sophie Roever, daughter of Mrs. S. D. Roever of 6802 Waterman avenue, to Carl G. Barth of Philadelphia has been made known. Miss Roever is a graduate of Washington University School of Social Economy. She is a professor of sociology at Washington University and is a prominent member of the Wednesday and Washington University clubs. Mr. Barth is from Norway and is dean of efficiency engineers of America and has been engaged in Government work since the beginning of the war. The wedding will take place in the near future and the couple will reside in Buffalo, N. Y.

The engagement of Miss Cornelia Souther, daughter of Mrs. E. E. Souther of 5118 Westminster place, to Dr. Thomas Craig of Brooklyn, N. Y., was announced last week. Miss Souther was educated at Mary Institute and also attended Smith College. She is very active in Y. W. C. A. work and is corresponding secretary of the board of that organization and charter member. Dr. Craig is a brother of Mrs. Meredith Jones of this city and is at present visiting here. The wedding will take place upon the return of Miss Souther's sister, Miss Edith Souther, who has been engaged in war work in France since last April.

An engagement announced last week in Dallis, Tex., is that of Miss Florence Frees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Frees of the Buckingham Hotel, to Frederick Mallison of Dallas. The news was disclosed at an informal afternoon reception given by the sister of the prospective bride, Mrs. Walter S. Liebman. Whom Miss Frees and her mother are at present visiting. Her fiance recently received his discharge from an officers' training camp. No date has been set for the wedding.

The card party to be given under the sponsorship of the student body of Hosmer Hall, in behalf of St. Louis Auxiliary of the French Red Cross, Hospital No. 106, located at Millau, Aveyron, France, will take place next Saturday afternoon.

This hospital has been doing reconstruction work under the direction of Mme. Emile Prevot, and the girls of Hosmer Hall have pledged themselves to aid in this work.

The party will be held at 2:30 p. m. at the Planters Hotel ballroom. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. F. V. Dubrouillet, 5123 Westminster place, Hosmer Hall on Wydown boulevard or at the hotel.

Among the patronesses are:

L. S. Mitchell, Geo. H. Williams, F. V. Dubrouillet, C. P. Headly, G. T. Williams, G. W. Schwartz, J. L. Morrison, Clifford Albers, Hector Pasmezoglu, C. L. Allen, Harry Hazelton, E. N. Birge, A. D. Chappell, W. M. Matthews, W. W. Butts, K. V. Moll, W. Schade, R. A. Heist, Anna Donehy Boone, Thos. H. Cobbs, Geo. H. Camp and Miss Mary J. White.

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Allen of 5909 Horton place to Charles L. Bayha, associate secretary of the local Railroad Y. M. C. A., took place Wednesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. "hut," with the Rev. L. W. McCleary, pastor of the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church officiating. Miss Florence Harvey was the bride's only attendant and V. S. Behymer served as best man. It was fitting that the ceremony should have taken place at the "hut," where Mr. Bayha has been so active in caring for the men in service who have been guests there. After Feb. 1 the couple will reside at the Eugene Field Apartments at 4331 Olive street.

The St. Louis chapter of the Italian War Relief Fund of America has decided to close its workrooms on Feb. 20, after a most successful run, and this organization has done much to add to the creditable war work for which St. Louis women have become famed. The chapter has a small surplus of funds on hand, which will be put into the shipment of two carloads of food and garment to the Italian refugees which will be sent from St. Louis March 1. The work at the headquarters workrooms will close at noon on Feb. 20, and it is then planned to have an afternoon tea for the many friends and workers who have served so faithfully. Mrs. Guido Pataleoni, who is chairman of the workroom, urges all workers to be present up to the last day of the closing, so that work on the garments for the carload shipments to the refugee may not lag. This chapter has already sent 14 large boxes of garments and knitted wear to Her Majesty, Queen Elenor, Royal House, Rome, which have been distributed among the Italian war sufferers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Wolffe of 5696 Kingsbury boulevard have returned from New York, where they went to spend the holiday season with Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Stromberg, formerly of St. Louis.

There will be a euchre, 500 and dance given on Wednesday evening at St. Mark's School Hall, Page and Academy avenues, for the benefit of the Stann Creek Mission. Mrs. Kate Leahey O'Neill of 6007 Clemens avenue has charge of the affair.

One of the largest patriotic events of the season will be the card party to be given at the Marine Corps League at the Planters Hotel, Jan. 31, at 2 o'clock. Mrs. James A. Waterworth is chairman of the Ticket Committee, with Mrs. Harry Wagoner, chairman of arrangements; Mrs. Harry White of the prizes, Miss Adelaide Kelley, invitation, and Mrs. Lionel Bel Moses general chairman.

THE EASIEST WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—ADV.

"What Will Save His Hair?" Quick Action Needed

But It Can Be Done Says Man of Much Hair Knowledge—A Simple Inexpensive Home Treatment

Thin-Haired Men Urged Not to Delay Parisian Sage Is Just What Is Needed.

Thousands of men and women are growing hairless every day and don't know the reason why. This is indeed a pity, says a specialist, because loss of hair usually comes from neglect.

Few of us get bald in a day, and we all have ample warning when our hair is thinning out.

Parisian Sage is a most efficient hair invigorator, but to immediately stop any further loss of hair and quickly start a new growth, it must be rubbed into the scalp so the starved hair roots can really absorb it and get the vital stimulation so badly needed. You will surely be delighted with the first application, for your hair and scalp will look and feel 100 per cent better.

Parisian Sage is not expensive. It's a scientific preparation that supplies all hair needs—a clean, non-sticky, antiseptic liquid that is sold at drug and toilet counters everywhere with guarantee to give you perfect satisfaction or money refunded.

Good-looking hair is half the battle in any man's or woman's personal appearance. Neglect means dull, thin, lifeless hair and finally baldness, while a little attention now insures thick and lustrous hair for years to come. No matter what your hair troubles, try a Parisian Sage massage tonight—you will not be disappointed.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Jiffy-Jell

With Salad Flavor

Jiffy-Jell desserts come in many fruit flavors. But Lime Jiffy-Jell — flavored with lime fruit — makes the best salad jell.

It is tart and green. The flavor comes in liquid form, sealed in a vial.

Serve with your salad. Or mix in vegetables, cooked or uncooked, before the Jiffy-Jell cools. Leftovers will do. Or mix in meat scraps and make a meat loaf.

Try Loganberry Jiffy-Jell for a dessert, and Lime for a salad jell. One package serves six. These quick, economical dainties serve a big need today.

The Tenth Ward Improvement Association will meet this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Fountain Hall, Broadway and Chippewa street, to discuss, among other things, the city's "bargain" with the United Railways Co. and the invocation of the referendum on prohibition. St. Louis Senators and Congressmen and about 52 business and civic organizations have been invited to attend.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood. The pores of the skin are a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—ADV.

SPANISH INFLUENZA MORE DEADLY THAN WAR

Said That Epidemic Cost More Lives Than American Loss in Battle. Danger Not Over. Great Care Necessary to Prevent Further Outbreak.

The appalling ravages of Spanish Influenza in this country are perhaps best realized by the statement recently made, that more deaths have resulted in little more than a month from this disease than through our whole eighteen months' participation in the battles of the European War.

Our greatest danger now, declare authorities, is the great American tendency to forget easily and to believe the peril is over. Competent authorities claim the coming of cold weather is very apt to bring a return of this disease, and there should be no let-up throughout the winter months of the following easily observed precautions, remembering that Influenza is far easier to prevent than cure.

Influenza is a crowd disease. Avoid crowds as much as possible. Influenza germs spread when ignorant or careless persons sneeze or cough without using a handkerchief. Cover up each cough or sneeze. Do not spit on the floor, sidewalk, in street cars or public places. Avoid the use of common drinking cups and roller towels in public places. Breathe some reliable germicidal and antiseptic air to destroy the germs that do find lodgement in your nose and throat.

Remember, no safer precaution against Influenza could be employed in this manner than to get from the nearest drug store a complete Hyomei Outfit, consisting of a bottle of the Pure Oil of Hyomei and a little vest-pocket hard rubber inhaling device, into which a few drops of the oil are poured. You should carry this Inhaler about with you during the day, and each half hour or so put it in your mouth and draw deep breaths of its pure, healing, germ-killing air into the passages of your nose, throat and lungs.

By destroying germs before they actually begin work in your blood, you may make yourself practically immune to infection.

All these suggestions about Spanish Influenza are equally true in the prevention of colds, catarrh of nose and throat, bronchitis and even pneumonia. Don't become careless. Do your part. Keep the germs away. You may save yourself a serious illness and the loss of several weeks' work.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Vanish

(Helps to Beauty)

A safe, reliable home-treatment for the quick removal of superfluous hairs from your face or neck is as follows: Mix a stiff paste with some water and powdered delatone, apply to objectionable hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This simple treatment is unfailing and no pain or inconvenience attends its use, but to avoid disappointment be certain you get genuine delatone.—ADV.

'POLLYANNA' RETURNS, 'EXPERIENCE' LIKEWISE

New Leading Players in Standard Attractions—Annette Kellerman at Orpheum.

"Pollyanna" will demonstrate the "glad game," and the youth in "Experience" will repeat his garish pilgrimage, this week, for such St. Louis playgoers as may not heretofore have seen either of these standard attractions, or may wish for one more view of them. "Pollyanna," which is to open tonight at the American Theater, began coming here while the Olympic Theater was still in business. "Experience," which is to be at the Shubert-Jefferson, opened the Garrick three seasons ago, and has made return visits.

Claire Mesereau is to play the role of Pollyanna, heretofore taken by Patricia Colinge. Frazer Coulter is to play the role of Youth in "Experience," played here formerly by Conrad Nagel.

Next week's plays will be "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," a comedy, at the Shubert-Jefferson; and "Three Faces East," a mystery melodrama of the war, at the American.

Annette Kellerman herself, in a skit termed "An Intimate Revue," will be the Orpheum headliner this week, and will not only do diving stunts, but sing, dance, chatter, walk the tight rope and play musical instruments. According to the press agent, Miss Kellerman is making a farewell tour on the way back to her home, Sydney, Australia.

Other items on the program are Burt Earle, banjoist; Jack Alfred and a troupe in a miniature comedy, "Smile;" and Sylvia Loyal and a company in a French act called "La Charmeuse des Pigeons."

The Columbia's list of attractions for the week is led by Charles Althoff, "Sheriff From Hicksville;" the headliner at the Grand is George Lovett, "the mental marvel;" the Gayety presents "The Bowery Burlesquers," and the Standard "The Big Revue."

CIVILIAN SUIT OR $12.50 FOR DISCHARGED BRITISH SOLDIER

Wise One Takes the Suit, Easily Worth $20—Army Disbandment Is in Full Swing.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Demobilization of the British army is now in full swing. The following classes are being demobilized en bloc here:

Miners, sick and wounded soldiers, convalescents, men over 41 who were called up in the last draft, "pivotal," or leading men in industry, students and teachers.

Soldiers are bringing home vast quantities of luggage. One ship from Holland had 2800 tons of it, including four grand pianos and a beehive, which was overturned and an officer badly stung.

At the Wimbledon station the correspondent saw the working of the demobilization machinery. On arrival the men find a hot meal awaiting them, no matter what the hour of day or night. Each receives a ration book, an unemployment policy, a railway warrant, a pamphlet of good advice, $10, a label for the return of his overcoat and a certificate entitling him to draw pay, and all allowances for 28 days.

Thorough identification of the returning soldier is regarded as important. "You would be surprised," said Gen. Hitchcock, "to know how many Tommies change their identification disks with pals. It's the same in the French army. Why they do it is beyond understanding. We are always burying the wrong man."

The soldier turns over his rifle and accoutrements, but he is permitted to keep his uniform and "tin hat." He must return his army overcoat within a month, receiving $5 for it.

One of the station huts is a tailor shop, where the soldier is given his choice of one of three suits of varying weight and pattern, made to his measurement. If he doesn't want the civilian suit he is given $12.50. The wise soldier takes the suit, for at present prices it would cost him considerably more than $20.

INNING FOR MUSICIANS; CRITIC COMPOSES PIECE

Borowski's "Trois Peintures" to Be Played by Symphony Orchestra.

If musicians have ever been tempted by the strictures of music critics to paraphrase the ejaculation of Job and exclaim, "Oh, that mine enemy would write a composition!" their prayer has been fulfilled by Felix Borowski, Chicago critic, whose "Trois Peintures" will have their first St. Louis performance at the Symphony Orchestra concerts on Friday and Saturday of this week. Borowski, however, is not only a commentator on music, but a professional musician, and has written numerous compositions for orchestra, piano, violin and voice. He is president of the Chicago Musical College, music critic of the Chicago Herald, and writer of the program notes from the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

He was born in England of Slavonic parents in 1872, studied under private masters and completed his tutelage at Cologne. He is the author of a history of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra, now the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

As soloist, Director Zach will bring forward his concertmaster, Michel Gusikoff, who will assist in playing Saint-Saens' Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, No. 3, in B Minor. The program is as follows:

Mozart—
Overture to "Le Nozze di Figaro."
Borowski—
Elegie Symphonique, "Trois Peintures."
(First Time)
Saint-Saens—
Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, No. 3 in B Minor, Op. 61.
Brahms—
Symphony No. 2, in D Major, Op. 73.
I. Allegro non troppo.
II. Adagio non troppo.
III. Allegretto grazioso (quasi Andantino).
IV. Finale: Allegro con spirito.

Steindel "Pop" Soloist.

Another member of the orchestra, H. Max Steindel, leader of the violoncellos, will be the soloist at this afternoon's popular concert, playing the Tschaikowsky "Variations on a Rococo Theme." The program will be:

Zach .... Oriental March
Delibes..Overture to "Le Roi l'a Dit"
Grieg ....Two Norwegian Dances
Tschaikowsky—
Variations on a Rococo Theme, for Violoncello and Orchestra.
Massenet ....Two Entr'Actes
(a) "Le Bois Sacre," from "Roma."
(b) "Sevillana," from "Don Cesar de Bazan."
Clifton ....Adagio for Orchestra
Berlioz—
"Rakoczy March," from "The Damnation of Faust."

Chalmers Clifton is director of the Cecelia Society, in Boston, and is a native of Jackson, Miss. At next Sunday's popular concert the soloist will be Mrs. Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, soprano, wife of the Greek Consul in St. Louis.

LECTURE ON THE EMOTIONAL AND PICTURESQUE IN MUSIC

Ernest R. Kroeger to Illustrate Remarks Tuesday Night With Piano Selections.

A lecture with piano illustrations on "the Emotional and Picturesque in Music," will be given by E. R. Kroeger Tuesday night in the auditorium of the north building of the Washington University Medical School, Euclid and Scott avenues, under the auspices of the Washington University Association.

As examples of the expression of various emotions in music, he will give the following numbers: Religion, Mendelssohn's "Consolation;" joy, Poldini's "Marche Mignonne;" grief; Chopin's "Funeral March;" love, Liszt's "Liebestraum;" sadness, the Adagio from Beethoven's "Moonlight" sonata, and passionate fervor, the Presto from the same sonata.

The picturesque in music will be illustrated by these compositions: Water music, Kroeger's "Egeria;" fire music, the magic fire charm from Wagner's "Die Walkuere;" spring, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song;" slumber, Chopin's "Berceuse;" Indian music, Kroeger's "March of the Indian Phantoms;" childhood scenes, Schumann's "Traumerei;" and fairy music, Kroeger's "Dance of the Elves."

phant, and a tusker at that. I told him what that meant, and how much risk there was, but he said he was willing to face it. That was the Colonel all over. Tell him the risks and he would size them up quietly. If he decided they were worth while, that was all there was to it. He just went ahead and took them without saying another word.

"Well, we found an elephant in a forest on Genia Mountain. We had been hunting for three days, and it was really hard work for a man of the Colonel's bulk in that heat and at that altitude, 11,000 feet. At last I caught sight through a thick bush of elephant hide and a tusk, about 35 feet away, just enough to tell me it was a fine specimen. I pointed it out to the Colonel, and he fired with complete coolness and got the elephant in the ear and dropped him."

"As the shot went off the forest all around roared with trumpetings. We were in the midst of a herd of cows and young bulls, and one of the latter thrust his head through the bushes right over the Colonel's head. I was right behind him and fired at once and bowled it over. Then I rushed up to the Colonel and said: 'Are you all right, sir?' But I could see he was before I spoke. He hadn't turned a hair. At any moment the cows might have blundered through the bush over us, but he never thought of that. He went up to the old chap he had killed and gave it the coupe de grace and then let himself loose. I never saw a man so boyishly jubilant."

For a long time after Roosevelt's return from Africa he was referred to throughout the world often as "Bwana Tumbo." That was the name given to him by the natives of Africa, and means "Big Chief."

His Favorite "Swear" Word.

It was known of Roosevelt that he had a quick temper. He could use mighty harsh words in the heat of passion. But his strongest expressions when he was not excited were "By Godfrey!" and "By Jove!"

Col. Roosevelt liked to pick out someone in his audience and talk straight to one person when making a speech in public. This often embarrassed the person selected. Formerly he always began with, "Ladies and gentlemen, and you"—— filling in the name of the particular body he was addressing. Of late years, however, "My fellow citizens" was his favorite introduction.

Roosevelt's fondness for his Rough Riders was proverbial. Many stories are told of his custom of neglecting others for them. Thus Senator Bard of California took a constituent to see Roosevelt when he was President. The friend had served in the Rough Riders.

"Mr. President," began Bard, "I want to present my friend"——

"Why, hello, Jim!" the President broke in. "How are you?"

And for 10 minutes the President and Jim talked while Bard stood neglected. As the two were leaving Roosevelt said: "By the way, Jim, come up to dinner tonight and bring Bard with you."

Roosevelt generally was credited with having a very poor sense of humor, and when he tried to be funny the result invariably was sad. The so-called "famous Secretary Shaw joke" is repeated to emphasize this point. Roosevelt told Shaw during the coal strike settlement that he would send him back to "de mines" (Des Moines). Shaw came from Iowa.

Col. Roosevelt was noted all his life for the violence of his exercises, going in for hard riding and boxing, and it was his devotion to the latter sport that resulted in his being blinded in the left eye.

Although it was back in 1905 that the accident occurred, the fact that Roosevelt was blinded did not become known until about a year ago, when one day he told newspaper men about it.

"The last boxing I did was in Washington. I boxed with my aids most of the time, but one day a young Captain of artillery came along and broke some blood vessels in my left eye. I have never been able to see out of my left eye since, although I don't think many people know it."

Later Col. Daniel T. Morgan of the 310th Field Artillery admitted that he might have been the "young Captain" whose fist caused the damage. And Col. Roosevelt was quoted as saying Col. Morgan was the man. Morgan said he knew nothing about it until Roosevelt made it public.

James Bliss Townsend, who was born in Oyster Bay and had been a friend of Roosevelt from boyhood, told at a dinner of the Draco Club recently that he had gone to Col. Roosevelt and had asked him what he would have done in the Lusitania case.

Col. Roosevelt, according to Mr. Townsend, said that hindsight, of course, was easier to show than foresight, but that if he had been President he would have sent for Von Bernstorff immediately after the advertisements warning passengers not to travel on the Lusitania were printed in the newspapers. He said he would have asked if the advertisements were official, and if he had been told they were he would have given the German Ambassador and all of his staff two hours to get out and would have forced them to take passage on the Lusitania on what turned out to be her last voyage. Col. Roosevelt added:

"I am sure the Lusitania would not have been sunk had I been the President then."

Glimpses of Character.

Capt. George A. Lung of the Medical Corps of the Navy was in Washington while Col. Roosevelt was President and accompanied him on several trips, during which he says a great deal of the President's intimate character was revealed to him. He was with him when the Colonel's carriage was run into by a trolley outside Pittsfield, Sept. 3, 1902, and a secret service man in the carriage was killed.

"The car was filled with people," says the Captain, "who were on their way to the country club, to give the President a farewell cheer as he left the town. The President was thrown out and landed on his knees. I helped him to rise and gently squeezed his chest to see if any ribs were broken. He resented the action and asked to be left alone.

"Then he walked over to the motorman, who had run him down and told him that if the collision was an accident it was excusable, but that if it were due to carelessness it was damnable. That was the only time I ever heard him utter a profane word.

"When the American fleet went

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—ADV.

How to Keep Strong and Healthy

Thinks Epidemic of "Flu" Found Many With Low Vitality. Matter of Precaution—Take Tonic of Iron, Herbs and Roots.

If your health is perfect this may not interest you. If your health is not perfect, logically you are either sick or "partially sick." If sick, you need a doctor's advice and medicine. If "partially sick" you surely will benefit by taking a real medicine tonic, containing no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. If you are weak, nervous, tired, sluggish and get no strength from your food you need a tonic.

If neuralgia pains, headache, backache, stomach distress assail you—a tonic is your crying need. If irritable, hysterical, sleepless and you worry and fret without reason you need a tonic. If you are thin, anemic, "bloodless" and ill nourished; if you catch cold too easily; if you tire with slight exertion and you are melancholy because of your inability to live and enjoy life as others do, surely a tonic of iron, root and herb extracts will help you.

Thousands like you, have found strength and cheerfulness by taking three grain Cadomene Tablets, the tried formula of a good physician.

If "partially sick" you may increase your risk of fatal ailments attacking your weakened vitality. Be sensible and wise by toning up your health; right now is the time to begin. Ask your druggist for Cadomene Tablets and take as directed by the label.—ADV.

to Kiel the Kaiser visited the flagship Louisiana and saw the President's photograph hanging in a conspicuous place and, upon leaving, he grandly presented a photograph of himself and said that if he had any preference as to where it should be hung he would select the spot President Roosevelt's picture adorned. The substitution, it is hardly necessary to state, was not made. The late Colonel told us that story with a great deal of relish and laughed heartily at the idea of the Kaiser wanting to take his place."

Half a dozen Senators and Representatives were in the waiting room at the President's office one morning. None of them could get in to see the President, however. Finally a Senator said to Capt. Loeffler: "Go in and see what's holding us up."

Loeffler came back and reported: "The President is giving a reception to the Harvard baseball team."

"Well," said another Senator, "tell him there are a lot of Senators and Representatives here." Loeffler went back and returned.

"What did he say?" chorused the waiting statesmen.

"He said he knew it," replied Loeffler, 'but he told me that Senators and Representatives must be taught their places when a Harvard delegation is about.'

Here is a story that Roosevelt told in the White House after Old Bill Sewall, his Maine guide, had called on him. They were on a moose hunt and were camped out in the woods.

One morning while Roosevelt was trying to keep warm and Bill was chopping wood a moose walked into the clearing. The President grabbed his rifle and fired.

The moose ran a short distance and then fell. Bill laid down his ax and dashed over to the moose.

"You've got him!" he yelled after a short inspection. "How did it happen?"

"Why, I aimed for his breast," the President said.

"First class!" shouted Bill, "first class! You done well. You hit him in the eye."

Dr. Lung's Anecdotes.

A year as physician at the White House enables Capt. George A. Lung, Medical Corps, U. S. N., commanding the New York Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, to recount many anecdotes of Col. Roosevelt. Dr. Lung was detailed to the White House in August, 1902, and remained with the President a year.

"President Roosevelt was always a good patient," said Capt. Lung. "He obeyed orders, though sometimes impatient about being kept in bed. He used to say, 'If I live long enough I will get well.'

"On our trips he used to thrust his head out of the car windows to wave at folk at railroad stations. We cautioned him against the danger of being shot or bombed and he would reply. 'Better put me in a conning tower.'

"In New Hampshire we were going up a steep hill. The Colonel got out and said he would hike it. I followed suit. The others remained in the carriage. He started up the hill at breakneck speed. I had on light patent leather shoes, for three miles we plodded at a high pace. I panted and gasped. My collar wilted. I perspired. It was a pace of four miles an hour.

At the end the Colonel was all in. So was I. But the President exclaimed, 'Great, bully!' I said, 'This exercise ought to be made a test for promotion.' The Colonel thumped his hands together and shouted, 'By George, I'll do it!' And I have an idea that is what inspired his order that army officers go through severe physical tests."

"NEVER GET ME ALIVE," SAYS THE EX-CROWN PRINCE

ership closed its eyes to the truth about our own troops. It wouldn't listen when I reported that my divisions were worn out, tired, used up, cut up, must be drawn out of the line. At great headquarters they didn't want to know the truth. Some of my divisions were reduced to 600 and 800 rifles. Think of that! And I was ordered to kee pthem in line!

"Neither my father nor I would ever have given orders to sink the Lusitania, knowing that there were women and children aboard. My father and I are gentlemen, after all."

I asked the ex-Prince why he left his troops and fled to Holland. After a few seconds of thought he answered:

"Because our Government (meaning the Ebert Government) had deposed me from the command of my army corps."

GIRL WANTS $20,000 FOR ALLEGED BROKEN PROMISE

Declares That When Soldier Was Discharged From Army He Refused to Marry Her.

Miss Della Madden, 1023 Brazean avenue, Maddenville, St. Louis County, yesterday filed suit for $20,000 against Alois J. Beine, 2860 Arlington avenue, alleging that he failed to keep a promise of marriage.

She says that in December, 1917, he proposed to her and she accepted. At the time he was subject to military service and it was the agreement that when he returned to civilian life the marriage ceremony would take place. He was inducted into the service and was sent to Camp Pike. Recently he was discharged from service, but has notified her that he does not intend to marry her, she says.

Her engagement was known to her relatives and friends, and defendant's breaking of it has caused her deep humiliation, she says.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Georgia Hamilton, the wonderful "Movie" girl, who was once thin and frail, says: "BITRO-PHOSPHATE has brought about the magic transformation. I gained 15 pounds and never before felt so well."

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by Judge & Dolph Drug Stores and Enderle Drug Stores, or Johnson Bros.' Drug Co. in St. Louis, and most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

Miss Josephine Davis, reporting her own experience with BITRO-PHOSPHATE, says: "It is remarkable what it did for me. After a few days I began to regain my strength, felt full of life, was able to sleep soundly and all my little troubles seemed to disappear. I gained twelve pounds in four weeks."

Joseph D. Harrigan, former Visiting Specialist to North Eastern Dispensary, says: "Let those who are weak, thin, nervous, anaemic or run down, take a natural, unadulterated strength and tissue building substance such as bitro-phosphate and you will soon see some astonishing results in the increase of nerve energy, strength of body and mind and power of endurance."

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

SERATHOL FOR INDIGESTION

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

Owing to the great variety of stomach ailments and the hundred and one "specifics" for their treatment, it would indeed be a mere chance if the average layman selected a remedy for his own case that would give substantial and lasting benefits; even granting the selected remedy possessed real merit when administered for a specific condition. It is therefore not surprising to find the sufferer from stomach irregularities buying and trying drug after "cure," then another in a vain endeavor to obtain relief.

Recent investigations of the treatment of a large number of cases of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and conditions arising from hyper-acidity of the stomach prove that there is nothing more effective in the treatment of these ailments than ordinary serathol, which may be obtained from Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Enderle Drug Stores or Johnson Bros.' Drug Co. in St. Louis, and all good druggists, at trifling cost. Every sufferer from these complaints has been agreeably surprised at the almost instantaneous relief and subsequent permanent benefit from its use. In most cases of hyperacidity a single dose of serathol produces almost magic relief.

CLEMENCEAU, "THE TIGER," AS HE IS SEEN BY SIMONDS

"and it is an opposition to the conduct of the war, to the mistakes, it is an opposition which wants things done better, that is all."

"But those who want peace?" I asked.

"Who are they?" he queried.

"What would happen, then," I asked, trying to flank movement, "what would happen if someone should advocate peace now, peace without Alsace-Lorraine—a German peace?"

He reflected for a moment and then said, with a softness of voice which was hardly deceptive.

"If anyone should advocate peace now, a German peace, I think he would be shot—but it would be done decently—oh, very decently." The words were in my mind, when Bolo Pasha, prosecuted by the Clemenceau Government, faced a firing squad, for seeking a German peace.

And Caillaux, Too.

"And Caillaux?" I asked, naming the name that then, as always, has been the nightmare in the minds of those who love France and hope to see her victorious and herself, the man of whom Clemenceau had said: "He thinks himself Napoleon."

"No," he said, with a calm smile, 'I do not fear him!"

"Will he come back?" I asked.

"I do not think so," he responded, and again his words had new meaning, when Caillaux was jailed to await in prison that trial for treason which Clemenceau has directed and will force.

The talk drifted to the Bulgarian disaster, of the previous autumn and the mistakes and failures of allied diplomacy in the Balkans.

"Bulgaria was a case of money," he said, thoughtfully, "a case of money, and I think, if I had been in power, I should have bought."

"And Greece?"

A Friend of Greece.

But he would not talk of Greece. He had been for years one of the great friends of the Helenic Kingdom and a desertion of Greece was to him, patently, in the nature of a personal sorrow.

The conversation became general and for the next few moments he talked of many things, with the same characteristic energy, impatience, frankness—energy in laying forth the dangers, impatience of the fools and the blunderers—which filled his columns in that epoch and made the arrival of each edition of his paper an event almost as considerable as the communique; frankness, for it is the terrible frankness of the man which has created the Clemenceau of the legends.

As he led me to the door, at the close of the audience, I was again struck with the energy and force of the man. In an odd way he reminded me of Col. Roosevelt, a smaller man, lacking in height and weight by comparison, but yet unmistakably burly and getting over the ground with that same vigorous forward thrust, which is familiar to all who have seen Col. Roosevelt in action.

Most Memorable Face of All.

Looking backward now, after three years, and trying to recall the faces and the words of the men I have met in the public life of Britain and France, Lloyd George, Balfour, Poincare, Painleve, I find that even now my recollection of Clemenceau is the clearest. Alone of all these men, there was about him a sense of force, of power, a sort of fearlessness alike of phrase and of form. What the man felt, you would be sure he would say, he would say it whether it hurt himself or another, whether it destroyed a ministry or merely labeled an opponent.

Again, I recall the touch of Roosevelt, a much polished Roosevelt, the master of the phrase and of the manner which the Colonel had not. The man who wields the rapier, not a broadsword—who strikes but once, where the Colonel battered and pounded until at last he destroyed his foe, sometimes by mere bruising. But in energy, in carelessness, the men are alike and Clemenceau is like no other man I have ever met in the public life of the three countries.

Today men all over the world are reading with joy of the return of France to her "lost provinces," of French Generals in Colmar, in Mulhouse, in Metz, in Strassbourg. Today the glory of the achievement belongs to the soldiers; they have earned it, and they should enjoy it, and tomorrow and for all other days the fame of Foch will endure, as the conqueror of the German military machine, the man who broke the mighty, if evil, tradition of the Prussian war lords.

But without Clemenceau, Foch could not have triumphed. Without Foch, Petain could not have reorganized the French army following the military defeat and the moral weakening of 1917. When France turned to Clemenceau, all other hope was gone. He came heralded by evil forecasts of a brief ministry, and a complete and disastrous failure. He came when treason was abroad and defeatist propaganda general. After he came there was period of military disaster and a growing sense of impending defeat.

An Inspection in the Chamber.

Who can forget the bitter weeks when day after day Clemenceau appeared in the Chamber still covered with the mud and dust of Flanders, of Picardy, of the Ile de France, bringing news of defeats only narrowly prevented from becoming disasters? Who will forget it, who knows, the other appearances of this man of 77 on the battle lines, under the heaviest fire, inviting death men said then? He brought to the army the immediate personal assurance of the support of the civil Government, he brought to the civil population, to the legislators the unconquerable spirit of the army.

There was a day when all changed and the Senate and the Chamber alike greeted with an applause, which had no dissent, the leader returning from rescued Lille, bringing the assurance that Metz and Strassbourg would soon be redeemed. One more triumph was his. Men had debated about the fashion in which Alsace-Lorraine would be restored to France. Clemenceau settled all that by having written in the armistice the provision that Alsace and Lorraine should be reckoned with all other occupied districts, with those of 1914 and 1915.

Thus he made good his ancient protest, for he was the last survivor of the Deputies who in 1871 had protested against the cession of the provinces, denied the right of the legislature to make such a surrender, proclaimed it illegal and injustifiable. In the language of the armistice he made good his protest of 1871, the provinces were returned as French soil.

Rarely in human history has it been given to any man to represent his country at a supreme hour in its history and so to represent it that his own personality and figure became the expression of a nation, which itself was the object of world admiration. Such was and is the achievement of Georges Clemenceau.

Tells of the Good Balmwort Tablets Worked.

Mr. W. E. Goff, connected with the D. L. & W. R. R., Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "For two years I had suffered from disorders of the kidneys and bladder. Distressing pain in the back and hips, extreme nervousness. My ankles swelled and my skin became dry and harsh. After using Balmwort Tablets I noticed relief and continued taking until now I feel wholly relieved of pain and suffering. I am glad to recommend Balmwort Tablets as a most reliable, beneficial medicine."

WHY SOCIETY WOMEN WASH THEIR OWN HAIR

They do, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about 3 cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you.—ADV.

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Freezone is magic! Apply a few drops on a sore, touchy corn or a painful callus. Instantly that corn or callus stops hurting you. Then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, with the fingers. No! Not one bit of pain, no soreness, no irritation.

A few cents buys a tiny bottle of the magic Freezone at any drug store. Sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and painful callus from one's feet. Freezone is the much-talked-of ether discovery of a Cincinnati genius. Corns and calluses lift away without even a twinge of pain. Why wait? No humbug!

U. R. IS DELAYING RECEIVERSHIP SUIT, JUDGE DYER SAYS

He Accuses Company of Interposing Unnecessary Motions to Put Off Hearing on Seaman Petition.

WANTS NO MORE OF THEM, HE DECLARES

Grants Extension Until Feb. 3 and Gives Notice That He Expects Answer to Be Filed by That Date.

In the United States District Court yesterday Judge Dyer accused the United Railways Co. of interposing unnnecessary delays in the hearing of the receivership suit brought against the company by John W. Seaman of New York, a stockholder. He overruled the company's motion to strike out certain portions of the petition.

The motion was made by former Judge A. D. Nortoni of counsel for United Railways. Charles W. Bates appeared as attorney for Seaman.

Nortoni asked that the Court strike out of the petition all references to the mill tax litigation and to the indictment of Bruce Cameron, the company's superintendent of transportation, on a charge of causing the theft of referendum petitions. He also asked that other parts of the petition be eliminated.

Judge Dyer's Remarks.

"Why didn't the defendants file this motion instead of the motion to dismiss, which I heard some time ago and overruled?" asked Judge Dyer. "That involved a good deal of work, and it seems that I already have decided that the petition contains sufficient matter for a cause of action.

"I don't know anything about the mill tax, but I think anything that might be offered in evidence about it might well be heard b ythe Court. I also know nothing about the indictment of an official of the company or about the theft of the petitions, but it seems to me that if the company set aside a fund to finance theft, that would be something on which evidence could be submitted.

"I have no patience with this manner of litigation. It is an attempt to cause delay."

On orders from the Judge to "hurry up" the arguments were brief.

No mention of the recent deal between Mayor Kiel and the company was made.

Bates in his argument said the clauses in the petition as to the mill tax, the indictment of Cameron and the extravagance of the company's legal department were all material and that he expected to prove that a secret fund was set aside by the directors, without any accounting, to provide for "all these matters."

He said he also would show that the power contracts made by the company in 1908 and 1909 were continuations of specific agreements complained of in the receivership petition.

At the completion of his argument Bates said he was willing to strike out certain parts of the petition so as to shorten it, but that he would not agree to strike out any material allegations.

The United Railways Co. originally had until Jan. 24 to file its answer. Nortoni today asked that this time be extended 20 days. Judge Dyer granted an extension to Feb. 3 and said: "I want you to answer on that day. I don't want to hear any more motions."

Later a stipulation was filed, striking out certain allegations as to the capitalization and financing of the company and as to the conflicting rights of various groups of stockholders. It was said this did not materially alter the petition.

AUTO SEEMED TO KNOW HOME FROM WHICH IT WAS STOLEN

Balks Until Owner's Wife Recognizes the Machine and Accuses Persons in It.

An automobile which had been stolen from Carl Bahnsen of 2341 Whittemore place last night stopped as if from force of habit in front of Bahnsen's home an hour later and refused to go further. Bahnsen and his wife found it there when they returned from a picture show.

A woman was in the machine and a man was trying to crank it. Mrs. Bahnsen had walked ahead of her husband, who had stopped to buy a cigar. She asked the stranger if he was having trouble and he replied that he had just bought the car and was not familiar with it.

"You are a liar, that's my car," exclaimed Mrs. Bahnsen. Bahnsen came up just then and he and his wife grabbed the man and the woman. The man broke away and escaped, but the Bahnsens held his companion.

The woman told the police she was Mrs. Ida Brashear, 20 years old, of 2631 Lafayette avenue, and that the man was her husband, Percy, whom she married a year ago. She said her husband came after her in the machine last night, and she didn't know where he got it. It had been taken from the rear of the Bahnsen house.

Man From France to Speak.

Charles Bull, a returned Y. M. C. A. secretary from France, will speak on "The Religion of the Trenches" tonight at the North Presbyterian Church, St. Louis and Warne avenues. Ralph E. Davidson, who was a sailor on the battleship Oklahoma and who witnessed the surrender of the German navy, will address the men's Bible class at 9:45 a. m.

NEW $12,000,000 HARBOR UNDER WAY AT NEW ORLEANS

It Will Consist of 6-Mile Canal Through City, Connecting Mississippi and Lake Pontchartrain.

SLIPS WILL GIVE 25-MILE FRONTAGE

Project an Evidence of Faith in Revival of River Traffic —Requirements of St. Louis Considered.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 18.—This city, bounded on one side by the Mississippi River, on another by an arm of the Gulf of Mexico, and only 90 miles from the main body of the gulf, was not satisfied with its water front, so it is spending $12,000,000 to construct the kind of a harbor it wants, and the requirements of St. Louis had a part in determining this move.

The new harbor consists of an industrial canal, running right through the city, and so constructed that it can furnish more than 25 miles of water front, on which any person or concern can lease sites for docks, wharves, warehouses, factories or any other industrial purpose. Two shipyards are already under construction on its banks. The canal will be completed this year, and the shipyards, although not completed, are now making plates for hulls, so they will be well on the way toward launching ships when the canal is ready to receive them.

It was said of New Orleans that it had too much water. It lies between the river, on the west, and Lake Pontchartrain on the east, the lake being the arm of the gulf already referred to. It is six miles from the river to the gulf. The lake was unsuitable for industrial purposes, because the narrow neck through which it empties into the gulf is not now navigable by large boats.

River Too Unsteady.

The river is well enough, for some purposes, but it is too unsteady. It has a normal variation of 18 feet in rise and fall, which makes difficult the handling of some kinds of freight. So the city is cutting a canal from the river to the lake, with locks at the mouth that joins the river, thus making the depth of water in the canal always the same, since, of course, the lake does not rise and fall as does the river.

While the canal is but six miles long, when completed it will have numerous slips on each side, in the fashion of a tree with many branches that have been lopped off near the trunk. Each slip will project back several hundred feet, so that the entire frontage furnished by the "main stem" and the slips will be more than 25 miles.

Another reason for building the canal was this: Under the terms of the Louisiana purchase treaty, no private firms or individuals can have buildings on the river front. All the docks and wharves are owned by the State, and controlled by Port Commissioners. This was a good thing, in many respects, and the commissioners have erected five miles of warehouse docks, many of which are of modern steel construction, and also a great grain elevator, with devices for pouring grain directly into the holds of ships, and for pumping it out.

However, these public warehouse docks necessarily cannot provide the right kind of storage room for all kinds of merchandise. Silk cannot be kept in a place suitable for bananas, just as flour might be damaged in a place that would be perfect for keeping wagon wheels. So, many big firms, including some in St. Louis, if they are to do a big business by way of the river, want warehouses of their own at the harbor. In addition, while the public dock facilities are as complete as possible, it was necessary to construct them to handle average freight, and a crane that lifts rice from a steamer may not handle steel girders. Many concerns need particular kinds of dock machinery.

Sites for All on New Canal.

But the industrial canal gets around all these difficulties. Anybody can lease a site on it for 99 years, and put up anything he likes, from a peanut sheller to a shipyard.

The canal, when completed, will be 150 feet wide at the bottom, and 30 feet deep. The inner length of the lock is 600 feet. Thus, two ocean liners, 600 feet long, and drawing 30 feet of water, can pass in the canal. Only three canals—Panama, Suez and Keil—can acommodate larger ships.

Nor is this all. The public docks now are served by a municipal belt railroad, and this is being extended to serve all the concerns that locate on the canal. It already is supplying the shipyards. In connection with the latter, the Government of France recognized the value of the location so early that it financed one of the shipyards, on condition that it build ships exclusively for France.

All this illustrates the faith of the people of New Orleans in the revival of river traffic—for whether the new facilities will be used depends largely upon the volume of traffic by way of the river. They believed it $12,000,000 worth.

A nominal sum, sufficient for upkeep, is charged users of the public docks and the public railroad, and the commissioners say leases of sites on the canal will be proportionally reasonable.

One difficulty met in constructing the canal was the fact that it cuts across the great tunnel which drains New Orleans. This was solved by tunneling under the canal and siphoning the drainage through. The siphon alone will cost $500,000.

Launching basins, cut back from the sides of the canal, are being excavated by the shipyards and are large enough for the launching of 10,000-ton steamers.

The Government is constructing three great commodity warehouses, at a total cost of about $10,000,000 near the outlet of the canal into the river.

It is proposed, in the future, to dredge out the channel where Lake Pontchartrain empties into the lake, thus making a short cut from New Orleans to the east side of the gulf. This would reduce the distance by 100 miles.

Analysis of the Russian Bolshevist Constitution

Committee Has Absolute Power

By STERLING E. EDMUNDS,

Lecturer on International Law, St. Louis University Law School, and Former Assistant in the Department of State.

IF, as Gladstone once said, the Constitution of the United States is "the most wonderful work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man," by what superlatives may we describe the so-called Russian Bolshevist Constitution of July 10, 1918?

If this document had been wafted to us across infinite space from another planet, it would not more completely ignore the past or defy all human experience, nor be any the less novel and surprising.

This so-called constitution undertakes to establish the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic, as it is officially known. It embraces six main divisions, containing 90 sections. The first and second divisions are devoted to declarations of the "Rights of the Laboring and Exploited People;" the third division deals with the organization and structure of the Government; the fourth with suffrage and elections; the fifth with finances, and the sixth with the coat of arms and the flag, the former being a hammer and a golden scythe, placed crosswise, in a red field.

The declaration of rights might be more properly characterized in our social and political philosophy as a declaration of wrongs. For example, at the very outset it is proclaimed that:

> For the purpose of realizing the socialization of land, all private property in land is abolished, and the entire land is declared to be national property and is to be apportioned among husbandmen, without any compensation to the former owners, in the measure of each one's ability to till it.

The fact that the Russian peasant has been enabled thus to procure land for his exclusive use, is said to satisfy practically his entire interest in the Government, and to have become a source of strength to the Bolshevist rulers. Coupled with the ousting of the former landowners the declaration proclaims all forests, treasures of the earth and streams, likewise to be socialized. As a counterpart to the agricultural program there is this pronouncement epitomizing the industrial:

> As a first step towards complete transfer of ownership to the Soviet Republic of all factories, mills, mines, railways and other means of production and transportation, the Soviet law for the control by workmen and the establishment of the Supreme Soviet of National Economy is hereby confirmed, so as to assure the power of the workers over the exploiters.

All Loans Annulled.

Then follows the anulment of loans made by the Government, by landowners and others, and the confirmation of the transfer of all banks into the ownership of the workers' and peasants' Government, "as one of the conditions of the liberation of the toiling masses from the yoke of capital." Universal obligation to work is then proclaimed, followed by this ominous regulation:

> For the purpose of securing the working class in the possession of the complete power, and in order to eliminate all possibility of restoring the power of the exploiters, it is decreed that all toilers be armed, and that a Socialist red army be organized, and the propertied class be disarmed.

Apparently every person having any property falls under this ban; and even after he has been dispoiled and is made an enforced toiler, he is denied the right of participation in the so-called government.

Church and state are declared to be separated and "the right of religious or anti-religious propaganda is accorded to every citizen." Freedom of press is proclaimed not only as an abstract right but all of the means for its exercise are freely offered, so that he who runs may write. Thus:

> For the purpose of securing freedom of expression to the toiling masses, the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic abolishes all dependence of the press upon capital, and turns over to the working people and the poorest peasantry all technical and material means of publication of newspapers, pamphlets, books, etc., and guarantees their free circulation throughout the country.

The same solicitous care is evinced toward freedom of speech and the right to assemble, so that a man with an idea and an irrepressible desire to express it, need not even hire a hall:

> For the purpose of enabling the workers to hold free meetings, the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic offers to the working class and to the poorest peasantry furnished halls and takes care of their heating and lighting appliances.

The government likewise guarantees to the workers real access to knowledge and sets itself the task of furnishing free education. Finally, universal military service is declared to be a necessary institution in the country, for the purpose of preserving the victory of socialistic fraternalism over capitalism and imperialism.

Proposed Political Structure.

The political structure sought to be erected is based in theory upon the will of the people as expressed through representatives elected by Soviets or assemblies, to successively higher assemblies, until the highest, the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, is reached. The village Soviets elect representatives to the county Soviets, the county Soviets elect to the provincial Soviets, the last-named electing representatives to the supreme body.

The All-Russian Congress is empowered to create an All-Russian Central Executive Committee, into the hands of which all power would tend naturally to gravitate. Its membership shall not exceed 200, although no minimum is fixed, and in it lies the authority to convoke its creator, the All-Russian Congress. It is responsible to the Congress only, and is described as "the supreme legislative, executive and controlling organ of the Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic." "The All-Russian Congress of Soviets is convoked twice a year," says one of the sections. It does not appear to be mandatory, however.

The All-Russian Central Executive Committee bears a strong resemblance to the Committee on Public Safety of the French, after the execution of Louis XVI. That committee, it will be recalled, was chosen by the national convention, for a term of one month, but it became practically omnipotent, holding its creator, the convention, in stern subjection and practicing a ruthless tyranny over the people, which, like the Bolshevists, had just issued a stirring declaration of their own rights and liberties.

In the Bolshevist constitution suffrage is granted to all citizens of both sexes who have attained their eighteenth year, except to the following: Those who employ labor to increase profits; those who have an income without working; merchants, trade and commercial brokers, the clergy, and persons formerly in the Czar's police and secret service.

"The highest authority," however, "in relation to questions of elections is the All-Russian Central Executive Committee." In the hands of this committee is also the taxing power.

No Safeguards Against Tyranny.

Nowhere in the so-called Russian Constitution do there appear any of the safeguards upon which the English-speaking peoples are accustomed to rely as a protection against tyranny. There is no separation of powers, executive, legislative and judicial, as with us; there is no judicial system even hinted at; there is no provision comparable to the writ of habeas corpus to give any assurance that a man, clapped in jail, may not languish there for years without trial; there is no provision for trial by local courts by a jury of one's neighbors; there is no provision against the quartering of soldiers in private homes, nor any subordination of the military to the civil power; there is no protection against searches and seizures, excessive or any other kind of bail, or against cruel and unusual punishments. In fact, in their eagerness to acquire by a summary proceedure the property of others the Bolshevists appear to have lost sight of the pre-eminently essential rights to life and liberty.

The Bolshevist Constitution is particularly incomprehensible to us since the fundamental idea of constitution-building of the English-speaking peoples, as evidenced after the English and American revolutions, has been to put into the structure only those materials which have been thoroughly seasoned by time. The suggestion conveyed in Gladstone's description of our Constitution, that it was "struck off at a given time" obscures the fact that it was the embodiment of our experience, running back a thousand years, and was not a newly created collection of experiments. As James Russell Lowell observed of our Constitution-builders:

> They had a profound disbelief in theory and knew better than to commit the folly of breaking with the past. They were not seduced by the French fallacy that a new system of government could be ordered like a new suit of clothes. They would as soon have thought of ordering a suit of flesh and skin. It is only on the roaring loom of time that the stuff is woven for such a vesture of their thoughts and experience as they were meditating.

The Bolshevist Tailors.

Not so with the Bolshevists. Their Constitution was ordered and sewed together without any loss of time as soon as the overthrow of the Czaristic Government had left them politically naked. And the tailors, coming from New York's East Side used such swatches of Marxism and of their radical philosophy as they possessed.

One may wonder why these Russian exiles, returning from the United States, and playing such a large part in the reconstruction, did not transplant our own form of Government and its principles in Muscovite soil. There are probably several explanations. Radical political philosophy is the product of reaction in environments of oppression; and those suffering from that evil very naturally consult the cures proposed by others in like situations. The English-sepaking peoples have practically no political literature comparable to that that has not come out of the autocratic sections of Europe; and for the reason that they have enjoyed comparative freedom from the tyranny of autocracy or of democracy.

Then, too, the spirit of the Anglo-Saxon political system is almost incomprehensible to other peoples. Evolved of slow growth in the customs and usages of a free people, much of it unwritten but in the blood, it requires to be not only understood, but absorbed into the being. It is this elusive character of the system which influenced the Japanese, upon adopting constitutional government, to reject the English and to take over bodily the whole written system of the Germans, which they could understand. The principal distinction between the two systems is, of course, that between limited and unlimited government, or between a Government which is the creature and a Government which is the creator, of law.

Knowing in our experience that the tendency of government is always to gain, never to yield, ground, we have ever striven to keep it in subjection to law through definite limitations upon its powers; and, in our philosophy, the Bolshevists, having clothed their Central Executive Committee with absolute and unlimited power, has merely substituted a multiple for a single tyrant.

CAPT. A. H. SEWING IN BERNE

The arrival of Capt. Arthur H. Sewing, 2349A St. Louis avenue, a medical officer captured by the Germans May 27 last, and other American prisoners of war at Berne, Switzerland, last November is described in a letter received by Mrs. Rose Reed of 5101 Kensington avenue from her brother, Edward G. Lamb of the American Red Cross.

Lamb, who formerly lived in St. Louis, said the Americans were in good health and in high spirits over their release. A number of copies of the Post-Dispatch forwarded to Lamb by Mrs. Reed were turned over to the American officers, who eagerly read them, declaring they were the first copies of an American newspaper to reach any of them since they landed in Europe.

GERMANS GOT "HOT MEALS" ON AIR COUPONS

Story of Propaganda Tickets Dropped From Air Says Englishmen "Kept Their Word."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A story of propaganda that proved a boomerang has reached London from France. In the closing stages of the war when the Germans were surrendering in large numbers, a British intelligence officer was greeted by a group of prisoners with cries of "Hot meal! Hot meal!"

The officer showed surprise, but the Germans continued to shout, "Hot meal!" and rub their stomachs.

"Nothing doing in hot meals," the officer replied.

Thereupon the Germans pulled out hidden leaflets from their clothes, and cried, "Ticket for hot meal—ticket!"

The leaflets, apparently distributed from the air, informed Fritz that if he came in and surrendered he would get a hot meal.

In brief military language the British officer told the Germans that he knew nothing of the origin of the leaflets and that there must be a mistake, but the Germans came back with:

"Englishmen always keep their word. Hot meal! Coupon for hot meal!"

According to the story, nothing remained for that British division but to set to work at once and prepare hot food for the hungry prisoners streaming in.

Want Cotton Embargo Lifted.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Members of Congress from cotton-growing states sent a cablegram to President Wilson today, urging that all embargoes against cotton exports to nonenemy countries be lifted at once and that shipments to Germany and Austria be permitted as soon as possible.

TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY HAS A BUREAU OF RESEARCH

Branch Established in Co-Operation With the Vital Statistics Department of City.

A bureau of research has been established by the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society, in co-operation with the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the City Health Department, for medical and statistical investigation. This is one of the new departments opened this year by the society, and is under the direct supervision of Maj. P. H. L. Bahrenburg, surgeon of the United States Public Health Service in St. Louis, who is medical director of the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society.

The relation of influenza and tuberculosis is the first work of the new bureau. It has been discovered that the sequence of influenza, pneumonia and tuberculosis is very usual in "flu" cases, many proofs of this having come to light in the Tuberculosis Society's two health centers, at 1243 South Vandeventer avenue and 1411 South Broadway, and with this as a basis the bureau is making surveys as to whether influenza is worse in congested districts or in the sparcely populated sections, and whether it is more prevalent among whites or negroes.

The question as to what effect occupation has on influenza also is being investigated, both in regard to the death rate from influenza and the living cases. Thus far the belief is that the disease is more prevalent outside the congested districts, as more cases have been reported from west of Jefferson avenue than from east of that street. Nothing has been determined as to the proportion in regard to whites and negroes as yet. This is a very important point in St. Louis, in the opinion of the investigators, since the death rate from tuberculosis here is four negroes to one white person, in proportion to the population.

JOVIAN ORDER BECOMES THE INTERNATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE

Change in Name, Suggested by St. Louis Chapter, to Make Body Business Organization.

Jupiter's Cabinet, the executive body of the Jovian Order, met in St. Louis yesterday and approved the recommendation of the St. Louis branch for changing the name of the order to International Board of Trade. The change was adopted by the St. Louis branch Tuesday evening. The object is to create a business organization that will include the entire electrical industry.

The Jovian Order has operated principally as a fraternal or social organization and has never been considered in the light of a business body. The order has working directly under its charter, and co-operating with it, 78 local chapters in cities of the United States and Canada, which can be utilized for business as well as social purposes.

The plan will mean the addition of a new working force in the organization, and the opening of branch offices in every city where there is at present a local chapter. Among the numerous duties to be discharged by the new International Board of Trade will be the promotion of community advertising, the work of gathering data, the establishment of a foreign bureau, employment buruea, both local and national; educational speakers' bureau, promotion of electrical expositions and development of plans for the promotion of electrical sales.

ANALYSIS OF PROPOSED POLICE HOME RULE BILL

Measure Would Place Full Control of St. Louis Police Department in Hands of Mayor.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18.—Examination of the proposed bill for a so-called home rule Police Department for St. Louis, prepared by Senator Elder and to be introduced by him in the Legislature, shows it is in reality a measure to place solely in the hands of the Mayor of St. Louis control of the Police Department, and a measure to increase the salaries of nearly all officers and policemen below the rank of Assistant Chief of Detectives $15 a month.

The measure does not place in the hands of the municipal government in St. Louis control of its police affairs, but instead gives that control entirely into the hands of the Mayor, even prohibiting the Board of Aldermen from reducing the number of policemen or refusing to appropriate money to pay their salaries.

It fixes the number of officers of every rank, except that it names only a minimum number of patrolmen, placed at 1250 as under the old law, stipulates the salaries they shall receive and specifies that in the hands of the one Police Commissioner provided for shall rest full power to determine their duties.

Appointment by Mayor.

Virtually the only home rule feature of the measure is that the Police Commissioner, who it is proposed shall take the place of the four commissioners under the present law, shall be appointed by the Mayor, whereas the four commissioners are appointed by the Governor and responsible only to him. The one Commissioner provided for may be removed by the Governor, but, in case of removal, his successor is to be appointed by the Mayor.

The principal complaint of St. Louis under the present police system is that the Governor appoints the Police Commissioners and that the city has no control whatever over its police affairs. This complaint is taken care of by changing the appointing power from the Governor to the Mayor, but there is no provision for confirmation of the Mayor's appointee by the Board of Aldermen.

Another complaint against the present system is that the Board of Aldermen is required to appropriate the amount of money the Board of Police Commissioners calls for in its budget. Under the proposed law the Board of Estimate and Apportionment must approve the full amount of salaries named in the Police Commissioners' budget, though it may reduce or reject any items in the budget except salary items.

Change in Trials of Members.

The effect of the law would be that the Mayor could appoint any person he chose for Police Commissioner and that Commissioner would have the power of naming every police officer of every rank and every patrolman in the department.

The bill provides that no member of the department can be removed except for cause and after a hearing, but the cause need be only satisfying to the Commissioner, and there is no method provided for appeal to the courts. The act sets out, however, that all trials shall be public, that the accused shall have right of counsel, and that, if the charges are preferred by the Commissioner himself, the trial shall be before the Mayor.

This provision is said to be the result of the recent Police Board trials, in which the Commissioners informed attorneys for ex-Chief and now Capt. Young and other accused officers that they were permitted at the trial by courtesy, and that they had no right to be present, and because the board appeared both as accuser and judge at the trials.

Salary Provisions.

The Police Commissioner under the bill forfeits his office if he accepts a nomination or becomes a candidate for any office during his term of office, though it does not stipulate that "term of office" means the term for which he was appointed, which, in the opinion of some lawyers, leaves a loophole open for a Commissioner to use his power for political purposes up to the time of filing as a candidate, and for him then to resign.

The salary increase feature is one of the noticeable features of the measure. It provides no change of salary for the Chief of Police, Assistant Chief of Police, Chief of Detectives, Inspector, Secretary to the Chief, Captains or Lieutenants. MEETING OF LOYAL SOCIALISTS

Branch of Social Democratic League to Be Formed Today.

Socialists who refused to follow the attitude of the Socialist party on the war, will hold a meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock ta the American Hoel to organize a local branch of the Social Democratic League.

Winfield R. Gaylord of Milwaukee, Wis., former Socialist State Senator, will represent the national organization, and will explain its purpose. WURLITZER

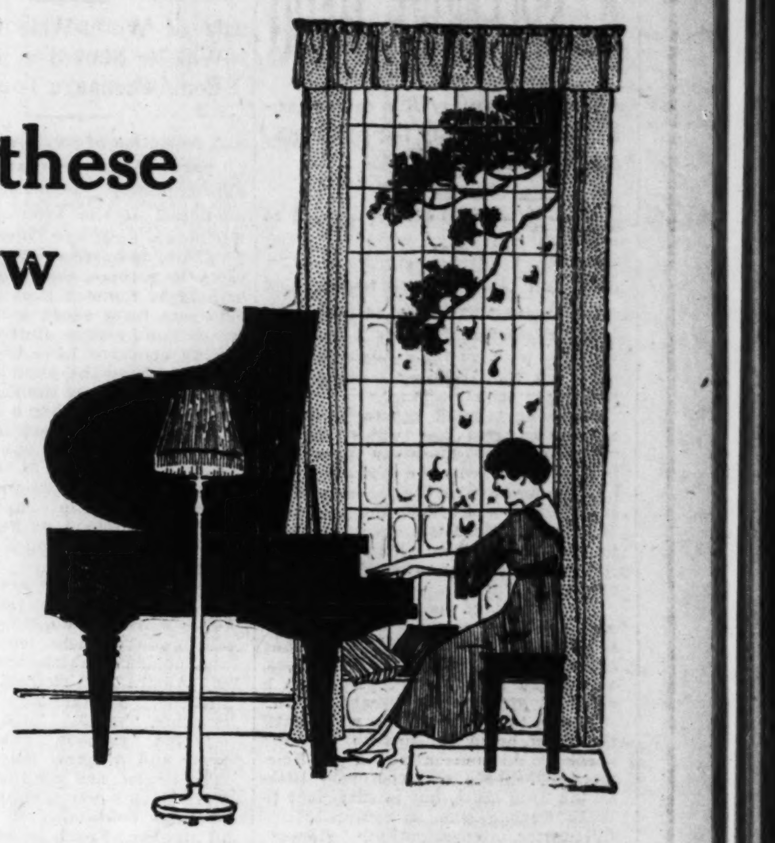
ESTABLISHED 62 YEARS "A BETTER PIANO FOR LESS MONEY"

If you knew—you would get one of these Baby Grands tomorrow



If you knew the value of this latest

WURLITZER BABY GRAND

like we know it; if you could realize how low the price of $550 really is, you would come to our warerooms tomorrow and select one.

There are more than enough cultured homes and music lovers in this city, that want pianos, to take every one of the twenty-five instruments we have, in a single day, if they were to simply come to our warerooms and inspect them.

Conditions upon which these Grands are sold

1 That if for any reason whatsoever the piano is not satisfactory after a 30 days' trial and inspection in your home, you may have your money back.

2 That you may exchange it for any reason whatsover for any other new instrument that we carry of equal grade, at any time within 6 months, without incurring any loss or being put to any extra expense.

3 That the piano is guaranteed without restriction or reservation for the period of 5 years.

4 That you may take 2½ years' time in which to make settlement, dividing the payments over a 130-week period as best suits your convenience.

The person who secures one of these most excellent little Grands will be proud to have it in his home. You have but to see and hear them to convince yourself of that, and it is our advice that you come in tomorrow.

Describing These Beautiful Instruments

THE WURLITZER BABY GRAND is the most marvelous individual piano made. It is a superb and beautiful little Grand, taking up no more floor space than an upright, but having the beauty and depth of tone of a large size parlor Grand and that quality of tone which can only be had in a Grand piano. They are instruments befitting a place in any home; it matters not how expensively furnished—just the kind of Baby Grands you have had pictured in your mind and longed to own. The case work and the finish is beautiful; the wood is of the richest mahogany.

While this sale is on we also wish to dispose of some wonderful bargains in used pianos and player-pianos. You will find them all here on our floors as advertised—all in perfect condition.

The value of these Baby Grands is $650. The introductory price is $550, which price can be divided up into payments to suit the purchaser, covering a period of 2½ years.

We will gladly send you, upon request, a tissue paper pattern the exact size of this remarkable little Grand, which, when spread out upon your floor, will show the convenience of its size. Send for one — at once.

people now, as never before, recognize the danger lurking in a "cold." The proprietors of Mentho-Laxene have the best reasons to believe that any incipient "cold" can be instantly checked if the medicine is used instantly when the first symptoms are manifested—sneezing or inflammed nostrils and palate.

They back their faith with a "money back if not satisfied guarantee." A million people or more have depended on Mentho-Laxene to carry them safely through the cough, colds and grip season.

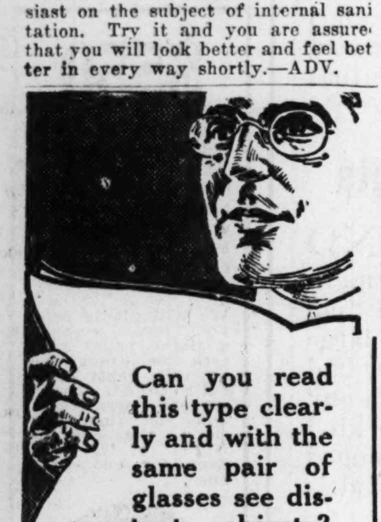
GLASS HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST A SPLENDID HABIT

Open sluices of system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—ADV.



Can you read this type clearly and with the same pair of glasses see distant objects?

$9,000,000 IN FURS TO BE AUCTIONED HERE

Sale of World-Wide Collection Will Be Started at International Exchange Tomorrow.

A collection of furs, gathered from all parts of the world and valued at approximately $9,000,000, will be auctioned at the International Fur Exchange, First and Olive streets, at 10 a. m., tomorrow. The sale, said to be the greatest ever promoted, will be held by Funsten Bros & Co.

Buyers from every section of the country and representatives of many foreign concerns have been arriving daily to attend the auction. Inspection and tagging of the furs has been going on for more than a month.

The offerings include 1562 dressed and dyed sealskins, 321 blue fox, 750,000 moleskins, 68,000 Chinese mink, 25,000 Japanese mink, 712,000 squirrel pelts, 9000 Japanese fox, 178,000 marmots, 1500 Persians, 53,000 kolinsky skins and a number of others.

Among other skins are thousands of white fox, Russian sables, chinchillas, martens, badgers, civets, hair seals, mountain lions, leopards, bearskins, polar bearskins, Australian red fox, Australian ringtail opossum, kangaroo, Patagonian fox, otter, wolverine, mink, lynx, wildcats, wolfskins, raccoon skins, skunk, beaver and muskrat pelts.

The sales are conducted as follows: Each buyer is supplied with a catalogue containing a description and number of each lot of furs. The buyer inspects the offerings before the auction, marks the price he expects to bid after the number of each lot and then awaits the auction. In this way the buyer has his bids decided upon and does not have to inspect the furs during the auction.

At the auction held here last April the sales totaled $6,000,000, establishing a record for the industry. In former years London was the chief fur center, but recently furriers have given St. Louis the preference, because of its central location and advantageous freight rates.

KOREAN CROWN PRINCE AND JAPANESE PRINCESS TO WED

First Instance of Such a Union; Requires Changes in Imperial Laws of Nippon.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 10.—The wedding of Princess Masako, eldest daughter of Prince Nashimoto, with Prince Yi Jr., the younger brother and heir of the former King of Korea, is to be celebrated within a few months. The marriage between the Princess and the former Korean Crown Prince, which is the first instance of matrimonial union between a member of the Japanese Imperial family and the former royalty of Korea in the history of both peoples now amalgamated into one nation by Japan's annexation of that country, has necessitated a partial revision or addition to the provisions of the Imperial House Law.

In observance of tradition the changes in the law were announced before the sanctuary of the imperial ancestors in the imperial palace with appropriate Shinto ceremonies. At the same time similar reports were submitted to the grand shrines at Ise, dedicated to the grand ancestor of the Imperial House and the mausolea of the First Emperor Jimmu and the late Emperor Maiji.

The wedding ceremony is to be celebrated at the Kasumigaseki detached palace in Tokio in pure Japanese style, according to the time-honored code of ceremonies observed in the Japanese Imperial Court. After the wedding the bride and bridegroom will proceed to the Imperial Palace and have audience with the Emperor and Empress. The honeymoon will be spent in Korea.

DEPTH CHARGES SOUNDED END OF SUBMARINE WARFARE

War Had Gone on for More Than Two Years Before the Device Was Perfected.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Depth charges, in the opinion of many officers engaged in submarine chasing, were the chief factor in checking the German submarine campaign. The war had gone on for nearly two and a half years before the depth charges were perfected. Previous to that time trawlers dragged mines about on cables in an effort to strike submarines and used other equally dangerous and futile devices.

But the perfected depth charges, so arranged that they could be timed for explosion at any desired depth, solved the problem of the small chasers which were fighting the submarine. Trawlers with sufficient speed could drop these charges and get out of the danger zone. The mortality among submarine chasers immediately dropped and the seas became very unsafe for the sensitive underseas craft.

One of the novel devices adopted by the British for the co-ordination of the efforts of trawlers and submarines has just been divulged. A trawler would drag a submarine by a cable and maintain communication with it by telephone. When the trawler sighted a German U-boat, the British submarine would slip its cable and attack the German boat before the surprised Germans could submerge or prepare to give fight.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—In the Ford-Newberry Michigan senatorial election contest, the Senate Elections Committee today decided to have the Senate Sergeant-at-Arms take possession of all ballots, poll books and other documentary evidence to be held for future examination.

BELGIANS ARE IN SAD PLIGHT TO GET FOOD

Coffee Is $5 a Pound and It Is Impossible to Communicate Between Cities.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 13.—Conditions here and elsewhere in Belgium generally are very distressing. Coffee costs the equivalent of about $5 a pound; meat and butter, $2.50; sugar, 62 cents; eggs, 40 cents each. Men's suits of poor quality cost from $100 to $120. Men's shoes are about the same as clothing. A moderate meal in a restaurant costs the equivalent of about $5.

The streets of Brussels are filled with promenading crowds from morning to night, because scarcely anybody does any work. The shops, many of which indeed are closed, sell next to nothing for two reasons: In the first place, because they have very little to sell and, secondly, because the prices are so high that the public cannot possibly afford to pay them. The people have been very much disappointed about prices.

Have Hard Times.

They always hoped that as soon as the war was over and the armistice was signed the necessaries of life would be procurable at normal prices. Their anticipation has been far from being realized. In fact, people have to pay nowadays quite as much as when the Germans were in Brussels.

The number of places of amusement, dancing houses and the like has increased to a great extent.

Another grave economic difficulty arises out of what is called the unemployment fund. This was created during the war to aid workmen, employes and others to enable them to subsist without having to be dependent upon the Germans. In the first instance this fund worked out advantageously, but after a while a different state of things arose.

A workman who was being fed gratuitously by the relief organizations received from the unemployment fund regular pay of about 100 francs a month for doing nothing, and numbers of these workmen, well content with their lot, refuse to return to work.

Public Utilities Destroyed.

The railways, telephones and telegraphs in Belgium have been for practical purposes destroyed. The Belgians are doing their best to restore them, but it will take a long time before the ante-bellum condition is re-established. Out of pure mischief the Germans destroyed all that they could.

For instance, the rails on the line between Adenkerke to Bruges and Ghent were cut into pieces three or four yards in length, and this was done in the most systematic manner, a special machine being brought up to sever the rails one by one. The line is now being gradually restored, but one can still see the short lengths of rail ranged in heaps along the track.

Communication between one town and another is most difficult. In places where the lines are to some extent, but only temporarily, re-established one or two trains are run in the day, but they go very slowly, taking many hours over journeys which formerly lasted from half an hour to an hour. Until the communication routes are restored the reprovisioning of Belgium will be very difficult and prices cannot go down.

WOMEN TO RETAIN PLACES IN INDUSTRY, LLOYD GEORGE SAYS

Writes to Lady Rhondda Supporting "Equal Pay for Equal Output." After War.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—No discrimination is to be made against women in British industry, Premier Lloyd George declares in a letter addressed to Lady Rhondda, president of the Women's Industrial League, who had submitted to him a memorial setting forth the claims of women to freedom of employment.

After the pledges made by the Government to the trade unions have been fulfilled, Lloyd George wrote in his reply, women will find ample scope in peace pursuits. He supports the principle of "equal pay for equal output," and promises full opportunity for women in training and education.

"In those industrial occupations in which women were engaged before the war," the Premier added, "opportunities of every sort will be opened up for every class of woman worker, and I believe that the real working representatives of organized labor may be trusted when the time comes to see the necessity of utilizing, in the interests of production and to the best advantage, every class of worker available."

Regarding payment, he says: "To permit women to be the catspaw for reducing the level of wages is unthinkable. It is not wanted by enlightened employers, to whom good production and uniform wages are desirable; cutting of wages, with its consequent instability, is not at any time either in their interest or in that of the nation."

High Court Holds Tennessee "Bone Dry."

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 18.—The State of Tennessee is adjudged "bone dry" in an opinion rendered in the United States Court of Appeals by United States Circuit Judge Denison here yesterday in affirming the judgment of the lower court in the cases of four men charged with having violated the Reed amendment. The Circuit Court of Appeals in its opinion ruled that every part of Tennessee is within four miles of some school and for that reason the whole state is under the operation of the dry law.

U-BOATS MASTERED BY DEPTH BOMBS MADE IN ST. LOUIS

Wagner Electric Company Furnished Entire Supply of Submarine Charges During Country's First Year in War.

LAYMAN TELLS OF BIG WAR BUSINESS

Steel Shells Covering Acres at Plant When Armistice Was Signed to Be Scrapped—Wage Ratio to Endure.

Covering several acres at the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co. plant, 6400 Plymouth avenue, are thousands of 8-inch steel shell castings originally intended for United States artillery in France, that are to be scrapped as the windup of the tremendous war business of this company.

With the signing of the armistice with Germany, work on this order was stopped, and the huge castings have begun to rust under exposure to weather, but will eventually be recast and converted into constructive articles of commerce. These shells belong to the Government, and, with others which have been finished and delivered, were to have been machined and made ready at this plant for the explosive charge.

Discussing the Wagner war business with a Post-Dispatch reporter, W. A. Layman of 15 Kingsbury place, president, declared yesterday that the company, despite its success in handling war contracts, did not profit as much as it would have done by an equal volume of electrical machine works in normal times.

He gave interesting information, hitherto forbidden for military reasons, of just what the Wagner company manufactured in the munitions line; how the War Department depended wholly on this concern for the navy's entire supply of depth bombs with which to combat the submarine during the first year this country was in the war, and how these bombs were shipped to the seaboard on fast passenger trains in the fateful days when the German military machine was doing its worst.

As a large employer of labor, Layman's views on the so-called inflated wage scale are also interesting and reassuring. He does not look for any serious conflict between capital and labor in the reconstruction period, and believes the present wage scale in its ratio to the cost of living will be maintained, in view of the improved condition of the workingman.

Large War Orders Filled.

Since 1915, Layman related, the Wagner company manufactured 85,000 eight-inch howitzer shells for the British Government, 800,000 detonating fuses for the Russians and contracted for 300,000 six-inch and 170,000 eight-inch shells for the United States Government, a small part of which remain unfinished. Fifteen thousand detonating fuses, similar to the Russian type, were also delivered daily for American shells of large caliber.

But the greatest work accomplished by the Wagner company, he said, was the manufacture of all the depth bombs. Forty thousand of these were manufactured complete, except for the explosive, on short notice.

The Wagner company also manufactured, jointly with another concern at East Moline, Ill., more than 70 per cent of the four-inch naval anti-submarine guns contracted for in the United States, and 80,000 56-inch artillery wheel hubs, besides a vast amount of other articles and electrical machinery used by this country in the war.

More than 1500 men and women, additional to the regular production organization of 3000, were employed on war orders, and the payroll reached a maximum of $120,000 a week, which Layman figured would give an average weekly wage of $28. He said the company would not experience a loss by the cancellation on short notice of war orders, as the munitions production organization was originally constructed to provide for such a contingency.

Layman would not give the money value of the contracts handled by the company, but it is known that the Wagner company, Curtis & Co. Manufacturing Co., the Root & Vandervoort Engineering Co. of East Moline, Ill., operated as the R. & V. Wagner Ordnance Co., and the Bucyrus Co. of South Milwaukee pooled their facilities, and up to August, 1917, had undertaken more than $30,000,000 worth of work.

Since hostilities ceased the Wagner Co. has virtually disbanded its munitions work organization, having let out about 1500 men and women workers, and the concern is concentrating its resources on its electrical machine business.

Speaking of the Wagner Co. achievement against the submarine, Layman said:

Achievement Against U-Boats.

"On June 16, 1917, we were furnished blueprint drawings for depth charges, and two weeks later we shipped experimental models to an Eastern naval station where tests showed them to function properly. We then received a telegraphic order for quantity production, and soon thereafter regular shipments were started. At one time the U-boat menace was so critical that we shipped these bombs, not containing explosive, on fast passenger trains to the East. During this period a baggage car full of depth bombs left our plant each night under special naval guard, and was attached to a passenger train.

"During this country's first year in the war the Wagner Co. was the only American manufacturer to supply our navy with these bombs. This was our company's most notable achievement on war orders.

"On the same volume of business within our own lines of manufacture we would have made more profit than on the war contracts. One of the reasons for this is that the contract prices on all ordnance supplies were fixed by the Ordance Department at Washington, early in the war, at what was considered a basis of reasonable profit, and it was not the policy of the Ordance Department to give the contractor any protection against increasing cost of manufacture due to increased labor cost. Nor were the Ordnance Department contract prices advanced as the war progressed."

Wage Rates to Endure.

Layman declared that manufacturers and other large employers of labor are quite in accord with the principle that the ratio of wages to the cost of living must not be lowered.

"The wage earner has improved his condition substantially by raising this ratio to the living costs and industry has adjusted itself to the change," Layman explained. "The broad-gauged employers generally are glad that such is the case and will maintain this ratio as long as trade conditions permit."

Representatives of the British Ministry of Munitions, headed by Brigadier-General L. R. Kenyon, director of inspection of munitions of war in the United States, and Col. W. G. Lyddon and Maj. F. S. Montague, of his staff, visited the Wagner company, Curtis & Co. Manufacturing Co. and Scullin Steel Co. last Thursday, to thank officials and shopmen for their good work on munitions for the British Government. George F. Steedman of the Curtis company was host to the English officers at a dinner in their honor at the Racquet Club Thursday evening, which was also attended by Layman, Harry Scullin and Col. David S. Stanley, Quartermaster at the Arsenal here.

Only Neōlin Soles could endure a test like this. That they do so is because of the tough durability built into them by a scientific process. To cut your shoe bills down, buy shoes with these long-wearing soles. They come in many styles for men, women, and children.

Remember—Neōlin Soles are flexible and waterproof, too, and are available everywhere for re-soling. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels—guaranteed to outwear all other heels.

TELLS HOW TO STOP A BAD COUGH

Surprising results from this famous old home-made syrup. Easily prepared and costs little.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

AUDIT OF A. H. BROWN & CO.'S BOOKS AT INSTANCE OF BROWN

Senior Member of Firm and Receiver Point Out Error in Post-Dispatch Report.

In its account of the filing of an audit of the books of the Alex H. Brown & Co. brokerage firm Friday, the Post-Dispatch inadvertently said the report of Marwick, Mitchell, Peat & Co., expert accountants, was made after an audit for W. L. McDonald, receiver for the firm.

Alexander H. Brown, senior member of the firm, yesterday pointed out that he employed the accountants to begin the audit before Oct. 1. Receiver McDonald said the accountants were at work on the firm's books when he took charge as receiver, and that the work was started at Brown's direction.

Brown has said that the firm was wrecked and forced into receivership by his junior partner, Anthony J. Schmidt, without Brown's knowledge. Schmidt, in a deposition, recently admitted that he had operated three speculative accounts for himself, unknown to Brown, and that he "may have mislaid" some of the records of trades which he made in the firm's name

PAINS AND ACHES YIELD QUICKLY TO SLOAN'S LINIMENT

Are you tormented by Neuralgia, Lumbago, Sciatica or any of those aches that require a counter-irritant? Then let the soothing, warming application of Sloan's Liniment stop the pain by drawing the blood away from the congested part.

It is the pressure on the nerves by the blood rushing to the inflamed muscle or joint that makes you ache. So when Sloan's Liniment relieves the swollen blood vessels by setting up a counter-irritant on the surface, the circulation is equalized, sympathetic nerves all soothed, and soreness or lameness disappears.

Sloan's Liniment is probably the counter-irritant most widely used to overcome painful inflammation in cases of neuralgia, sore muscles, wrenched joints, strains, bruises, gout. Rubbing is not required. This clear, clean liquid is easily applied as it does not stain the skin.

LETTER URGES FAIR COMPENSATION LAW

Secretary of Labor Federation Committee Praises Bill Indorsed by Unions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial in Sunday's paper, Jan. 5, was a clear and unbiased conception of a real workmen's compensation law, and it merits the careful consideration of every employer interested in the welfare of his employes.

For six years bills have been presented to the Legislature of this State which were favorable in their entirety to the insurance companies, but obnoxious to the employe. The employe was not considered because in all those bills there was nothing left for him to do but pay the premiums which would be fixed by the insurance companies. A successful fight against the enactment of those bills was made by the organized tradesmen, whose chances for injury are greater than employes in industrial plants, because of the low rate of compensation afforded; the unfair waiting period; the denial of compensation to minors over 16 years of age who were able to work (which would compel all dependent minors over that age to seek employment, regardless of whether they sought higher education or not); the low amount offered for medical and surgical treatment, and also for burial expenses, all of which were pet measures of the insurance companies. The fight that the building tradesmen, printers and others made on those past bills was not a factional fight between members of organized labor; it was a fight along educational lines, but it resulted in the defeat of all the bills up to the present time.

Bill Indorsed by Labor.

The members of the Legislature, Govs. Major and Gardner, and representatives of several employers' organizations appealed to the labor unions to unite on a bill that would be fair to them and reasonable to the employers, so that a compensation law could be enacted in this State.

We heeded their appeal because we felt that if we could agree on a fair bill there would be no difficulty in having it enacted and we got together on a bill combining the features of the California and Ohio State managed plan of compensation insurance. This bill provides for a fair rate of compensation to the employe or his dependents at a premium much lower than the present liability rates charged by the insurance companies in this State, and considerably lower than the present compensation rate charged by insurance companies in Illinois, which we understand has increased between 500 and 600 per cent over the old liability rates in that state.

The bill we have agreed upon has been unanimously indorsed by the State Federation of Labor of Missouri at their Sedalia (Mo.) convention, and by every local union of organized labor in the State. The cry of "let the trade unions agree on the kind of a compensation bill they want" has been heeded, and our bill, drawn after six years of helpful experience, and eclipsing the compensation laws of any other state or country, is ready for presentation to the Legislature.

Insurance Companies' Bill.

Now, we understand, a bill has been prepared by the insurance companies, who are endeavoring to have the Chamber of Commerce indorse it. Their bill is clumsily drawn and contains all the features of the old bills which were unsatisfactory to the tradesmen, and which brought about their defeat.

It is useless to waste valuable time to discuss the unsatisfactory features of that bill as all of them have been condemned time and again and no fair-minded employer thinks the bill is a just one. At a meeting at the Missouri Athletic Association Building, where this bill was discussed, it was apparent that the employers want to be fair, but in order to do so they do not want to have to pay rates higher than the enormously high rates that now prevail in states where the compensation is paid by the insurance companies. The employers voiced their belief that Missouri should have a fair compensation law and the premium should be such as will permit competition with neighboring states. The bill which was discussed at that meeting, we were told, will cost the employers a trifle more than in other states because it is a better bill. Our examination shows it is no different than the present obnoxious Illinois law; the compensation and other features are the same. The bill indorsed by the State Federation of Labor is just what the employers have been wanting; insurance at a figure where they can compete with other states, in fact, it will be considerably less. The other states will have to change their rates so that they can compete with Missouri manufacturers if the State Federation of Labor bill is adopted.

Fair Compensation Urged.

Under the bill discussed by the Chamber of Commerce the employe will not get reasonable compensation, the employer will have to pay a high premium and the measure will be generally unsatisfactory to the person it seeks to benefit—the employe—and it should receive no consideration by the legislators.

We cannot understand what interest the insurance companies have in a workmen's compensation law, except a mercenary one. They know little of the circumstances of the employe and care less. The cold-blooded manner in which many of our injured members have been treated by them has caused them to spurn their agents, and has necessitated the establishment of relief and sick and accident funds in our local unions. There can be but one objection to our bill and that is that it will prevent the insurance companies from writing workmen's compensation insurance in this State. Our experience teaches us that about 40 per cent of the premiums now paid for liability insurance goes to maintain the high salaries of the officials, 40 per cent is diverted in other ways and the person who is injured is lucky to get 20 per cent of the money that he or she is entitled to. Now is the time to call a halt. The past custom of trafficking in the hazards of workingmen and women, which in many cases result in their permanent disability or death, should cease. Ninety per cent of the premium, as is provided in the State Federation of Labor's bill, should go to the injured employe or his dependents, the balance should be used to defray the expenses of State supervision and to pay the just taxes.

Your editorial has done much good and every employe who knows that satisfied employes render acceptable service should unite in the state-wide movement to have the bill to be presented by the State Federation of Labor enacted into a law at the coming session of the Legislature. It is absolutely fair to the employer and the employe, the only persons to be considered in acting upon the bill.

Will War Help Make New Race Of Super-men with Strength

AND ENDURANCE LIKE ATHLETES OF OLD

By Putting More Iron Into the Blood of Modern Men and Women on Account of Their Eating Coarse Foods and Leading a Rigorous Outdoor Life? Physician Says

Iron Is Absolutely Essential to Greatest Development of Physical and Mental Power.

Why Nuxated Iron by Helping to Supply the Iron Deficiency in the Blood Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Run-Down Folks in Two Weeks' Time.

The men of blood and iron whose indomitable force and tireless energy helped win the war owe much to the strength obtained by eating coarse foods and leading a rigorous out-door life, is the opinion of Dr. George F. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon, Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey.

Dr. Baker believes that these same conditions on a lesser scale have been of tremendous help to the health of men and women in civil life. In commenting upon this, he says: "Just as lack of proper foods for its soldiers saps the strength of a nation, so does want of sufficient iron in the blood of men and women reduce their power and make them an easy prey to the thousands of disease germs constantly around us and always ready to attack the constitutions of the weak and run down. It is not the quantity of food you eat which makes you strong, but it is the amount which is assimilated and taken up by the blood.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to change food into living tissue, muscle and brain. Refined foods and modern methods of cooking have robbed us of much of the iron which Nature intended we should receive, and there is no doubt in my mind that the coarse foods of war time, with their greater percentage of strength-giving iron, have materially aided in building up a stronger race of people. But unless this iron is obtained from our food it must be supplied in some form that is easily assimilated if we want to possess power, energy and endurance. For supplying this deficiency and increasing the red-blood corpuscles, I know of nothing more effective than organic iron—Nuxated Iron. From a careful examination of the formula and my own tests of Nuxated Iron, I feel convinced that it is a preparation which any physician can take himself or prescribe for his patients with the utmost confidence of obtaining highly beneficial and satisfactory results. The fact that Nuxated Iron is today being used by over three million people annually as a tonic, strength and blood builder, is in itself an evidence of tremendous public confidence, and I am convinced that if others would take Nuxated Iron when they feel weak and run down it would help make a nation of stronger, healthier men and women."

In commenting upon these conditions and the probability of building up a stronger race of people by increasing the supply of iron in their blood, Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and medical author, says: "I fully agree with Dr. Baker. In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked are responsible for another great iron loss.

"Therefore, you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt. I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions, with unfailing results."

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, was asked for an opinion. Dr. Sullivan said: "Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marveled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood—and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous, run-down state. But in my opinion, you can't make strong, sturdy men of blood and iron—the kind that helped win the war—by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people will insist in dosing themselves with metallic iron simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Pauley Drug Stores Co. and all other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, [illegible] Bldg., College-Elwood streets, [illegible] Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesalers.

Teacher asks: "I have pimples, oily skin and suffer from constipation, headache and never feel strong and well. Please prescribe for me."

Answer: You should overcome constipation and cleanse the system of accumulated poisons by taking Three-Grain Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur) for several weeks or more. These tablets are very beneficial, especially in hot weather, as they have a tendency to cool the blood and improve its quality.

"Flo" writes: "I have suffered with a bad cough for some time and I am also weak and tired most of the time, which I think, is due to the severe coughing. Can you give me a remedy?"

Answer: Yes, your weakness is due to the coughing, but you should be well relieved by using the following: Get a 2½-oz. package of Essence Mentho-Laxene and make according to directions on the bottle, then take a teaspoonful every hour or two until the cough is cured. This makes a full pint of the very best and safest cough syrup. If your druggist does not have Mentho-Laxene, have him order it for you of the wholesale firm.

"Ed" writes: "Being past middle age and observing that my nervous system is in bad shape, I write for a prescription. I do not gain strength from my food, am weak, listless, forgetful, sleepless at times, tired, and unable to act the part of a man of health, such as I was at one time."

Answer: Get from a well-stocked pharmacy a sealed tube of Three-Grain Cadomene Tablets, which are especially made for those needing a strong, harmless rejuvenating tonic. Astonishing and gratifying results follow, and life and hope are renewed.

"Reader" writes: "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? Have depression, [illegible] chills, pains like rheumatism, and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of Balmwort Tablets. This is a splendid efficacious remedy in such abnormal conditions. Begin their use as per directions on each sealed tube.

Mrs. C. asks: "My scalp itches terribly, is feverish and a great amount of oily dandruff is present. What is good for this?"

Answer: First shampoo the hair and apply Plain Yellow Minyol about once a week as per directions. This relieves the itching, overcomes the dandruff and makes the hair beautifully glossy and vigorous. Obtain in 4-oz. jars of druggists.

NOTE—For many years Dr. Baker has been giving free advice and prescriptions to millions of people through these columns and doubtless has helped in relieving illness and distress more than any single individual in the world's history. Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and [illegible] similar to the following:

Dr. Lewis Baker, Dear Sir:—The Yellow Minyol—it is great. I have used it twice. I have been troubled with itching scalp, falling hair for two years and have tried everything heard of and nothing did any good. I probably spent $25.00 in the last two years. Minyol stopped the falling hair and the itching is most gone. It is a great [illegible] and I surely believe that I can have my hair as nice and pretty as it was [illegible] I can recommend it to everyone who has falling hair, dandruff, and itching scalp.

Yours very gratefully,

KICKS AT $3 EGGS, BUT HIS HOME IS A CASTLE IN GERMANY

Annoyed at paying $3 a dozen for eggs, but content with his home, a new, steam heated, electric lighted castle, Corp. Burton F. Connolly, Company A, 340th Machine Gun Battalion, writes his father, C. P. Connolly, 1361 Goodfellow avenue, a Post-Dispatch proofreader, that life is altogether pleasant "somewhere in Germany."

"These people were told the Americans would kill them and burn their homes, and they seem surprised at the civil treatment they receive. We give them little things we can spare, and share our food with them, and exchange our coffee and chocolate—which they have not had for years—for soup and jelly and fresh meats. The children tell us they would have starved if the war had lasted much longer."

Connolly met five rejections before his acceptance for service on April 29, 1918. He survived the action from Aug. 1 through the St. Mihiel drive and the Argonne fighting with nothing more than an occasional scratch and a sprained ankle. His letter voices the great desire to be homeward bound.

Mother, Your Child needs a Harmless Laxative.—Quick!

If Tongue is Coated, Stomach Sick, or Child is Cross, Feverish, Constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if the tongue is coated; this is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with bile and imperfectly digested food.

When listless, pale, feverish, with tainted breath, a cold, or a sore throat; if the child does not eat, sleep or act naturally, or has stomachache, indigestion, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the waste matter, bile and fermenting food will pass out of the bowels, and you have a healthy, playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their "insides" sweet and wholesome.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of genuine "California Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," made by the California Fig Syrup Co., which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups, plainly on the bottle. —ADV.

128TH ARTILLERYMAN TELLS OF ARGONNE FIGHT

Earl S. Higgins, Who Was Gassed, Is Home on Furlough From Hospital.

Private Earl S. Higgins, 128th (St. Louis) Field Artillery, who was gassed in the Argonne Forest and who is at his home at 5136 Terry avenue, on furlough from a Government hospital at Biltmore, N. C., related some of his experiences overseas. He took part in the action which began Sept. 26 in which the St. Louis artillery regiment supported the successful advance of the 137th and 138th (St. Louis) Infantry.

Higgins was gassed Oct. 4 and sent to the rear. After weeks in the hospital he sailed from Brest Dec. 9 on the transport Martha Washington. Upon arrival in this country he was sent to the hospital at Biltmore. He expects to be discharged shortly.

"The regiment took up its position in the Argonne region Sept 25," Higgins said, "and we began firing at 3 a. m. There was a stiff enemy resistance of machine guns and artillery. That night we advanced 12 or 15 kilos. On the 26th we advanced eight kilos more to Very, and it was here that the gas got me on Oct. 4.

"We had been warned of this mustard gas. On the morning of the 4th, as we were being relieved, the enemy sent over a number of gas shells. When the sun came up we were allowed to take off our masks despite the fact that this gas does not disappear readily. It hangs over the ground to the depth of about a yard, especially over pools of water. I ran into a 'pocket' of gas without realizing it. At first I could hardly believe I was gassed, but in the evening my skin began to burn and blister, so I went to the first aid station."

"We lost one gun, a French 75, before I left. When it was blown up one of the gun crew, a private from Montana, was killed outright. Two or three others were killed and one Sergeant died."

Higgins said that the 128th gunners became so proficient with the French 75s that they increased the record made by the French of 28 rounds per minute to 31 rounds. He added that several men were burned about the face when they attempted to shave with water from infected wells. The custom was introduced, he said, of shaving with cold coffee.

UNION SUNDAY SCHOOL SESSION

Jennings, Mo., Protestants Considering a United Church.

The first union meeting of the Sunday schools of the English-speaking Protestant Churches of Jennings, St. Louis County, will be held in the Sunday school rooms of the Presbyterian Church this morning. There was formerly a non-sectarian Sunday School called the Union Chapel, meeting in its own building, and as an outgrowth of that the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools have decided to meet together in the future, with a combined attendance of about 200. There is also at Jennings a German Lutheran Church, which did not consider going into the union, and a Catholic Church, beside an Episcopalian mission.

It is considered possible that the Protestant Churches will later form a single community church, but as yet nothing definite has been planned in this connection.

SPECIAL PROGRAM FOR TODAY, LAST DAY OF WAR EXHIBIT

A special program has been arranged for today at the War Exposition at the Coliseum. The attendance at the exposition since its opening last Saturday has been very large, and although there have been many requests to continue it for a few days longer, the management has announced that the exposition positively will close at 10:30 tonight.

Commencing at 8 o'clock there will be a parade from Eighteenth and Locust streets to the Coliseum, headed by the Jefferson Barracks Band. In line will be the following societies: Alsace-Lorraine Mutual Aid Society; American Alsace-Lorraine Society; Belgian Benevolent Society; Society Francaise de St. Louis and the French Mutual Aid Society.

At the Coliseum, the "Marseillaise" will be sung by Madame Marie Pernet-McCarthy and the "Brabaconne," the Belgian National Hymn, by Alphonse Devos. Lieut. William H. Leahy of H Company, 138th Infantry, will talk on his experiences at the front.

A miniature model of the famous French 75 millimeter cannon, was added to the exhibits yesterday.

NEW FIRE MARSHAL MEASURE PREPARED

Insurance Superintendent Harty's Bill Incidentally Would Double His $3000 Salary.

Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18.—A. L. Harty, State Superintendent of Insurance, has prepared for introduction in the Legislature a bill creating the office of State Fire Marshal, to detect arson cases. Incidentally the proposed bill increases the salary of the superintendent from $3000 to $6000 a year.

The effort this year will be the third attempt to provide for a Fire Marshal in Missouri, the others, two and four years ago, having failed to pass more than one branch of the Legislature. Harty has compiled statistics showing that in 1917 the fire loss in Missouri was more than $7,500,000, and that a considerable part of this loss was due to fires which were of suspected or proven incendiary origin.

It is his contention that, through the activity of a properly organized force under a State Fire Marshal, there would be more successful prosecutions in arson cases; that, therefore, the number of arson cases would decrease, and that, as a consequence, the amounts paid out by insurance companies would be less, and lower insurance rates would result.

Salary Increase Provision.

Under his bill the State Insurance Superintendent is ex-officio State Fire Marshal at a salary of $3000 a year, in addition to his duties and present salary of $3000 a year as insurance superintendent. He would appoint a Chief Deputy Fire Marshal at $3000 a year, and such other deputies as he might deem necessary at such "reasonable" salaries as he might fix.

In addition, all municipal fire marshals, and chiefs of fire departments, would be special assistants to the State Fire Marshal without pay, and in cities, towns and villages which had no fire marshals or fire departments, the town marshal would be such assistant. Assistants who receive no compensation from their regular official positions would be paid 50 cents for each fire they reported properly to the State department, and 15 cents per mile for each mile traveled to and from the fire.

The State Fire Marshal is charged with the duty of enforcing all laws and ordinances of cities and of the State relating to the prevention of fires, the storage, sale or use of combustible materials and explosives, the construction and maintenance of fire alarm systems and fire extinguishing equipment, the construction and regultaion of fire escapes, the suppression of arson and the investigation of the cause, origin and circumstances of fires, and the means and adequacy of exits from factories, asylums, hospitals, churches, schools, halls, theaters and all other places in which persons gather in numbers.

He is empowered to enter any premises for purposes of inspection, and may order combustible or inflammable materials or refuse removed. Failure to obey his orders in these respects or as to other precautionary measures, subjects the owner or occupant of the premises to a penalty of from $10 to $50 a day for each day's refusal to comply. The owner or occupant, however, has the right of appeal from the deputy fire marshal to the State Fire Marshal, and from him to the Circuit Court.

Could Reduce Insurance.

An important feature of the bill is that the fire marshal is empowered to inquire as to the amount of insurance carried on any property and, if the amount is in excess of the value of the property insured he can compel the companies carrying the insurance to reduce the amount.

Insurance companies are required to report all fire losses on insured property, full details of the loss and any information they have acquired as to the cause of the fire. The keeping of a complete record of all fires in the State, furnished by the deputies and assistants in every town and village, is provided for.

His powers are to include the regulation of the keeping, storage, sale, manufacture, handling and transportation of all highly inflammable materials, including fireworks and firecrackers.

In carrying out his duties he was given power to summon witnesses to testify before him under oath, and to produce books and papers. The examination of witnesses may be either public or private, as he may determine in each case, and if he finds cause to believe that a fire was of incendiary origin it is made his duty to lay the facts before the Prosecuting Attorney (or Circuit Attorney in St. Louis), and ask for warrants for those against whom he has evidence. If the local prosecuting official refuses to act, the fire marshal is directed to lay the matter before the Attorney General, who is directed to proceed with the prosecution.

The entire costs of the fire marshal's department, it is provided, are to be paid from fees derived by the State Insurance Department. Last year, Harty said, the Insurance Department received more than $100,000 in excess of the cost of administering the insurance laws.

$100,000 ASKED FOR IN SUIT

W. A. Callahan of Chicago yesterday filed suit for $100,000 damages, alleging breach of contract, against the Nevin Chemical Co., 6300 West Florissant avenue. He asserts that last November the Nevin company decided to increase its capital stock from $300,000 to $1,000,000 and employed him to sell the new stock. He was to get a commission of $25 a share, he says.

After he had made his plan to sell the stock and spent $5000 on preliminary promotion work, the company failed to increase the capitalization, it is alleged.

DR. CANNADAY
Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now; your very life may be at stake.

CIVIC LEAGUE FOR RECALLING KIEL AND ANNULING HIS U. R. DEAL

Report of Committee Says That Mayor's Action Was Beyond His Authority and Settlement Could Be Ignored.

SILENT ON RECALL OF NOLTE, ALOE

New Stress on Need of a Receivership to Eliminate the Water and to Provide Adequate Street Car Service.

The recall of Mayor Kiel is recommended, and legal proceedings to annul his franchise deal with the United Railways Co. are proposed, in a report submitted by the United Railways Committee of the Civic League, and approved by the league's executive board at a meeting yesterday afternoon.

In Mayor Kiel's first announcement of the agreement, made a week ago, he said that the company had promised to pay the back mill tax, about $2,500,000, in 10 annual installments, without further contest, and to pay the future tax as it comes due; and that he and City Counselor Daues, on behalf of the city, had agreed to withdraw the city's appeal in the suit in which it was attacking the company's Jefferson avenue franchise, and which Circuit Judge Cave had decided against the city. Two days later, a stipulation was made public which stated that it was the city's purpose to validate all the company's franchises until 1939.

Frank P. Crunden, president of the league, and former member of the City Council, presided at the meeting of the executive board. The United Railways Committee, which made the report, consists of John D. Johnson, lawyer, chairman; L. Wade Childress, president Columbia Transfer Co.; C. H. Morrill of W. H. Markham & Co., insurance; C. J. Rippin, transportation commissioner, Merchants' Exchange; Stratford Morton, of Morton & Morton, insurance; A. S. Werremeyer, printer; James A. McVoy, secretary Central States Life Insurance Co.; Wirt Wright, president National Stock Yards Bank; H. Bortin, civil engineer, and R. H. Calkins, special agent Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Legal Committee Decided On.

The executive board decided to create a ways and means committee of three or five members, to be appointed by the president of the league, to seek, by any legal means which may exist, the annulment of all or a part of the Mayor's concessions to the company.

Secretary Budenz of the Civic League, in a typewritten statement which accompanied the report, said it demanded "the recall of Mayor Kiel at least." However, the report makes no definite suggestion that anyone else be recalled. Before the meeting, it had been suggested that the recall movement include Comptroller Nolte and President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen, the Mayor's two colleagues on the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, whose support the Mayor claimed in his first statement. Nolte has stood by the Mayor thus far, but Aloe has said that he approved the deal only as relating to Jefferson avenue, and had no idea that a general validating of franchises was intended.

If a movement to recall the Mayor were successful, Aloe, who is now Vice Mayor, would succeed to the office.

The report says that, if Mayor Kiel is recalled, the entire arrangement made by him, with the possible exception of that part affecting the Jefferson avenue franchise, can be ignored by the person succeeding to the office of Mayor. The agreement, by which it was intended to validate all the company's franchises until 1939, is declared to be void, and beyond the Mayor's powers.

Concessions to Company.

The report takes the ground that the so-called compromise arrangement is really a concession, at every point, by the city. The company had lost the mill tax suits, it is stated, and was liable to immediate judgments, and the permission to extend the payments over a 10-year period is a concession by the city to the company, not a concession by the company to the city.

The report also takes the ground that a receivership is needed, to remove the company's heavy overcapitalization, and that a receivership would not interrupt service, and would probably mean an improvement in service. Until such a reorganization takes place, it is declared, the company cannot render adequate service at a reasonable fare. Therefore, it is held, the Mayor did

Mass Meeting Today to Start Plans for Recall of the Mayor

A MASS MEETING will be held at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon at the Central Library, Fourteenth and Olive streets, as the first step towards stimulating public sentiment in support of the determination of the Citizens' Referendum League to circulate petitions for the recall of Mayor Kiel. This is an outcome of the mill-tax-franchise deal, by which the Mayor has recognized the validity of all the United Railways franchises until 1939.

Signatures to the number of 33,486 would be required, and it is predicted by S. H. Laws, member of the Executive Committee of the league, that they can be obtained in a week or 10 days. The committee, at a meeting Friday night, instructed the secretary to have the necessary blanks prepared at once, and announced that 1600 men will solicit signatures of voters.

CLAIRVOYANT FAILS TO DIVINE A 'TRAP,' AND IS ARRESTED

Mrs. Rosa Hartman Not Mistaken About "Unusual Influence" About Policewoman.

Mrs. Rosa Hartman, a clairvoyant, was arrested yesterday after she had divined many things about a woman customer, but had failed to discover one important fact, namely, that the customer was a policewoman.

Policewoman Hoch went to Mrs. Hartman's home, 2313 South Eighteenth street, ostensibly to have her fortune told.

"There is something very unusual about you," chanted the medium.

"You don't say!" exclaimed Miss Hoch.

"There is an unusual influence about you," repeated the medium.

"I'll say there is," rejoined Miss Hoch, "but how did you know it?"

The palmist went right on. "You ought to be a medium yourself," she said. "There are unseen powers near you."

Miss Hoch thought of her walking partner, who was standing outside waiting for the signal, but said nothing.

"In about four visits I could develop you into a wonderful medium," continued the seeress.

"Would I be any better than you?" inquired Miss Hoch, and Mrs. Hartman replied that she would be "at least as good."

"Well, if I wouldn't be any better I'd better stick to the force, for I am a policewoman, and you are under arrest," confided Miss Hoch, as she broke up the seance.

JUDGE SWINK WINS STATE FAIR PRESIDENCY BY FLIP OF COIN

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18.—After a hot, but friendly, contest for presidency of the State Fair Board had resulted in a tie vote, which could not be untied, today, Judge E. E. Swink of Farmington was elected over Col. Arthur T. Nelson, the "apple king" of Lebanon.

Both men turned up with seven votes. Each voted for the other consistently, and the deadlock continued. Finally Col. Nelson arose and walked to the center of the room. "Judge," he said, "if I can't be president of the fair, I'd rather see you elected than any man in Missouri. Let's flip a dollar—heads or tails."

"Heads," promptly retorted the Judge.

The chairs were pushed back and every member watched intently the coin as it rose and fell, rolled and turned, and finally lay still.

"You win, Judge," said Nelson, and Judge Swink's election was made unanimous.

ST. LOUISAN NAMED IN FOUR CASUALTY REPORTS, AT HOME

W. B. Adams Says Official Errors as to His Fate in France Were Probably Due to His Loss of Tags.

COMPANY SENT TO SACRIFICE ATTACK

Won French Decoration for Heroism Under Fire, Was Wounded, Gassed and Marvels at Escape.

Private William B. Adams Jr. of the Twenty-third Infantry, A. E. F., who was officially reported missing in action, wounded and in the hospital, killed in action, captured by the Germans and held in a prison camp, returned to St. Louis yesterday from an overseas casual detachment at Camp Dodge, Io., from which he was discharged Thursday. The conflicting reports were erroneous.

Actually, Adams was wounded and sent to hospitals in the rear. He explains that mistaken reports concerning his whereabouts might have arisen April 10, when he was first sent to the hospital, where he lost his identification tags. He wears the Croix de Guerre, with one star awarded for heroic conduct under fire.

Adams, who is 22 years old and who resides at 4104 Flad avenue, was drafted in September, 1917, and went to Camp Lewis, Wash. He was sent overseas and later transferred to the Twenty-third Infantry. On March 17 he had his first taste of the trenches. His company, brigaded with the French, took over a sector before Verdun. April 6 volunteers were asked for to go into No Man's Land to bring in a severely wounded Lieutenant. With another chap, he volunteered, and it is for this exploit that he received the French decoration. He tells it thus:

How He Won Decoration.

"We went out after the Lieutenant, but when we got him, after much crawling, he had been dead some time. We carried him in anyway, under a hot machine-gun fire from the German trenches only about 100 yards away. How we escaped being hit is a wonder. By golly, I was lucky. The fellow that went out with me was bumped off an hour afterwards by a high-explosive shell.

"But that wasn't the worst. Four days later three of us were carrying back some salvage when we ran into a German machine gun nest. I laid down flat and crawled up under the shelter of a rock wall next to a shattered frame hut. I had no sooner got there than 'bing'—along came a high explosive shell and knocked the hut endways. A flying joist hit me on the shoulder and dislocated it, and I spent the next five weeks in the hospital.

"When I rejoined the company, late in May, I was told that our outfit was going back to rest camp. Well, that wasn't so bad, we thought. They took us through Meux in motor trucks and loaded us down with a few bandoliers of ammunition. We knew then we would see no rest camp. It turned out that our orders had been changed, and we were to be sent into the lines as shock troops to ste mthe German advance on Paris.

"We went post haste to the Paris road, where the infantry started to dig in. We were just finishing our dugouts when we saw the Germans coming over a hill in mass formation—taking life easy. They knew there were no French in the vicinity and they apparently expected no Americans. Well, the machine gunners up the road began mowing them down and forced the Germans to dig in, too. We were at Belleau wood.

Desperate Fake Attack.

"That night we advanced a few hundred yards and dug in, and in the morning we learned that two companies were to be sacrificed. My company and another were scheduled to make a fake attack while the Marines pulled off the big show. We were supposed to advance down a little hill. My company numbered 250 men and only 47 came through. We went down the hill in the face of a nasty machine gun fire and laid there at the foot two hours until the Marines attacked and the Germans fell back. Our dead and wounded were lying all about, and it was impossible to aid them or to go forward or to retreat. That would have been sure death. It sure was hell.

"We were leapfrogged—that is, relieved—by another company, and we held that position until the end of June. During a successful attack I was sent to take 34 prisoners to the rear. No. 33 prisoners. One of 'em, a big six-foot guy, got sarcastic and made slurring remarks about the American army and a little fellow bumped him off. We had orders not to take any prisoners anyway, but so many surrendered that we had to take some. I was gassed trying to rejoin my company on my way across what had been

CHAS. P. JOHNSON IN GOOD HEALTH ON 83D BIRTHDAY

Relatives and Friends Fill Home of Former Lieutenant-Governor With Flowers.

Former Lieutenant Governor Charles P. Johnson, St. Louis' best known criminal law practitioner, celebrated his eighty-third birthday surrounded by members of his family in his home at 4300 Washington avenue last night. The Johnson home was filled with flowers, the gifts of relatives and friends who remembered both him and his wife, the latter having celebrated her fortieth birthday Friday.

Gov. Johnson did not vary on his birthday from his routine, and after his cold shower bath and a hearty breakfast, went to his office in the Title Guaranty Building.

Mrs. Johnson said the secret of her husband's good health was his fondness for all good things to eat, and his love for the picture show which, she said, he attends almost nightly.

"The way to gain a ripened age," said Gov. Johnson, "is to take things easy and be temperate in all things. Don't deny yourself anything that is enjoyable. Read good books. Keep your mind at ease and don't worry. I have made it a rule of life to help others as much as I can. Don't forget to love everybody who ought to be loved."

DEMOBILIZATION OF TENTH DIVISION BEGINS WEDNESDAY

Camp Funston Soldiers Will Be Discharged as Fast as Railroads Can Transport Them.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 18.—The demobilization of the entire Tenth Division at Camp Funston, regular army men excepted, was ordered today. Major-General Leonard Wood, commandant of the Central Department and of Camp Funston, received the word from Camp Funston today while he was addressing a City Club luncheon. Gen. Wood said the demobilization would begin Wednesday.

The Tenth Division contains several thousand St. Louis men, and many more men from Missouri counties.

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S FAME AS WRITER? "IT'S ALL WRONG"

Clerks of the Board of Aldermen Could Not Make Out His Signature to Letter.

Clerks of the Board of Aldermen are convinced that as to Winston Churchill's fame as a writer, "It's all wrong, Spencer." They would like to have a look at the printer who sets up the former St. Louisan's novels. As a writer, they affirm, Churchill is a fine imitator of a scratching hen.

A letter arrived the other day, and Clerk Nicolai, after puzzling over it a long time, gave up the job. "The person who wrote this writes like a chicken," he growled. Others tried to decipher the hieroglyphics, with no better success.

Then Archie Webster, former newspaper reporter, now secretary to the Board of Aldermen, made out that the signature was "Winston Churchill," and gradually decoded part of the letter. It proved to be an acknowledgment of the resolution of the Board of Aldermen thanking Churchill for the foreword he wrote in the City Plan Commission's report.

AMERICAN PRESS IN NEW DEMANDS FOR PUBLICITY

Peace Conference Asked to Permit Five Correspondents From United States to Sit in Each Session.

PLAN TO PREVENT ANY MENACE IN SECRECY

Writers Want Announcement of Subjects to Be So Discussed and Country Which Requests It.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The representatives of the American newspaper men here today, in acknowledging the receipt of the Supreme Council's decision regarding publicity, requested that, in case secret sessions are held, the names of countries presenting motions and the subjects of the motions should be announced later. They demanded a minimum of five press seats for the Americans with priority for the three press associations serving newspapers generally.

In response to a request presented today, it was decided to permit all regularly accredited American correspondents to attend the opening session of the peace congress today.

Following is the text of the communication sent by the American newspaper men to the supreme council:

"The American press delegation acknowledges the reply of the peace conference to the resolutions addressed to them. The delegation notes that the decision 'That representatives of the press shall be admitted to the meetings of the full conference' is an acceptance of the principle of direct press representation for which the press of America, Great Britain and Italy and smaller nations have contended.

"The value of this principle, however, turns on the extent and frequency of limitations in practice. The peace conference announces its intention to limit it to the extent that 'upon necessary occasions the deliberations of the conference may be held in camera.' Without assent on our part to this limitation we trust that if ever it is applied, the public will be advised through the press at the outset of each session in camera of the subject to be discussed and the name of the delegate or delegation making the motion to go in camera and at the close of the session the conclusions or agreement reached.

"In view of the fact that we have not been advised to the contrary we assume that any rule designed to prohibit communications between individual delegates and the press on the subjects of the conference has not been abrogated and that the press is to have access to the verbatim record of proceedings.

"We call the attention of the peace conference to our request for not fewer than five direct press representatives at each session of the conference, and we submit that because of the manner in which the several press associations serve the newspapers of America and because of the attendance upon the conference of numerous individual press representatives the American newspapers cannot carry on their business of informing their vast public with fewer than five representatives."

Wilson's Address at Opening of Conference a Tribute to Clemenceau

PARIS, Jan. 18.

FOLLOWING is the address of President Wilson at the opening session of the peace conference:

"Mr. Chairman: It gives me great pleasure to propose as permanent chairman of the conference, Mr. Clemenceau, the president of the council.

'I would do this as a matter of custom. I would do this as a tribute to the French republic. But I wish to do it as something more than that. I wish to do it as a tribute to the man.

'France deserves the precedence not only because we are meeting at her capital and because she has undergone some of the most tragical suffering of the war, but also because her capital, her ancient and beautiful capital has so often been the center of conferences of this sort, on which the fortunes of large parts of the world turned.

"It is a very delightful thought that the history of the world, which has so often centered here, will now be crowned by the achievements of this conference—because there is a sense in which this is the supreme conference of the history of mankind.

"More nations are represented here than were ever represented in such a conference before. The fortunes of all peoples are involved. A great war is ended, which seemed about to bring a universal cataclysm. The danger is passed. A victory has been won for mankind and it is delightful that we should be able to record these great results in this place.

"But it is more delightful to honor France because we can honor her in the person of so distinguished a servant. We have all felt in our participation in the struggles of this war the fine steadfastness which characterized the leadership of the French in the hands of Mr. Clemenceau. We have learned to admire him, and those of us who have been associated with him have acquired a genuine affection for him.

"Moreover, those of us who have been in these recent days in constant consultation with him know how warmly his purpose is set towards the goal of achievement to which all our faces are turned. He feels as we feel, as I have no doubt everybody in this room feels, that we are trusted to do a great thing, to do it in the highest spirit of friendship and accommodation and to do it as promptly as possible in order that the hearts of men may have fear lifted from them and that they may return to those purposes of life which will bring them happiness and contentment and prosperity.

"Knowing his brotherhood of heart in these great matters, it affords me a personal pleasure to propose that Mr. Clemenceau shall be the permanent chairman of this conference."

Lloyd George's Address in Praise of Clemenceau

FOLLOWING is the address of the British Prime Minister at the opening session of the peace conference. Mr. Lloyd George said:

I count it not merely a pleasure but a great privilege that I should be expected on behalf of the British Empire delegates to support the motion of President Wilson. I do so for this reason, which he has so eloquently given expression to, as a tribute to the man. When I was a schoolboy Mr. Clemenceau was a compelling and a conspicuous figure in the politics of his native land, and his fame had extended far beyond the bounds of France.

Were it not for that undoubted fact, Mr. President, I should have treated as a legend the common report of your years. I have attended many conferences with Mr. Clemenceau, and in them all the most vigorous, the most enduring and the most youthful figure there has been that of Mr. Clemenceau. He has had the youthfulness, he has had the hopefulness and the fearlessness of youth. He is indeed the 'grand young man' of France, and I am proud to stand here to propose that he should take the chair in this great conference that is to settle the peace of the world.

I know of none better qualified, or as well qualified, to occupy this chair than Mr. Clemenceau. And I speak from my experience in its claim. He and I have not always agreed. We have very often agreed. We have sometimes disagreed and we have always expressed our disagreements very emphatically because we are ourselves.

But, although there will be delays, and inevitable delays, in the signing of peace, due to the inherent difficulties of what we have to settle, I will guarantee from my knowledge of Mr. Clemenceau that there will be no waste of time. And that is important.

The world is thirsting and hungering for peace. There are millions of people who want to get back to the world work of peace. And the fact that Mr. Clemenceau is in the chair will be proof that they will get there without any delays which are due to anything except the difficulties which are essential in what we have to perform. He is one of the great speakers of the world. But no one knows better than he that the best speaking is that which impels beneficent actions.

I have another reason. During the dark days we have passed through, his courage, his unfailing courtesy, his untiring energy, his inspiration, have helped the allies to triumph, and I know of no one to whom that victory is more attributable than the man who sits in this chair. In his own person, more than any living man, he represents the heroism, he represents the genius of the indomitable people of his land.

And for these reasons I count it a privilege that I should be expected to second this motion.

Clemenceau's Address Plea for Union and Sacrifice

PREMIER CLEMENCEAU, following his election as president of the peace conference, spoke as follows:

"You would not expect me to keep silence after what the two eminent statesmen, who have just spoken, have said. I cannot help expressing my great, my profound gratitude to the illustrious President of the United States, to the Prime Minister of Great Britain and to Baron Sonnino for the words I have just heard.

"Long ago, when I was young, as Mr. Lloyd George has recalled to you, when I was traveling in America and in England, I always heard the French reproached for an excess of courtesy, which sometimes went beyond the truth. As I listened to the American statesman and to the English statesman, I wondered whether they had not caught in Paris our national disease of courtesy. Nevertheless, gentlemen, I must say that my election is necessarily due to the old international tradition of courtesy to the country which has the honor to receive the peace conference in its capital.

New Confidence Comes.

"I wish also to say that this testimony of friendship, if they will allow to me the word on the part of President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George in particular, has touched me deeply because I see in it a new strength for all three of us to accomplish, with the co-operation of the entire conference, the arduous work which is entrusted to us. I gather from it a new confidence in the success of our efforts.

"President Wilson has special authority to say that this is the first time, in fact, that the world has ever seen assembled together a delegation of all the civilized nations of the earth.

"The greater the bloody catastrophe which has devastated and ruined one of the richest parts of France, the greater and more splendid must be the reparation—not only the material reparation, the vulgar reparation, if I dare speak so, which is due all of us, but the higher and nobler reparation of the new institution which we will try to establish in order that nations may at length escape from the fatal embrace of ruinous wars, which destroy everything, heap up ruins, terrorize the populace and prevent them from going freely about their work for fear of enemies which may rise up

PEACE CONGRESS OPENED; POINCARE CLEMENCEAU AND WILSON SPEAK

French Premier Elected President of Conference and Announces League of Nations Will Be Taken Up First — Responsibility for War and Labor Legislation Topics.

PRESIDENT PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO "TIGER"

Lloyd George Also Praises Aged Statesman, Who Says, "We Have Come as Friends, Let Us Leave as Friends."

By the Associated Press

PARIS, Jan. 18.—The peace congress was opened this afternoon in the great Salle de la Paix in the Foreign Office. The proceedings, which were confined to the election of Georges Clemenceau, the French Premier, as permanent chairman of the conference, an address of welcome by the President of the French republic, Raymond Poincare, and speeches by President Wilson, Premier Lloyd George and Baron Sonnino were characterized by expressions of lasting friendship and the apparent determination of the representatives of the various nations to come to an amicable understanding with respect to the problems to be decided by the conference.

When President Poincare spoke the entire assembly stood and the fact that, according to custom, no applause greeted his utterance, gave greater solemnity to the scene.

Three Large General Subjects.

M. Clemenceau's acceptance of the presidency of the Congress was both a feeling expression of personal gratitude and a definite outline of the great questions immeditaely ahead. Three of these larger general subjects he defined as responsibility for the war, responsibility for crimes during the war and international labor legislation. The league of nations, he declared, was at the head of the program for the next full session.

"Our ambition is a great and noble one," said M. Clemenceau. "We wish to avoid a repetition of the catastrophe which bathed the world in blood. If the league of nations is to be practicable we must all remain united. Let us carry out our program quickly and in an effective manner."

Referring to the authors of the war he said he had consulted two eminent jurists on the penal responsibility of the former German Emperor, and that each delegate would receive a copy of that report.

In all, 72 seats were provided for the opening session of the peace conference. On the outer side of the great horseshoe were arranged the Japanese, the British and Colonial delegates and the seat of the fifth British delegate. A chair for the fifth American delegate also was reserved immediately to the right of the table of honor.

The Italian, Belgian, Brazilian, Cuban, Haitian, Peruvian, Portuguese, Serbian, Czecho-Slovakian and Uruguayan delegates sat in order named. Across at the left wing of the table sat the Siamese, Rumanian, Polish, Liberian, Hedjaz, Guatemalan, Ecuadorian, Chinese and Bolivian delegations.

Delegations Arrive Early.

The delegations began to arrive at the foreign office soon after 2 o'clock. The first to arrive were the representatives of Japan, India and China in the order named. Marshal Foch arrived soon after the first delegations. He was followed by Secretary Lansing, Gen. Bliss, Admiral Benson and Commander Carter of the American commission.

As the delegations arrived they were met by fanfares of trumpets and accorded military honors by the troops. The Siamese and East Indians were in picturesque turbans.

President Wilson's arrival at 2:50 was the signal for a demonstration from the crowds. The President passed into the ante chamber where M. Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, awaited and conducted him to the council room.

Already the chamber was crowded with delegates, who greeted President Wilson warmly as he passed toward the table of honor. Here he was joined by Secretary Lansing, Henry White and Gen. Bliss, and exchanged greetings with the British and many other delegates.

Just at 3 o'clock a ruffle of drums and blare of trumpets announced the approach of M. Poincare. The French President was escorted by the group premiers to the head of the table, while a hush fell upon the assemblage as the moment arrived for the opening of the congress.

It was exactly three minutes past 3 o'clock when M. Poincare began his address and the peace congress came into being. The entire assemblage stood as the President spoke. President Wilson stood immediately at his right and listened attentively. M. Poincare spoke in an earnest, easy manner without declamatory effect, and, following usage, there was no applause or interruption.

Address Read in English.

M. Poincare spoke in French, and when he had concluded, an interpreter read the discourse in English.

As M. Poincare closed, he turned to receive the congratulations of President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George, and then withdrew, greeting each delegation as he retired.

President Wilson rose as M. Poincare made his exit. "It gives me great pleasure," he said, "to propose as permanent chairman of the conference Mr. Clemenceau."

President Wilson spoke in conversational voice, which, however, carried throughout the chamber as he paid eloquent tribute to the French Premier.

Premier Lloyd George seconded the nomination of M. Clemenceau, speaking earnestly of the distinguished services the French Premier had rendered in war and peace.

Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister, added Italy's tribute, whereupon the election of M. Clemenceau as presiding officer was made unanimous.

In a feeling address M. Clemenceau acknowledged the honor conferred upon him. He turned first to President Wilson and bowed his thanks, then to Lloyd George for the tribute he had paid him. It was not alone a tribute to him, he said, but to France.

"We have come together as friends," he exclaimed; "we must leave this hall as friends."

World League First Business.

Referring to the league of nations, M. Clemenceau declared it was already in the way of being achieved by the gathering of this conference.

He then turned to the program of the conference, which, he said, covered the following main subjects of general order:

"First, responsibility of the authors of the war; second, responsibility for the crimes committed during the war; third, legislation in relation to international labor.

All the Powers represented would be invited to present memoirs on these three questions. The Powers having particular interests, M. Clemenceau continued, would be asked to present further memoirs upon territorial, financial and economical questions.

"The league of nations will be placed at the head of the order of day of the next full session," M. Clemenceau announced, as he concluded his address. He paused for further suggestions of business and as none was made he declared the session adjourned.

It was 4:30 o'clock, and the opening session had lasted one hour and a half. No exact time was fixed for the reassembling of the full session of the conference, as that awaits the call of the supreme council of the five great Powers, which probably will meet Monday morning.

Meeting Open to Press.

The first formal session of the peace conference was opened freely to the press of all nations. How many of the succeeding sessions will be held in camera by the decisions of the conference has not been indicated, but the American newspaper men and probably also the British and Italian are repairing to reopen the question of publicity if they should decide that the flow of news is impeded by rules of secrecy.

In a formal communication to the conference, the Americans assumed that the rule forbidding the delegates to discuss the doings of the conference with the correspondents would not be enforced. While no announcement on this subject has been made, it is learned on the authority of delegates that the rule still obtains.

What action the correspondents will take probably will be developed next week, when the exact character of the press representation and the number to be admitted to the conference will be determined.

All the peace delegations held final meetings in the morning. The American delegation met at 10 o'clock, but President Wilson did not attend, remaining at the Murat mansion throughout the morning to rest.

The Foreign Office was the center of interest from an early hour as the crowds gathered and the final preparations were made for the opening of the congress. Bright skies greeted the plenipotentiaries for the first time in a fortnight, sunshine and a bracing air succeeding the weeks of rain.

Along the Quai d'Orsay the crowds awaited the appearance of the delegates. Toward midday the troops called out for the occasion began to take their assigned positions fronting the Palais Bourbon and the Foreign Office, with a guard of honor drawn up in the court leading to the entrance to the Foreign Office. The guard took the form of a double file of soldiers, through which the delegates were to pass.

Everything Ready.

The Salle d'Horloge, now rechristened the Salle de la Paix, in the Foreign Office, and one of the most splendid reception rooms in Europe, was early placed in readiness for the delegations of the various nations on entering to inaugurate the sittings of the full congress, the entire chamber having been rearanged for the special purpose to which it is now being put.

First, to catch the eye of the plenipotentiaries entering the hall, was the staute of peace, holding aloft the torch of civilization. This heroic marble figure stands directly behind the chair of Premier Clemenceau of France, the presiding officer. It seems as if the statue might have been placed in this position to exercise a controlling influence on the deliberations.

In front of the statue is spread the council table, covered with the traditional green baize of diplomacy. This table is in the form of a huge horseshoe. Across the upper end were nine seats of honor, for the presiding officer, the vice presidents and Premiers. On each side of the two arms of the horseshoe there were 15 seats, making 60 seats besides the nine at the head of the table.

Room in White and Gold.

Each delegate's chair is upholstered in bright red leather and before each place is a complete equipment of writing materials. The fittings of the room are in white and gold, with a frescoed ceiling bordered by dancing cupids. Four great cluster chandeliers hang from the ceiling, while five large windows, looking out over the Seine River cast a flood of light over the sumptuous apartment.

Leading from the council room is another large chamber overlooking the gardens. To this room the delegates can retire for consultations. A large table at one end suggested that refreshments would be served to the delegates.

Further on a gorgeous state dining-room, where luncheon and dinner may be served to the delegates in case protracted sessions are held. The whole suite of rooms is suggestive of elegance and beauty and the artistic taste of the French.

Distinguished Array.

The secretariat of the congress, yesterday evening completed the official list of the delegates. It includes a distinguished array of leading public figures from every section of the civilized globe and in personnel and in the interests represented it embraces probably one of the most notable gatherings of statesmen the world ever has seen.

President Poincare's Address Opening Peace Conference on Anniversary of Founding of German Empire

PARIS, Jan. 18.

PRESIDENT POINCARE'S speech in opening the peace conference this afternoon follows:

"Gentlemen: France greets and thanks you for having chosen as the seat of your labors the city which for more than four years the enemy has made his principal military objective and which the valor of the allied armies has victoriously defended against unceasingly-renewed offensives.

"Permit me to see in your decision the homage of all the nations that you represent toward a country which more than any other has endured the sufferings of war, of which entire provinces have been transformed into a vast battle field, and have been systematically laid waste by the invader, and which has paid the human tribute in death.

France's Sacrifices.

"France has borne these enormous sacrifices although she had not the slightest responsibility for the frightful catastrophe which has overwhelmed the universe. And at the moment when the cycle of horror is ending, all the Powers whose delegates are assembled here may acquit themselves of any share in the crime which has resulted in so unprecedented a disaster.

"What gives you the authority to establish a peace of justice is the fact that none of the peoples of whom you are the delegates has had any part in the injustice. Humanity can place confidence in you because you are not among those who have outraged the rights of humanity.

"There is no need of further information or of special inquiries into the origin of the drama which has just shaken the world. The truth, bathed in blood, has already escaped from the imperial archives. The premeditated character of the trap is today clearly proved.

Abominable Pretexts.

"In the hope of conquering first the hegemony of Europe and next the mastery of the world, the Central Empires, bound together by a secret plot, found the most abominable of pretexts for trying to crush Serbia and force their way to the East. At the same time they disowned the most solemn undertakings in order to crush Belgium and force their way into the heart of France.

"These are the two unforgettable outrages which opened the way to aggression. The combined efforts of Great Britain, France and Russia were exerted against that man-made arrogance.

"If, after long vicissitudes, those who wished to reign by the sword have perished by the sword, they have only themselves to blame. They have been destroyed by their own blindness.

"What could be more significant than the shameful bargains they attempted to offer to Great Britain and France at the end of July, 1914, when to Great Britain they suggested: 'Allow us to attack France on land and we will not enter the channel.'

"And when they instructed their ambassadors to say to France, 'We will only accept a declaration of neutrality on your part if you surrender to us Briey, Toul and Verdun.' It is in the light of these things, gentlemen, that all the conclusions you will have to draw from the war will take shape.

Right Was Threatened.

"Your nations entered the war successively, but came one and all to the help of threatened right. Like Germany, Great Britain had guaranteed the independence of Belgium. Germany sought to crush Belgium. Great Britain and France both swore to save her.

"Thus, from the very beginning of hostilities there came into conflict the two ideas which for 50 months were to struggle for the dominion of the world—the idea of sovereign force, which accepts neither control nor check, and the idea of justice, which depends on the sword only to prevent or repress the abuse of strength.

"Faithfully supported by her dominions and her colonies, Great Britain decided that she could not remain aloof from a struggle in which the fate of every country was involved. She has made, and her dominions and colonies have made with her, prodigious efforts to prevent the war from ending in the triumph of the spirit of conquest and the destruction of right.

"Japan, in her turn, only decided to take up arms out of loyalty to Great Britain, her great ally, and from the consciousness of the danger in which both Asia and Europe would have stood of the hegemony of which the Germanic Empires dreamed.

"Italy, who, from the first, had refused to lend a helping hand to German ambition, arose against an age-long foe only to answer the call of oppressed populations and to destroy at the cost of her blood the artificial political combination which took no account of human liberty.

"Rumania resolved to fight only to realize that national unity which was opposed by the same powers of arbitrary force. Abandoned, betrayed and strangled, she had to submission to an abominable treaty, the revision of which you will enact.

"Greece, whom the enemy for many months tried to turn from her traditions and destinies, raised an army only to escape attempts at domination of which she felt the growing threat.

"Portugal, China and Siam abandoned neutrality only to escape the strangling pressure of the Central Powers.

"Thus, it was the extent of German ambitions that brought so many peoples, great and small, to align themselves against the same adversary.

United States Enters.

"And what shall I say of the solemn resolutions taken by the United States in the spring of 1917, under the auspices of its illustrious President, Mr. Wilson, whom I am happy to greet here in the name of grateful France and, if you will allow me to say so, genetlemen, in the name of all the nations represented in this room.

'What shall I say of the many other American powers which either declared themselves against Germany—Brazil, Cuba, Panama, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Haiti, Honduras—or at least broke off diplomatic relations—Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Uruguay. From the north to the south the new world arose with indignation when it saw the empires of Central Europe, after having let loose the war without provocation and without excuse, carry it on with fire, pillage and the massacre of inoffensive beings.

Intervention by U. S.

"The intervention of the United States was something more, something greater than a great political and military event. It was a supreme judgment passed at the bar of history by the lofty conscience of a free people and their chief magistrate on the enormous responsibilities incurred in the frightful conflict which was lacerating humanity.

"It was not only to protect itself from the audacious aims of German megalomania that the United States equipped fleets and created immense armies, but also and above all, to defend an ideal of liberty over which it saw the huge shadow of the imperial eagle encroaching further every day. America, the daughter of Europe, crossed the ocean to rescue her mother from the humiliation of thraldom and to save civilization.

"The American people wished to put an end to the greatest scandal that has ever sullied the annals of mankind. Autocratic Governments having prepared in the secrecy of the chancellories and the general staffs a mad program of universal dominion, let loose their packs at the time fixed by their genius for intrigue and sounded the horns for the chase, ordering science (at the very time it was beginning to abolish distances, to bring men closer together and make life sweeter) to leave the bright sky toward which it was soaring and to place itself submissively at the service of violence; debasing the religious idea to the extent of making God the complacent auxiliary of their passions and the accomplice of their crimes—in short, counting as naught the traditions and wills of peoples, the lives of citizens, the honor of women and all those principles of public and private morality which we for our part have endeavored to keep unaltered throughout the war and which neither nations nor individuals can repudiate or disregard with impunity.

Clanking of Chains.

"While the conflict was gradually extending over the entire surface of the earth, the clanking of chains was heard here and there, and captive nationalities from the depths of their age-long jails cried out to us for help. Yes, more, they escaped to come to our aid.

"Poland came to life and sent us troops. The Czecho-Slovaks won their right to independence, in Siberia, in France and in Italy. The Jugo-Slavs, the Armenians, the Syrians and Levantines, the Arabs, all victims, long helpless or resigned, of the historic deeds of injustice; all the martyrs of the past, all the outraged in conscience, all the strangled in liberty, viewed the clash of arms and turned to us as their natural defenders.

"The war gradually attained the fullness of its first significance, and became in the full sense of the term a crusade of humanity for right, and if anything can console us, in part at least, for the losses we have suffered, it is assuredly the thought that our victory also is the victory of right. This victory is complete, for the enemy only asked for the armistice to escape from an irretrievable military disaster.

Interest of Justice.

'In the interest of justice and peace it now rests with you to reap from this victory its full fruits. In order to carry out this immense task you have decided to admit at first only the allied or associated powers in so far as their interests are involved in the debates the nations which remained neutral. You have thought that the terms of peace ought to be settled among ourselves before they are communicated to those against whom, we have fought the good fight.

"The solidarity which has united us during the war and has enabled us to win military success ought to remain unimpaired during the negotiations for and after the signing of the treaty."

It is not only the Governments but free peoples who are represented here. To the test of danger they have learned to know and help one another. They want their intimacy of yesterday to assure the peace of tomorrow. Vainly would our enemies seek to divide us. If they have not yet renounced their customary maneuvers, they will soon find that they are meeting today, as during the hostilities, a homeogenous block which nothing will be able to disintegrate. Even before the armistice you reached that necessary unity under the aid of the lofty moral and political truths of which President Wilson has nobly made himself the interpreter and in the light of these truths you intend to accomplish your mission.

"You will therefore seek nothing but justice, justice that has no favorites, justice in territorial problems, justice in financial problems, justice in economic problems. But justice is not inert, it does not submit to injustice.

'What it demands first, when it has been violated, are restitution and reparation for the peoples and individuals who have been despoiled or maltreated. In formulating this lawful claim it obeys netiher hatred nor an instinctive or thoughtless desire for reprisals. It pursues a two-fold object—to render to each his due and not to encourage crime through leaving it unpunished.

"What justice also demands, inspired by the same feeling, is the punshment of the guilty and effective guarantees against an active return of the spirit by which they are prompted and it is logical to demand that these guarantees should be given, above all, to the nations that have been and might again be most exposed to aggression, or threat to those who have many times stood in danger of being submerged by the periodic tide of the same invasion.

"Interpret People's Thoughts."

"What justice banishes is the dream of conquest and imperialism, contempt for national will, the arbitrary exchange of provinces between states, as though peoples were but articles of furniture or pawns in a game. The time is no more when diplomatists could meet to redraw with authority the map of the empires on the corner of a table. If you are to make the map of the world it is in the name of the peoples and one condition is that you shall faithfully interpret their thoughts and respect the right of nations, small and great, to dispose of themselves and to reconcile with these the equally sacred right of ethical and religious minorities—a formidable task which science and history, your two advisers, will contribute to assist and facilitate.

"You will naturally strive to secure the material and moral means of subsistence for all those people who are constituted or reconstituted into states, for those who wish to unite themselves to their neighbors, for those who divide themselves into separate units, for those who reorganize themselves, for those who divide themselves according to their regained traditions, and lastly for all those whose freedom you have already sanctioned or are about to sanction. You will not call them into existence to sentence them to death immediately because you would like your work in this, as in all other matters, to be fruitful and lasting.

"Establish League of Nations."

"While introducing into the world as much harmony as possible you will, in conformity with the fourteenth of the propositions unanimously adopted by the great allied Powers, establish a general league of nations which will be the supreme guarantee against any fresh assault upon the right of peoples. You do not intend this international association to be directed against anybody in the future. It will not of set purpose shut out anybody, but having been organized by the nations that have sacrificed themselves in the defense of right, it will receive from them its statutes and fundamental rules.

"It will lay down conditions concerning present or future adherence and so as to have for its essential aim the prevention as far as possible of renewals of wars it will, above all, seek to gain respect for the peace which you will have established and will find it the less difficult to maintain in proportion as this peace will in itself imply the greater realities of justice and safer guarantees of stability.

"By establishing this new order of things you will meet the aspirations of humanity, which, after the frightful convulsions of the blood-stained years, ardently wishes to feel itself protected by a union of free people against the ever possible revival of primitive savagery. An immortal glory will attach to the names of the nations and the men who have desired to co-operate in this grand work in faith and brotherhood and who have taken the pains to eliminate from the future peace causes of disturbance and instability.

"This very day 48 years ago—on the eighteenth of January, 1871—the German empire was proclaimed by an army of invasion in the chateau at Versailles. It was consecrated by the theft of two French provinces. It was thus a violation from its origin, and, by the fault of its founders, it was born in injustice. It has ended in oblivion.

"You are assembled in order to repair the evil that has been done and to prevent a recurrence of it. You hold in your hands the future of the world. I leave you gentlemen to your grave deliverations and declare the conference of Paris open."

If you attend to Pimples, Rashes and all skin troubles with Poslam, and do so promptly, they will not develop and spread.

Unless you have actually seen Poslam's work and know how readily it takes hold, stopping the itching at once, you will hardly believe its effects possible in so short a time.

GERMAN MISSION TO OPPOSE GOING BEYOND 14 POINTS

Delegates Will Ask for Return of Colonies—Scheidemann and Rantzau Chosen.

By the Associated Press.

BASLE, Jan. 18.—The German Government, according to a dispatch from Berlin, has appointed Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau, the Foreign Minister, and Philip Scheidemann as the heads of the German delegation to the peace conference. The Government has drawn up lines of policy which the German delegation "must follow."

The German delegation, the dispatch says, will oppose the demands of the allies which go beyond the program outlined by President Wilson. The delegation will seek the immediate suspension of all economic measures against Germany.

The German Government, according to the dispatch, will declare through its delegates its readiness in common with other states to disarm on land and sea and in the air. Germany, it is declared, already has realized the greater part of her disarmament under the terms of the armistice, and it is claimed that this fact renders unjustifiable the retention of her men as prisoners by the allies.

The Berlin dispatch further says that Germany will demand the return of her colonies. Germany, it adds, will recognize the principle of the right of self-determination which should be applied to Germany as it was before the war, especially as regards Alsace-Lorraine. The German delegates will support the creation of a League of Nations in accordance with the proposals of President Wilson.

CLEMENCEAU'S SPEECH A PLEA FOR UNION AND SACRIFICE

from one day to the next.

"It is a great, splendid and noble ambition which has come to all of us. It is desirable that success should crown our efforts. This cannot take place unless we all have firmly fixed and clearly determined ideas on what we wish to do.

"I said in the chamber a few days ago, and I wish to repeat here, that success is not possible unless we remain firmly united. We have come together as friends; we must leave this hall as friends.

Co-Operation First Necessity.

"That, gentlemen, is the first thought that comes to me. All else must be subordinated to the necessity of a closer and closer union among the nations who have taken part in this great war, and to the necessity of remaining friends. For the league of nations is here. It is yourself. It is for you to make it live and to make it live we must have it really in our hearts.

"As I told President Wilson a few days ago, there is no sacrifice that I am not willing to make in order to accomplish this, and I do not doubt that you all have the same sentiment. We will make these sacrifices, but on the condition that we endeavor impartially to conciliate interests apparently contradictory, on the higher plane of a greater, happier and better humanity.

"That, gentlemen, is what I had to say to you. I am touched beyond words at the evidence of good will and friendship which you show me.

"The program of this conference has been laid down by President Wilson. It is no longer the peace of a more or less vast territory, no longer the peace of continents; it is the peace of nations that is to be made. This program is sufficient in itself. There is no superfluous word. Let us try to act swiftly and well."

CHARGES AGAINST HUMBERT SHOWN TO HAVE BEEN FALSE

Investigation Proves That Paris Editor Communicated No Information to Germans.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—Investigations have established the falsity of accusations made against Charles Humbert, who was charged with communicating to Germany the contents of two documents relative to the national defense.

Charles Humbert, a member of the French Senate and former editor of the Paris newspaper Le Journal, became involved during the trials of Bolo Pasha, who was executed for treason, and the directors of the Germanophile newspaper, Bonnet Rouge. Revelations during the inquiry into the Bolo Pasha case led to the arrest of Humbert, in whose newspaper Bolo Pasha had bought an interest with money that came from the German Foreign Office, through banking houses in New York.

While the case was pending, it was alleged that fresh evidence of communicating with the enemy had been discovered. This was early last August, and the courtmartial of Humbert, fixed for Aug. 26, was postponed. Late in September a formal demand was laid before the French Senate for the consent of that body to prosecute Humbert on a charge of treason, the penalty for which under the French code is death. No authoritative line of the evidence said to have been found in the case was ever given out.

BOLSHEVIKI OCCUPY MITAU

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—Mitau, the capital of Courland, has been occupied by the Bolsheviki, according to a German wireless dispatch received here today.

The Germans were obliged to leave behind numerous guns and supplies of ammunition. After the Germans evacuated Mitau fire started, destroying a great number of houses in the center of the town.

German Empire Founded 48 Years Ago Yesterday

Peace Congress Opened on Anniversary of Crowning of William Hohenzollern's Grandfather at Versailles.

Yesterday was the forty-eighth anniversary of the creation of the German empire. The only celebration of the event, so far as reported, was the opening of the peace conference, which is to decide what is to become of the German empire, and to determine the extent of its punishment for its crimes. In his opening address, President Poincare alluded to the event of 48 years before, and said the empire born in injustice had ended in oblivion.

Jan. 18, 1871, Wilhelm I, King of Prussia, grandfather of the present William Hohenzollern, crowned himself as German Emperor in the palace of the French monarchs at Versailles, where later sessions of the peace conference will be held. This ceremony came after the armies of Prussia, Bavaria, and the other German states, having crushed French resistance by the victory of Sedan, had approached the city of Paris.

The coronation took place on the anniversay of the coronation of the first King of Prussia, who crowned himself in the palace church of Koenigsberg, Jan. 18, 1701.

The Hall of Mirrors, the most stately of the rooms in the palace of Louis XIV, was the scene of the coronation. A historian of Germany relates that, up to the very last, Wilhelm made difficulties, insisting that he be crowned Emperor of Germany and not merely German Emperor, as the other German sovereigns desired, and as Bismarck insisted. "The disagreement grew very stormy," it is related, "and the old King (he was 74) lost his temper and brought his hand down heavily on the table."

Bismarck, just before the ceremony, learned that the Grand Duke of Baden, who was to read the solemn announcement, had been prevailed on to proclaim William as Emperor of Germany. Bismarck, it is related, prevailed on the Grand Duke to renew the former remonstrance, and at the last moment the King gave in.

"He took the interference so ill," the historian says, "that he publicly slighted his mentor as he entered the hall, and, walking past him, shook hands with the Generals behind.

"The forts of Paris were belching forth their last defiant shots as the Hohenzollern raised the crown of a united fatherland and placed it upon his own head. The coolness with the Chancellor," it is added, "lasted but a moment."

Emperor William later was crowned at Koenigsberg.

PROTECTION SEEMS ASSURED FOR GERMAN ELECTIONS

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Friday, Jan. 17.—"Liebknecht and Luxemburg fell as victims of their own terrorist tactics," said Philip Scheidemann, Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the Ebert Cabinet, in a speech at Cassel today.

The Socialist newspaper, Vorwaerts, while condemning the lynching of the Spartacan leaders, also sees in their death the natural result of the victims' appeal to the lowest passions and violence.

While the Independent Socialists of Bavaria and other parts of Germany are endeavoring to consolidate the two Socialist parties independent of Greater Berlin, in their two newspapers they appeal to the workingmen for a general strike as a protest against the "domination of military anarchy." The appeal closes: "Down with the Ebert-Scheidemann Government."

The work of rounding up the criminal element and unauthorized bearers of arms is proceeding satisfactorily and full protection for Sunday's elections in Greater Berlin for the National Assembly seems assured.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—A German Government wireless message says that Philip Scheidemann, the Foreign Secretary, announced today that the Government had decided to convoke the National Assembly Feb. 16.

AIR-MAPPING PLANES REACH SCOTT FIELD ON RETURN TRIP

The two De Haviland-4 airplanes which passed over St. Louis Dec. 27, en route from Elligton Field, Houston, Tex., to Detroit, are now on their return trip. The planes left Indianapolis early yesterday and arrived at Scott Field, near Belleville, at 2:35 p. m., covering the 235 miles in 150 minutes. The planes are manned by Lieuts. E. H. Hill, B. M. Jones, J. W. Wegner and Lawson Henry.

Lieut. Jones told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that the trip from Ellington Field to the Great Lakes and return to Scott Field, a distance of 2031 miles, was covered in 1183 minutes flying time. This was done despite the fact that the flyers encountered most adverse weather conditions from Belleville north. This consisted of repeated snowstorms and temperatures below zero.

According to Adam's father, who is a salesman, the son on July 18 was reported missing in action since July 1. On Sept. 10 he received word in a Government telegram that the boy was wounded and in the hospital. Two days later the son's name appeared in the casualty list among those killed in action. An official postal card on Sept. 14 announced that young Adams had been taken prisoner and was in a German prison camp. Later another report confirmed the fact that he was in the hospital recovering from wounds. He has a brother, Clifford, in an officers' training camp in France.

MAYOR GAVE ALL U. R. WANTED, CITY GOT NOTHING, SAYS CIVIC LEAGUE

U. R. ATTORNEY TELLS WHAT CITY GAINED BY DEAL

Five Reasons Assigned by Thomas E. Francis for Saying Settlement Was "Good Thing for Public."

BELIEVES SERVICE WILL BE IMPROVED

Admits That Receivership Was Impending When Stipulation Was Arranged by Mayor and Company.

Attorney Thomas E. Francis, representing the United Railways Co., when asked last night by a Post-Dispatch reporter to amplify a statement he had made earlier in the day that the agreement entered into by Mayor Kiel and the United Railways would be a "good thing for the public at large," said that he had several reasons for declaring that the public would be benefited.

"In the first place," said he, "the city secured payment of the judgment against the St. Louis Transit Co. for approximately a quarter of a million. The Transit company is bankrupt and the liability of the United Railways for the payment of this judgment has been disputed. In a case involving this question the Supreme Court has heard arguments three times without coming to a decision. There is also a grave question as to whether the statute of limitations has not barred an action on this judgment against the United Railways.

"In the second place, the city secured payment of a claim against the St. Louis & Suburban Railway for mill tax amounting to $76,000. There was a serious question of the liability of the United Railways upon this claim.

"In the third place, the courts might have held the mill tax ordinance invalid upon a new point raised in the present cases. Former City Counselor Baird, in an opinion given to the Mayor, held that this point invalidated the ordinance. (Baird, in an opinion given Mayor Kiel in June, 1913, declared the old mill tax ordinance was invalid because it violated provisions of the old city charter, under which it was drawn.)

A Changing Court.

"In the fourth place, the Supreme Court might overrule its decision in the former mill tax cases. This matter was decided by a vote of 4 to 3. The three Judges who held the mill tax ordinance was void are still on the bench, while two of the four Judges who concurred in the majority opinion have retired. If, on a hearing anew, the Judges who passed upon the former case remained of the same opinion, the vote of only one of the new Judges would be necessary to overrule the former decision.

"In the fifth place, the city secured an assured income of $500,000 per year—$250,000 from accrued, and $250,000 from current mill tax."

Francis was asked if the public would derive any benefit from the mill tax agreement in improved or extended street car service. His attention was called to a passage in the Mayor's inaugural address in which Kiel said that an amicable agreement between the United Railways and the City of St. Louis would result in better street car accommodations, including the extension of certain lines into newly-built territory.

"Most assuredly it will," he replied, "but I am not at liberty to discuss the policy of the company in that respect. That is a matter for the Board of Directors. As far as the expenditure of funds for improvements and extensions is concerned the company is in the hands of the Public Service Commission, which regulates such things."

The statement of Mayor Kiel that the agreement had lifted a cloud from the company's franchises and placed the company in a position where it can finance itself properly was called to Francis' attention.

Feared Receivership Impending.

"Does that mean that the company can borrow money, and, if so, for what purpose?" he was asked.

"It means that, with the mill tax controversy unsettled and the possibility of a judgment being obtained against the company, the United Railways was in danger of falling into the hands of receivers," he replied. "We were in no position to pay the mill tax without financial aid."

"Had the fact that the $3,235,000 lent to the company by the United States Government is past due, anything to do with the company's fear of a receivership?" he was asked.

"That had no connection with it," he said. "I know that it is the company's intention to give St. Louis the best street car service possible, and that the agreement with the Mayor is a step in that direction. The attack on the Mayor is a shame. He told the truth when he said that his action was as 'clean as a whistle.'"

It was said at the home of City Counselor Daues, who was sought for an interview, that he was abed as the result of a severe cold and could not be seen.

Text of the Civic League Report, Urging the Recall of Mayor Kiel and Revision of U. R. Deal

Following is the text of the Civic League's Report on the mill tax settlement agreement in which the recall of Mayor Kiel is recommended; the revision of the agreement is urged:

THE so-called compromise agreement entered into by the Mayor, the City Counselor and the attorneys of the United Railways company is a maneuver of extraordinary boldness. Its sinister meaning is not at first apparent to the average citizen, who, bsuy with his own affairs, does not take the time to analyze its effect. Instinctively feeling that the Mayor, as the head of the city, is there to safeguard the city's interest, he accepts at their face value the explanations offered by the Mayor and these explanations have a surprising plausibility. The facts in the matter are that the city's interests have not been safeguarded. The compromise agreement is not a compromise in the implied meaning of that term. The United Railways Co. has conceded nothing whatsoever. The city has conceded everything and a principle of negotiation has ben introduced which, if it has legal standing, is an imminent menace to every property right which the city possesses. The whole transaction raises an issue which must be clearly met by the citizens of St. Louis. It is an open challenge to those who believe in the defense of public rights as opposed to private interests. It in reality brings about a crisis in the affairs of the city. In order to clearly comprehend the one-sidedness of the arrangement, it is only necessary to look through the explanations of the Mayor and the City Counselor, which, although at first view they take the color of plausibility, in reality do not stand investigation.

Everything Conceded for Nothing.

In the first place, it is claimed that mutual concessions were made. As a matter of fact no concession whatever was made by the United Railways Co. The mill tax was no longer a matter of controversy and compromise. The right of the city to levy and collect this tax was a right which had been adjudged and settled by the highest court of the land. The entire amount of the debt was immediately due and payable. An administration looking out for the welfare of the city could have, and would have by vigorous action, long since have forced the payment of this debt. In agreeing to pay this debt, the obligation of which was clearly established, the United Railways Co. made no concession whatever, but, on the contrary, in this very agreement itself, the city made a tremendous concession in permitting the payments to be distributed over a period of 10 years.

The Mayor claims to have been serving the city's interests in avoiding a receivership for the United Railways Co. The fact in the matter is he is working distinctly contrary to the city's interests in avoiding such a receivership. The public has by clever cabal and argument been led to believe that a receivership would mean that the service of the United Railways Co. would be stopped. This, of course, is not the case. A receivership is an expedient which has been devised for the handling of the difficulties of public and semi-public enterprises in order that their public services may not be interrupted. There will be no cessation of the operation of the street cars of the United Railways Co. if that company, or when that company is forced into the hands of a receiver, but, on the contrary, the probability is that such a receivership would immediately result in an improvement of the service.

Receivership Is Imperative.

On the other hand, the city will never be relieved of the problems of its street car service until the company has first gone through a receiver's hands. The over-capitalization of the company is notorious. With an actual valuation liberally estimated to be less than $40,000,000, its total capital issues, bonds and stocks, are in excess of $95,000,000. The continued effort to realize upon this $5,000,000 of fictitious assets, that is to pay dividends upon what does not exist, will always make it impossible for the company to render to the city adequate service at a reasonable fare. Moreover, the extraordinary legal and political activity in which the company itself must continually engage in its endeavor to maintain control over the legislative and administrative affairs of the city, and delay or avoid the payment of its just obligations, in the aggregate, represents a tremendous annual expenditure which must also be taken out of the service or added to the fare.

The city will never be relieved of its street car problems so long as a group of influential men in the city are interested in realizing this $55,000,000 of excess capitalization and continue their political and legal activity in order to accomplish this end. The solution of the problem can best be accomplished by forcing the company into a receivership through which a reorganization of the company could be effected, the water in the stock eliminated, and a system of management and operation established whose purposes would be to render service to the city for a reasonable compensation instead of having, as at present, a management which has interests directly to the contrary. Therefore, in avoiding a receivership, the Mayor and his fellow officials were not securing a concession for the city, but, on the contrary, were making a tremendous concession by the city and working directly contrary to the city's interests.

City's Rights Contracted Away.

It can be clearly seen, therefore, that no concessions whatever have been made by the United Railways Co., but, on the contrary, even in the two cases where it is claimed the company has made concessions, the exact opposite of the case is true, and concessions of enormous value have been made by the city.

In addition to these, still further and vastly graver concessions have been made by the Mayor and the City Counselor in contracting, or attempting to contract, away the city's rights. The case contesting the validity of the Jefferson avenue franchise, unlike the mill tax case for which it was exchanged, is a pending piece of litigation in the Missouri Supreme Court. Examination of the franchise would show anyone that the city has a most excellent opportunity to win the contest. The higher courts have consistently upheld the view that no powers are granted in franchises unless they are explicitly, clearly and unequivocally set forth. Doubt is fatal to any public grant, and the vagueness and uncertainty of the 1899 grant as far as the Jefferson avenue and other lines are concerned raises very strong doubt in that case. The City Counselor should have contested this question and not dropped it as he did.

Thus by agreement, the Mayor and the City Counselor have by contract given, or attempted to give, to the United Railways Co. franchise to operate street cars over the streets of the city of St. Louis, such franchises to extend for a period of 20 years.

Nothing Secured in Return.

Ordinarily, in granting franchises to a corporation a municipality will exact obligations in turn from that corporation. If the city grants to the corporation the right to operate street cars upon the streets which belong to the city, the city in turn ordinarily requires certain pledges from the company as to the character of service which will be rendered, and when such franchises are given by ordinance, the ordinance will contain the rules, regulations and conditions which are laid down and which must be lived up to by the company in the fulfillment of its obligations. In this contractural agreement between the Mayor and the City Counselor, on one hand, and the attorneys of the United Railways on the other, the city has made the great concession of granting to the company the right to use its streets for a period of 20 years and in turn has imposed no conditions whatsoever with regard to such uses. Not only is there no binding provision by which the city can control the character and the extent of the service to be rendered by the company, but through the device of the State Public Service Commission the company is in a position to secure an increase of fares every time it can allege some plausible and specious ground for so doing. For instance, scarcely has the agreement between the Mayor, the City Counselor and the United Railways been published than the president of the United Railways, Mr. McCulloch, hastens to appear with a public statement advocating an immediate increase of fares to 7 cents; showing that the whole design of the company is to make the people pay the mill tax by increasing the cost to them of their street car service

A Menace to Public Interest.

This whole proceeding of disposal of the city's property, or the city's equities, or the city's franchises, through the medium of a compromise agreement between individuals, involves a question, the gravity of which cannot be overestimated or overstated. If such an act should prove to have standing in law and equity, then there is no right which the city possesses and no property which it owns which are not thereby immediately placed in the greatest jeopardy. If the citizens of the city have no redress from an arbitrary action such as has been taken by the Mayor and the City Counselor, then the Mayor and the City Counselor could, with equal facility, make way with every right and every item of property which the city possesses.

All that would be necessary would be an agreement between those who desire to possess the property, on the one hand, and the Mayor and the City Counselor, on the other. The complicated process which in the past generation was so universally employed by public service corporations of bribing Municipal Assemblies, City Council, etc., would be rendered entirely unnecessary. All that would be required would be for those who desire the property to first take it, either by force or otherwise; next, have the city, through its Counselor, bring suit to recover the property; next, raise some alleged point of concession by those in possession of the property and then have the matter compromised by the Mayor and the City Counselor and the suit for recovery dismissed. Such a procedure is clearly opposite to common sense and human reason. It is clearly and manifestly opposite to the public welfare.

If City Were Private Corporation.

In private matters, should a representative or intrusted agent or official of a private corporation thus make way with that corporation's private property fraud proceedings would be immediately instituted and the property recovered. It is an obligation imposed upon the citizens of St. Louis to clearly establish whether their public rights are inferior to private rights; to determine definitely whether or not fraud has been committed in making way with the public's property and interests, for if they do not at present have any safeguard against this absurdly simple method under which grand larceny might be safely committed, then it is imperative that new legislation be immediately enacted to safeguard the public interests against depredations of this character.

This incident also brings clearly to the surface a subject which has been discussed under cover in many quarters throughout the city for a considerable length of time, and that subject is the political and legal activity of the United Railways Co. It is a matter of public comment by many men more or less intimately acquainted with political affairs in the city, that no one can be elected to any important office in the city unless he receives the approval of the United Railways Co. It is widely believed that the United Railways Co. is an active, powerful and even predominant political influence in the city. Public opinion generally has accepted it as a probability that the corporation is aligned with the political machine (either directly or indirectly) contributes to the machine and helps perfect and perpetuate the machine.

Whom Does the Mayor Represent?

If that which public sentiment accepts as a probability is a reality in fact, then there is raised immediately the question—Does the Mayor represent the city or the United Railways Co.? In his act in entering into this agreement with the United Railways Co., it is clear that he altogether failed to safeguard the city's interest, while, on the other hand, it is equally clear he has made concessions of extraordinary value to the United Railways Co. By all ethical standards an agent who has been selected to represent an institution is morally obligated to conserve the interests of that institution. In the agreement which he has entered into between the city and the United Railways, the Mayor has conserved the interests only of the United Railways Co. The inference seems quite clear, therefore, that if his act is prompted by any ethical standard, he feels that he is there to represent the United Railways Co. instead of to represent the city.

In such a case as this the city may have two methods of recourse; one is legal, the other is political. The legal method at present is not clearly indicated. This maneuver of those conserving the interests of the United Railways Co. has been made with extraordinary shrewdness. It bears every evidence of having been carefully thought out and considered from every legal standpoint. It is inconceivable that no legal redress can exist for an act of this character. Your committee, however, has not had sufficient time in which to pursue the legal aspects of the case to be in position to definitely indicate the line of procedure. The matter, however, should be studied carefully from this standpoint and the best legal talent of the city consulted.

Political and Legal Remedies.

The political line of action is very clear. If the Mayor has been guilty of malfeasance or derelict in the performance of his duty the citizens have the power of recall. As the entire arrangement, with the possible exception of the dismissal of the Jefferson avenue franchise, is void, and beyond the power of the Mayor and City Counselor and other executive officers of the city entering upon the arrangement, it is merely a "gentlemen's agreement" and not binding on any succeeding officials. Were another Mayor to be installed in office, he and his City Counselor could immediately ignore the entire action taken and consider it null and void. The act was a dictatorial one, an executive invasion of the legislative power, not in conformity with the method of procedure laid down by the laws governing the city.

Any citizen can see that the present administration, having entered into this arrangement with the United Railways Co. and apparently feeling itself obligated to the United Railways Co., will observe due diligence and will exercise all its powers in the execution of this agreement. It is equally clear that an administration not in sympathy with the agreement could be equally diligent and could exercise equal powers in nullifying the agreement. The choice is frankly presented to the citizens of determining whether they shall elect to continue an administration wholly in sympathy with this agreement, or will, on the contrary, recall the Mayor and elect in his stead an executive who is opposed to the agreement.

35,000 SIGNERS NEEDED TO ORDER RECALL ELECTION

Charter Provisions Mean That 20 Per Cent of Registered Voters in 19 Wards Must Act.

Speculation on what success two organizations which have announced their intention of undertaking the recall of Mayor Kiel because of his United Railways deal will have in obtaining enough signatures to bring about a recall election already is being indulged in. The discussion is not confined to the advocates of the movement.

The city charter provides that petitions for the recall of any city officer, elected by the city as a whole, must be signed by registered voters equal in number to 20 per cent of the registered voters at the preceding regular mayoralty election, provided that in such 20 per cent shall be included 20 per cent of the registered voters in at least two-thirds of the wards of the city.

In the present movement against Mayor Kiel, the charter provisions apply as follows: The registration at the last regular mayoralty election, which was in 1916, before revision by the Board of Election Commissioners, was 171,386. Accordingly, the number of signatures required for petitions to gain a recall election on the Mayor is 34,277. The Board of Election Commissioners has not yet been asked to determine what registration number shall be used in this instance for computing the 20 per cent. As a consequence, the number of signatures which must be had is not yet a fixed quantity, but probably will not vary more than a few hundred from the foregoing figure.

Reasons for Recall.

The provision that the 20 per cent of the total registration in two-thirds of the wards means that the circulators of the petitions must choose 19 wards and in those wards obtain on their petitions 20 per cent of the registration in each. The total of the 20 per cent in those wards will be short of the 34,277 signatures needed and the number lacking may be obtained from the remaining nine wards or from the previously canvassed 19.

Several conditions are recognized factors making for the success or failure of the petitions. The general temper of the public towards the United Railways is thought to be the greatest asset of the movement to recall the Mayor. Events, outside the aggravating present deal, contribute to that attitude. The skip-stop is being prolonged past the period of the war. Crowded cars, long waits on cold corners and similar conditions have their effect.

Though the movers for the Mayor's recall are emphasizing that this is not a political issue, but rather one of the people vs. "the gang," it is not disputed that political lines will be drawn to some extent. For the purposes of indicating what effect the past political situation may have, the following table is interesting. It sets forth the registration by wards, the number of signatures that will be required in each to fulfill the 20 per cent requirement, the vote cast for Connett for Mayor in the last election and the vote cast for Mayor Kiel. From it several deductions are possible.

Totals	171,386	34,277	46,792	70,193

The most apparent pertinent fact of the foregoing figures is that the number of votes for Connett was more than 12,000 greater than the number of signatures needed to insure a recall election.

Workers for the recall declare that while the Democratic machine would fight the Kiel Republican machine on general political issues with all its might, yet where the issue is one between the public and machine politics in general, the Democratic organization will not put on a full head of steam. In fact, recall proponents are not anticipating much support from the Democratic organization, and even some opposition.

However, it is recognized that the rank and file of Democrats would not be averse to contributing to the embarrassment of a Republican Mayor. Hence it is probable that the 19 wards selected for the search for support of the recall will include those in which Connett made a showing of strength.

Thus, the only three wards that Connett carried over Kiel, the Fourth, Fifth and Twentieth, likely will be marked for canvass, while the Tenth, Eleventh and Seventeenth will not be among the 19. Those wards gave Connett a smaller vote than is necessary on petitions for recall. The Thirteenth is the home ward of John Schmoll, first aid to the Mayor and boss of the Republican machine, and surely will not be invaded. The Eleventh is that of Collector Koeln.

The Mayor and Koeln have not always been the best political friends and Koeln has on occasions been impassive to appeals for active help from Kiel. However, at the last election, the Koeln strength was delivered to Kiel in toto and since the two have met weekly at pinuchle and the past seems to have been buried. The best recall proponents could expect from Koeln would be for him to do nothing for the Mayor. But, as the fight is against the machine of which Koeln is a very big cog, he likely may be active for the Mayor.

Other Supporting Interests.

The only other element of the Republican organization which is looked upon as a possible asset for the recall is that headed by President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen. Aloe, who assented to the deal as a member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, now has said that the Mayor did not lay the cards on the table before him, any more than he did before the public, and has declared against the deal.

If Kiel is recalled Aloe will be Mayor.

The Aldermen recently have felt that their function is becoming more and more that of a rubber stamp for the Mayor. They resented his assumption of legislative power in the deal with the United Railways.

The comparison of 46,792 votes cast for Connett and 70,193 cast for Kiel in 1916 is not a criterion for justly estimating the Mayor's strength now. In 1916 his opponent was "only a Democrat."

In a recall election Kiel and the United Railways would be twin candidates. Their opponent would be the people. The people cast the votes.

The recall never has been invoked in St. Louis. The referendum almost was employed recently in a matter closely allied to the present movement.

When the original petitions for a referendum on the so-called U. R. compromise ordinance were stolen new petitions were resigned by more than 30,000 persons within 48 hours.

Besides wanting to continue the skip-stop plan the U. R. has another application for increased fares before the Public Service Commission.

UNITED RAILWAYS STOCK ADVANCES AFTER THE DEAL

Preferred Goes From $14 to $16 a Share, and the Common From $3.50 to $4.75.

Prices of United Railways securities have advanced on the Stock Exchange here as a result of the Mayor's deal with the company. Preferred stock has advanced from $14 to $16, the common stock from $3.50 to $4.75, and the 4-per-cent bonds from $50 to $53.25. St. Louis & Suburban general 5s also have risen from $53 to $56.

A material increase in activity in the market was noted while the advance was in progress, and the turnover in the stocks and bonds has been heavier than at any time in more than a year. On several occasions orders have been executed for 100-share lots in the stock, and transactions in the bonds have reached fairly large total.

Previous to the authorization of the 6-cent fare the preferred stock sold at $12.62½, the common at $2.75 and the 4-per-cent bonds at $48.75, all of which were low-record prices for the securities.

TAXI DRIVER CHARGED WITH 7 AUTO THEFTS

Arkansan Who Bought Machines for About $500 Each Says Deals Covered a Year.

Roy Stout, 33 years old, of 4269 Enright avenue, who operates a number of service cars and maintains a taxicab stand at Euclid avenue and Delmar boulevard, was arrested last night on charges of stealing and disposing of seven automobiles within the last year. His arrest was made on information furnished by Jud Davis, a Walnut Ridge, Ark., merchant, who is held in connection with the thefts.

Stout was identified by Davis at police headquarters as the man who sold him four Chandler and three Dodge touring cars at various times in Poplar Bluff and Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Bloomfield, Ill. Davis said he paid from $500 to $600 for the cars, selling them later for an average profit of $200 a car.

Davis was brought here from Poplar Bluff last night after his arrest on warrants charging grand larceny and receiving stolen property. The warrants were issued after Davis failed to appear last week at the trial of Leo Judd, a saloon keeper of 4552 North Broadway, who is accused of stealing automobiles and disposing of them through Davis.

According to the police, Davis said he first heard from Stout last spring when Stout called him over the long distance telephone and asked whether he would buy several cars. This Davis said he agreed to do, and Stout, he declares, drove the cars to towns in Illinois and Missouri, where Davis received them. Stout denied he had ever seen Davis.

FILIPINOS WANT INDEPENDENCE

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 18.—Complete political independence is desired by the Philippine Islands, Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate, declared in a statement issued here today. Quezon arrived here yesterday on a honeymoon tour.

"We want freedom," he said. "The United States, however, has been so just and so honorable in dealing with the Philippines that it would be ungrateful for us to bring up the matter during the present emergency."

THOUGHT ONLY ONE FRANCHISE TOUCHED IN PACT, KIEL SAYS

Mayor Declares, However, That He Favors Validating All of U. R. Company's Franchises and Stands by Agreement.

FIRST CONFERENCE HELD AT M. A. A.

Thought He Was Doing Big Thing for City in Mill Tax Settlement, and Expects Public to Agree With Him.

Mayor Kiel, when asked yesterday by a Post-Dispatch reporter who had started the negotiations leading to the deal whereby he has validated all the franchises of the United Railways until 1939, and when and where the conferences was held, said that he had brought up the matter by insisting that the mill tax must be paid. The conference at which the agreement was entered into, he said, was held a week ago yesterday morning, at the Missouri Athletic Association, Fourth street and Washington avenue. He did not explain why the M. A. A. was chosen as a meeting place.

After the right of the United Railways to charge a 6-cent fare had been upheld in the Supreme Court, he said, he instructed City Counselor Daues to notify the company that the city would insist upon an immediate settlement of the mill tax controversy, which had been pending for about 15 years. He said that Counselor Daues later reported to him that the company had made a proposition to pay the mill tax with interest in 10 installments, and had offered to recognize the validity of the mill tax ordinance if the city, in turn, would agree to dismiss the suit in the Missouri Supreme Court attacking the Jefferson avenue line franchise, which expired in 1912.

In this connection it will be remembered that the validity of the mill tax ordinance had been fought to the United States Supreme Court, which held that it was constitutional. Under this decision the United Railways paid more than $1,800,000 back mill tax, accruing from 1903 to 1910, but continued to resist payment of mill tax after 1910, the date of the last judgment on which the United States Supreme Court had ruled.

Viewed It as Fair Compromise.

"I took the matter under consideration," the Mayor continued, "as it immediately appealed to me as a fair compromise. I figured that in the event the city won its appeal on the Jefferson line franchise suit the people would gain nothing. It probably would mean the abandonment of the line and the tearing up of the tracks. Perhaps a new franchise would be granted to the United Railways, which would put the matter back where it had stood before, or, maybe, a franchise would be granted to an independent company, in which case people living on the Jefferson line would have to pay an additional fare. I could appreciate what a hardship that would be. I live on the Jefferson line myself.

"Daues told me that the company wanted to discuss the matter with me and I consented to talk it over with them. I was anxious to have the thing over with. I believed that if I could settle the mill tax dispute I would be doing the biggest thing of my administration. I was of the opinion that the proposition made by the company was a just one and a very simple way of ending a long-drawn-out controversy.

"I went to the M. A. A., with Comptroller Nolte, City Counselor Daues and Associate City Counselor Hamilton. The company was represented at the meeting by President McCulloch and Tom Francis (attorney for the United Railways). McCulloch in person repeated to me the company's proposition as it had been outlined to me by Daues. He said the company was in a bad way financially, due to the cloud that was hanging over the franchises by reason of the Jefferson line suit. He said that if the cloud were removed the company would be in a position to properly finance itself.

"Something was said in reference to the $3,225,000 Government loan which the company had to pay, but I do not recall just what was said on that point. The company did not impress me as seeking a favor. It struck me as a proposition that called for a 'yes' or 'no' answer. I felt that I was responsible for the collection of the mill tax, and I was going to exercise my authority in closing the deal. The company had contended that it was in no position to pay the mill tax with the cloud hanging over its franchises, and I could not see where I was acting against the interests of the people in lifting the cloud.

Knew Only of Jefferson Franchise.

"Nothing was said at the conference about a stipulation validating all of the franchises until 1939. The only thing mentioned was the Jefferson line suit, but I understood that the dismissal of that suit would validate all of the franchises. In fact, I did not give the other franchises much thought. I was not concerned with them. It was not until after the stipulation filed by the legal department was made public that I learned that any of the company's franchises expired before 1939. I did not know there were any 1924 franchises in existence, but even had I known about them I would have entered into the same agreement with the company.

"I know nothing of the legal phraseology required in a stipulation of that character. That was left to the lawyers, but I stand by it just as it was drawn. I am not in favor of destroying any of the franchises of the company. The public does not agree with me now, but it will later on. Just wait and see what a good effect my action will have. Eastern financiers will not be afraid to invest in St. Louis enterprises. They will have confidence in the city.

"After I had reached a tentative agreement with the company at the M. A. A. conference in the morning I submitted a statement of the agreement in the afternoon at the City Hall, to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

This Board is composed of the Mayor, Comptroller and President of the Board of Aldermen. There was no discussion of the agreement at the afternoon meeting. Mr. Nolte and I fully understood that the agreement to dismiss the Jefferson line suit was to lift a cloud from all the franchises of the company, and I presume that Mr. Aloe understood the same thing. At least, the agreement was worded to that effect. The purpose of the agreement was to enable the company to stabilize itself and, in my opinion, the phraseology of the statement plainly indicated that no franchises were to be attacked. I had no intention of deceiving the people."

Favors Investigation.

Mayor Kiel adds that he had intended to spend a week at Excelsior Springs, but had given up the trip when informed that the Board of Aldermen was going to investigate the agreement. He said that he would be glad to testify before the Aldermanic Committee, and that he was heartily in favor of an investigation.

President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen, who, as a member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, concurred in the Mayor's written statement of Jan. 11 on the deal, but who, after reading the final stipulation made public Wednesday, repudiated the agreement, said that he knew nothing about the negotiations leading to the deal between Mayor Kiel and the United Railways, and that he had not heard, until last Friday of the morning conference at the M. A. A. He said that neither the Mayor nor Comptroller Nolte had indicated to him that the agreement pertained to anything but the Jefferson line suit, and he had no idea it was intended to validate all franchises until 1939.

Associate City Counselor Henry A. Hamilton, who is in charge of the city's law department during Counselor Daues' illness, said that the question of drawing up the stipulation was purely one of how to state the terms of agreemet between Mayor Kiel and the United Railways Co., which had previously been arrived at.

President McCulloch of the United Railways said that he attended the conference at the M. A. A., when informed by the company's attorney, Francis, that "the city wanted him to be there."

When asked again if the United Railways, now that, as the Mayor says, "the cloud has been removed from its franchises," and it can borrow money, would borrow money with which to pay the mill tax to the city, McCulloch repeated that that was a matter for the Board of Directors of the United Railways to determine.

ST. LOUIS FOUR-MINUTE MEN "DEMOBILIZED" AT BANQUET

One hundred and six members of the St. Louis branch of Four-Minute Men were given honorable discharge from the service at the formal demobilization of the organization at a banquet in the American Annex last night. Each man was presented with a certificate of service issued by the Committee on Public Information and a souvenir copy of the best four-minute speeches entered in a contest held recently. L. L. Leonard, director of the Four-Minute Men of Missouri, presided.

Charles M. Hay and M. L. Wilkinson spoke on the accomplishments of the organization. Many of the members were said to have spoken to more than 50,000 people. J. H. Grosse, who spoke at five towns a day for three weeks during the last Liberty Loan drive, sold $1,000,000 worth of bonds. Dickson A. Given, during talks in 10 months, spoke to 120,000 people.

Ten chairmen of four-minute organizations of small communities in Missouri also spoke. The St. Louis organization was formed in June, 1917.

RUB IT ON YOUR SORE, ACHING BACK

Rub Lumbago, Pain, Soreness, and Stiffness away with St. Jacobs Liniment.

Kidneys cause backache? No. They have no nerves, therefore cannot cause pain. Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment." Rub it right on the ache or tender spot, and instantly the pain, soreness, stiffness and lameness disappear. Don't stay crippled. Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacob's Liniment" from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache, sciatica and lumbago pain. "St. Jacob's Liniment" is harmless and doesn't burn the skin.

It's the only application to rub on a weak, lame or painful back or for lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, sprains or strain.—ADV.

1917 INDORSERS OF KIEL HESITANT ON HIS U. R. PACT

Only Three Out of 22 Expressions Obtained by Post-Dispatch Reporters Definitely Favorable to Mayor's Deal.

In the campaign of 1917 Mayor Kiel's candidacy for re-election was supported by a list of men designated as the "Kiel Indorsers." In advertisements it was stated that the Indorsers were "a nonpartisan group of men who believe Mayor Kiel's re-election means a greater St. Louis."

The principal argument for the Mayor's re-election, put forth over the signatures of the Indorsers, was that he had carried out 17 of the 18 pledges which he made in 1913. The one exception was the construction of a subway.

Post-Dispatch reporters yesterday questioned a number of the Kiel Indorsers as to their views on the Mayor's franchise deal with the United Railways Co. The questions asked were:

Do you approve of the deal from the standpoint of the public interest?

Do you believe it will result in better street car accommodations, and in extension of the lines into newly built territory, as promised by the Mayor in his inaugural speech?

Out of 22 expressions obtained, only three were definitely favorable to the Mayor's action. Most of the others were noncommittal.

The expressions obtained were:

Secretary of the Kiel Indorsers.

W. S. Donaldson, vice president National Printing & Engraving Co., secretary of the Kiel Indorsers.—I am in no position to express an opinion, but I am inclined to believe something is wrong somewhere. Street car service is just as good here as it is anywhere else.

Commends Everybody in Deal.

Samuel D. Capen, insurance dealer, president St. Louis Fire Prevention Bureau—I certainly think it's the best thing done in St. Louis for a long while. The service will be improved, and the financial situation of the company, which has been badly hurt by the newspapers, will be helped. I commend everybody connected with the deal.

C. W. Condie, vice president and secretary Condie-Bray Glass and Paint Co.—I think it's a poor deal.

R. D. Corless, salesman Brown Shoe Co.—The Mayor is sincere, and he may have done the right thing. I think if the United Railways went into the hands of a receiver we'd get better service. There is plenty of room for it.

Clifford B. Allen, attorney: To be real frank, I haven't read the result of the settlement, whatever it is, and I have no comment to make one way or the other.

Otto F. Stifel, president Otto F. Stifel Brewing Co.: I prefer not to comment on the question, as I have not gone into the merits of the arrangement. I prefer to hear both sides.

John Warrington, secretary Allied Printing Trades Council: I would rather not comment at present, until I have seen some phases of the question discussed. I have had little or no chance to read what has taken place, but as a general answer I will say that I do not approve of the arrangement. I think it will not result in better accommodations or greater extensions.

James H. McTague, president Maryland Hotel Co.: I don't know anything about it, therefore I cannot answer intelligently.

J. D. Perry Lewis, president Lewis Automobile Co.: I haven't given the matter enough thought. I read it over in the newspapers, but as I haven't gone into it deeply I prefer not to express myself. In reference to further accommodations and extensions, I don't think there will be much difference.

U. R. Director Approves It.

A. L. Shapleigh, chairman of the board, Shapleigh Hardware Co.: I think it was a good thing for the city and the United Railways to get together and quit their foolish squabbling. Of course, as I am a director of the United Railways, any statement of mine will be called prejudiced.

H. J. Pettingill, president Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.: I don't care to make any comment, as I am not sufficiently well informed to do so.

John H. Farish, real estate: The deal is the best one the city officials could make. Ultimately it will prove a good one. I don't believe any living man can tell whether it will improve the service.

W. F. Funsten, 5915 West Cabanne place: I don't want to discuss it. I regret to say I indorsed Mayor Kiel in 1917.

C. H. Duncker, president Trorlicht-Duncker Carpet Co.: I haven't looked into the matter.

Fred W. Drosten, president Drosten Jewelry Co.: I'd hate to pass on it. I don't remember whether I indorsed Kiel in 1917.

C. M. McDonald, realty operator: As to the question of franchise extension, I think the United Railways will be in a better position to improve its service to the public with the possession of longer franchises. There is one thing I want to say, however, in regard to the 6-cent fare proposition: I think the city should have stepped in right away and applied for an injunction in the courts to prevent the State Public Service Commission granting the raise. In my opinion an injunction could have been obtained. The company certainly ought not to be allowed any further increase of fare.

Moses Shoenberg, vice president of the May Department Stores Co.: I want to make further study of the settlement before committing myself on the questions.

Rabbi Adolph Rosentreter, 5603 Maple avenue: I recall that I indorsed the Mayor's candidacy and that in his message he promised better street car accommodations and extensions, but have not studied the settlement closely enough to say at this time whether his promise has been carried out.

P. E. Conroy, president Conroy Piano Co.: I don't recall that I indorsed Kiel's candidacy. Your question is too hard for a man who has not made a study of the situation.

W. B. Cowen, vice president National Bank of Commerce—Was I one of Kiel's indorsers? I don't know that I was. Your questions are awful, awful hard! There are so many fundamentals entering into the questions that I would not feel prepared to answer them without a deep study of the situation, which I expect to make. At present I am unprepared.

A. C. Erker, department manager Erker Bros. Optical Co.—I haven't thought anything about the United Railways deal, either from the standpoint of public interest or better service.

O. A. Field, president Field-Lippman Piano Stores—I hesitate to say what I think of the deal, for I haven't read the papers very closely for three or four days. I think St. Louis has the best street car service of any city of its size in the country.

Why Burden Yourself With Fat?

Prominent repulsive fat that comes and stays where it is not needed is a burden: a hindrance to activity, a curb upon pleasure, a thief of all that is pretty and graceful and sweet in womankind. Why don't you take off the fat where it shows? You can do so easily, safely and without the slightest fear of harm or bad aftereffects by just taking after each meal and at bedtime a pleasant little Marmola Prescription Tablet. These little tablets are as effective and harmless as the famous prescription from which they take their name. Buy and try a case today. Your druggist sells them at 75 cents or if you prefer may write direct to the Marmola Co., 68 Garfield Bldg., Detroit, Mich. You can thus say good-bye to dieting, exercise and fat, and get back the graceful figure and poise you desire.

HAIR OFTEN RUINED BY WASHING WITH SOAP

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—ADV.

CIVIC LEAGUE FOR RECALLING KIEL AND AVOIDING HIS U. R. DEAL

not serve the city's interests when he took action intended to avert a receivership.

It is declared that, in giving, or attempting to give, unclouded franchises for a 20-year period, the city officials imposed no conditions, and that the company is still in a position to ask an increase of fares "every time it can allege some plausible and specious ground for so doing."

The activity of the United Railways in politics is the theme of a paragraph in the report, and the question is raised whether the Mayor considers that he represents the city or the United Railways Co.

Civic League Platform.

The United Railways deal had been under consideration by the league since Thursday. The league's policy is in pursuance of an announcement made Feb. 10 last, after a referendum vote of its members. It then announced it would thereafter devote itself to big and fundamental municipal questions, particularly those dealing with special privilege abuses. Its intention was stated to follow a policy of "unprejudiced, but close scrutiny of public measures, dissemination of carefully obtained information respecting the same, followed by an aggressive, militant opposition to all forms of special selfish privileges which in any way encroach upon fundamental rights of the public."

Armenian to Speak.

B. Boghosian, an Armenian, will speak in the interest of the Armenian relief fund now being collected at the Water Tower Baptist Church, 2115 E. Grand avenue, at 11 a. m. today. The pastor, the Rev. Ernest A. Main, will also deliver an address.

RETURNING SOLDIERS HOWL DOWN MILWAUKEE MAYOR

By the Associated Press

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 18.—Mayor Daniel W. Hoan was tonight compelled to give way to Gov. E. L. Philipp, who greeted 3000 soldiers and sailors who returned home from overseas and army camps in a welcome address at the auditorium.

Cheers and hisses greeted the Socialist Mayor when he reached the stage half an hour before the soldiers reached the hall. Seated on the edge of the stage with the Mayor were the Governor, several army officers and members of the Executive Committee.

After the soldiers, preceded by the Seventh Regiment Band and a G. A. R. post had marched, around the arena, the troops stood at attention and Mayor Hoan arose to begin his address. He was greeted by prolonged jeering which lasted several minutes. At the conclusion the Mayor, without saying a word, motioned to Gov. Philipps, who took the floor and was received with tumultuous applause. The Governor bade the soldiers welcome to their homes. He said the hearts of the people were filled with joy "because God permitted you to return with victory."

SOCIETIES CELEBRATE ARMISTICE

French, Belgian and Alsace-Lorraine Members Join in Banquet.

The French, the Belgian and the Alsace-Lorraine societies of St. Louis celebrated the signing of the armistice with a banquet last night at the American Annex Hotel. G. V. R. Mechin introduced Marc Seguin, the French and Belgian Consul; Fernand Lemoine, Lieut. Leahy, 138th Infantry; Lieut. Fromont of the French High Commission in the United States, and Gabriel Ferrand, all of whom, with the exception of Lieut. Leahy, spoke in French.

Mrs. Gabriel Ferrand's singing of "The Marseillaise" brought enthusiasm to a marked pitch, the hundred people present chorusing the refrain many times. Tributes were paid to France, Belgium and the United States.

TELLS OF RESULTS OF FREE DENTAL CLINIC

Director Says That Children Are Waking to Need of Sound Teeth.

The importance to a chidl of sound teeth and a clean mouth and the activity of the Department of Hygiene of the Board of Education, were explained yesterday by Dr. James L. Stewart, director, reviewing the first years' operations of the George A. Meyer free dental clinic at Central High School, under auspices of the board and the St. Louis Dental Society.

Dr. Stewart declared that the School Board would undertake all it could to institute the free clinic in each quarter of the city. The board's powers in this direction do not extend beyond what it is doing for the limited clinic at Central High, where it provides quarters, light, heat, an attendant nurse and other facilities, not including dental operatives.

"What really should be done," Dr. Stewart explained, "is for the city to establish and maintain these clinics as separate institutions, under the Health Department. In the absence of such municipal support they are possible only through private philanthropy in co-operation with the dental society.

"Observation has convinced me that fully 90 per cent of the children attending the public schools are in need of dental attention. As to the percentage of these whose parents or guardians are unable to have this attention given by the family dentists, I will not say, but it is much beyond the capacity of the free clinics.

With limited operations luring the one year of its existence, 520 cases were treated. At the positive benefit of the Meyer clinic,

"The Hygiene Department is not content merely to search out the decaying teeth among pupils and have them treated. We are informing the children, and through them the parents, that the mouth is the vestibule through which most diseases enter the body, and that the root of this menace is the teeth.

"We are making missionaries of the children who are treated at the clinic to overcome the almost universal dread of the dentist's chair."

U. S. SOLDIERS ORDERED TO KEEP OUT OF GERMAN ELECTIONS

Forbidden to Indorse Any Candidate, Party or Principle by Commander's Notice.

By the Associated Press.

COBLENZ, Jan. 17.—The officers and men of the American army of occupation have been prohibited from taking any part in the election to select delegates for the new German National Assembly, which will be held Jan. 19, and for the Prussian National Assembly, which will be held Jan. 26, and from expressing preference for or against any German political principle, candidate or party.

By order of Major-General Joseph T. Dickman, commander of the army of occupation, responsibility has been placed upon the German officials to see that the elections are conducted without fraud and without intimidation of any kind. A notice published by the army officials for the benefit of civilians throughout the occupied zone, says:

"The proper German officials shall take such steps as are necessary to secure a full, free and fair expression of the will of the voters of Germany, in order that the Constitution now about to be written and the Government now about to be established may be founded upon the immovable foundation of the will of the people."

The women are particularly active in political affairs, holding meetings daily in Coblenz, Treves and other towns.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Jan. 18.—Central Illinois fruit growers reported today that peaches had been killed by the recent freeze, following the long period of rainy weather. Most other fruits appear to have escaped damage.

BOLSHEVISM'S REMEDY AT HAND, PASTOR SAYS

"Employers Must Pay Laborers a Decent Wage and Give Men Time to Play."

The only way Bolshevism can be kept out of this country is for employers of labor to pay a decent wage and give men time to play and time to cultivate themselves, the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, told members of the Town Club yesterday.

"There is no use talking, the employer is his brother's keeper, and he better would realize it before it is too late," he said. "It must not be done in a condescending manner, either. It is a duty.

"The worker," he continued, "must give all that he has while he is at work. Both sides must do their maximum for each other. That is democracy.

"Bolshevism is not democracy, because it panders to a particular class, but it is a menace. Any movement that is based on an appeal to hungry men's stomachs will be powerful, and only blind men can fail to see the menace of Bolshevism. Those who look on Trotzky and Lenine as jokes are laughing in the fact of disaster. Bolshevism is the most appalling danger that ever confronted civilization. We have the remedy at hand. It is our fault if we do not use it.

"Repression will not do. It had a most thorough trial in Russia, and we see the result. Bolshevism was born of tyranny and oppression. Radical Socialism has never appeared anywhere except under autocracy. Give men a square deal under our own flag, and they won't cheer the red flag.

"Universal franchise and universal service is the greatest combination that ever has appeared on this earth, and it first appeared after the French Revolution. That is democracy."

The Rev. Mr. Phillips traced the history of the development of Russia from the ninth century, showing that the consistent policy of oppression resulted in the present condition. He said he did not believe order would be restored until some great personality arose in that country.

It was the first meeting of the Town club in its new quarters, on the eighth floor of the Century Building. More than 200 were present.

OLD TIME ENGINEER DEAD

He Was H. A. Walter and Was Terminal Superintendent.

H. A. Walter, superintendent of safety of the Terminal Association, who died at the age of 69 years Friday, was the oldest engineer in point of service in that company's employ, and had the record for trips back and forth through the tunnel from the railroad yards to the Eads Bridge. He ran a locomotive continuously for 35 years, every day in the year, and at the lowest reckoning rode through the tunnel six times a day during his long career. On this basis, Walter made 76,650 trips through the tunnel in the open cab of his locomotive.

When people complained about the smoke and gases in the tunnel he said that he never noticed the presence of anything noxious on his trips. On the contrary, he seemed to thrive on the sulphur and other fumes in that cavern.

THE PACKARD MOTOR CAR COMPANY RESUMES PRODUCTION OF CARS AND TRUCKS

ANNOUNCEMENT that the famous Twin-Six Packards are to be available shortly after the first of the year, is welcome news to Packard dealers and to thousands of waiting purchasers.

Events of the past year have done more than any words of ours could do to fix Packard ascendency in the minds of the thinking men of the world.

The principle of the Packard Twelve-Cylinder Engine is established before all men as the most advanced and practical development in modern motor construction.

Getting Back Into Production

When the Packard concern stopped making passenger cars and went on 100% war-work, it had on hand finished parts to the value of six million dollars.

These parts were all of the finest material, finished in the careful painstaking way of the Packard organization. No compromise on quality, no slightest lowering of standards owing to difficulties in the material situation or the speeding-up process.

Whatever the pressure or conditions, this organization knows but one standard of quality, and that is the best.

It will be clear to all that the possession of this stock of finished parts enables us to resume production more quickly and smoothly than otherwise would be possible.

No Change in Packard Prices

Packard prices are based on cost of material. There was no rise in Packard prices during the war period based on what the traffic would bear. There is no lowering of quality and consequently no leeway for reduction of price at this time.

It is not easy for the motor car owner to detect reduced quality in cars, in time to compare it with a quoted price.

Packard responsibility for the service the car gives is the best insurance a car owner can have. One reason this insurance means so much is the fact that the Packard Company produces a greater proportion of all the parts that enter into its car than any other automobile concern in America.

You cannot well have responsibility without authority. And just to the extent that a maker depends on factors outside of his control, must he contend with varying standards of quality and impair the authoritative nature of his guarantee.

Packard Trucks for Immediate Delivery

Packard truck production has been continuous. The only change from 100% war-work is that formerly the Government took practically the full production, and now part of the production is available for the public.

The Packard truck building organization is the finest in the world. We have kept it free from the demoralization of hasty processes and the over-strain of high-pressure production.

If anything, it has been strengthened and improved during the war period, and the standards of material and workmanship even more rigidly maintained.

New Efficiency Test for Packard Trucks

Another Packard truck efficiency test is scheduled to start February 1st, 1919, for the purpose of teaching truck owners and operators to reduce transportation costs and relieve freight cars, to save gasoline, to save time, to save repairs.

Prize money aggregating $17,600.00 has been provided. Prizes will not only be given to drivers, but also to accountants and shipping clerks, in order to emphasize the fact that truck efficiency is a matter of the whole approach to, and treatment of, the transportation question—the right truck, the right size truck for your average load, the way the truck is handled, and what you have a right to expect from its service.

Packard Aircraft for Commercial or Passenger Purposes

Since hostilities ceased, business America has not had time to standardize its aircraft needs. The Packard Company is not making a stock airplane, but has a department to execute special orders, or to advise and figure with Transportation Companies, the Government, or private individuals.

As originators of the motor from which the Liberty Motor was made, and as producers of the most advanced type of airplanes for the Government, the Packard Aircraft Engineering Department may be said to be in position of first authority and to offer the most complete and practical department now available for the development of airplanes in this country.

The Packard Organization as Transportation Specialists

Whether of passenger or freight, and whether by highroad or air-route, this whole question of transportation is one we are treating with intensive specialization.

What with problems of reconstruction, the certain and enormous expansion of business, the additional strain on already overtaxed and inadequate railroads—with no immediate prospect of railway betterment—there is crying need for special study and analysis of all other factors and means of service.

No subject before the business world is of more vital importance. It is one too often thought of in the round, and treated in vague, general terms.

As individual problems become more specific and acute, it will be found of practical help to discuss them with the Packard Company, who probably possesses more new data on transportation than any other concern in America.

Soldan 34, McKinley 17.
Cleveland 21, Central 8.
Principia 50, Yeatman 6.

ELSEWHERE.

Minnesota 38, Wisconsin 11.
Purdue 16, Illinois 13.
Ames 29, Kansas 28.
Iowa 29, Northwestern 28.

Results of last night's games in the Interscholastic League tend to bear out very strongly the prediction that the basket ball championship rests between Soldan and Cleveland this season. Soldan defeated McKinley, 34 to 17, in the first of last night's double-header at Cleveland gymnasium, while in the second contest Cleveland beat Central, 21 to 8.

Thus the favorites came through, although Cleveland's score against Central was in the nature of a surprise. It had been freely predicted that the midcity quintet would give last year's champions the struggle of their lives. The game was exceedingly rough, 29 fouls having been called, 16 against Central and 13 against Cleveland.

Sloan Looks Slow.

In the first contest, McKinley put up a good game, while Soldan looked much slower than on previous outs. Because of its experienced veterans Soldan has been given the edge in the race and on comparative scores, figure about 7 points better than Cleveland, as the latter defeated McKinley by a 26-to-18 count.

Soldan was leading at the end of the first half, 12 to 7, and apparently improved with the progress of the game, as they counted 22 points in the second period, while McKinley got but 10. The work of Smith, at right forward for Soldan, featured the game. He scored 18 points and shot 12 out of 17 fouls. It was Soldan's first appearance of the season in league competition.

Placke's Work Features.

Aside from the roughness which marred the second game, the work of Placke for Cleveland was little short of remarkable. He scored 15 points during the game and shot four field goals in the second period, all of which were spectacular.

Wassel, at left forward for Central, was inclined to be the whole show, for he scored all of the points for the losers. The lineups:

Soldan.	Positions.	McKinley.
Long (8)	Left forward	Stone (9)
Smith (18)	Right forward	Spuehler

Substitutions—Crum for Walsh; Anzalone for Yorger; Roudman for Minnegerode; Hebberger for Volland.

PRINCIPIA FIVE GIVES YEATMAN WORST DEFEAT OF SEASON, SCORE 50-6

Principia Academy handed Yeatman High School its worst defeat of the season last night in a basketball game played at Principia. The score was 50 to 6. Yeatman was completely outclassed, although they put up a game battle throughout.

The winners began scoring early in the game. Yeatman counted only one field goal in the entire first half of play, as Principia was leading at the resting period by a 23 to 2 score. The work of Colvin and Bekins, Principia forwards, was excellent, they scoring 38 of the team's 50 points. Bekins had 20 to his credit while Calvin counted 18.

In a preliminary game, the Principia Reserves were beaten by the Harvard A. C., 27 to 11. The line-up of the Principia-Yeatman game follows:

Principia.	Positions.	Yeatman.
Bekins (20)	Right forward	Fittge (2)
Fletcher (2)	Center	Meinholtz

St. Louis' $150,000 Free Athletic Club, Nearing Completion, Unique Experiment

Sherman Park Community Building Has Indoor Swimming Pool, Gymnasium, Four Basket Ball Courts, Handball Courts, Lockers, Showers and Outdoor Track, Besides Many Social Features.

By John E. Wray.

FOR $200 down and from $80 to $150 a year thereafter a man with a bent for physical development may join a first-class athletic club—provided some unfortunate member happens to "pass on" and the "man-with-the-bent," etc., happens to be next on the waiting list. Then, after he is in and settles the "overhead," he must pay heavily for locker, laundry and other income depleting factors too well-known to need reciting.

In short, it takes an income of the sort that has to settle heavily with Uncle Samuel each year to permit a citizen to belong to such an athletic organization.

But in St. Louis it is, or soon will be very different, thanks to a wonderful stride forward taken by the Park Department assisted by the Department of Municipal Athletics and Recreation. In St. Louis there is now in process of completion a free athletic club, a poor man's organization that will not only be housed in a most attractive building, but will contain all the conveniences of the exclusive private athletic clubs, plus outdoor provisions for all sorts of track, field and team games. No athletic club in the United States today is able to offer for any price what will be free or at nominal cost to dwellers in St. Louis, when the Sherman Park Community Building is thrown open to the public.

"Poor Man's Club" Unique.

NO city in the country so far as can be learned, has any public institution to compare with the one that is being developed by Park Commissioner Cunliff. Phoenix like, of the ashes of the Old Christian Brothers' College fire, there is rising not only a new structure, but a new idea.

To get the correct view of what is happening it must first be stated that the Sherman Park Community Building, as Cunliff has named it, was erected at a present cost to the city of about $40,000, although it could not be duplicated for several times this amount. The skeleton of the old Christian Brothers' College buildings were used as a basis of construction. When the United States Government took over space in the city infirmary for its soldiers, it entered into an arrangement whereby the city was to receive $65,000 with which to rebuild the C. B. C. into temporary quarters for its displaced infirmary patients. It also agreed that it would, at the expiration of one year, turn this building back to the city, to do with as it saw fit!

For the next few months the future "municipal athletic club" will continue to house invalids; but it is the expectation of Park Commissioner Cunliff that about October the building will revert to the city, when the "community building" idea will become operative.

Social Features Planned.

THIS idea embraces other features than the athletic end, as a perusal of the architect's blue prints will reveal. The structure, which is located in the center of Sherman Park at King's highway and Easton avenues, will be in the form of a cross, and will be of three stories. Its exterior is of brick, at present; but when completed, "refined," as Mr. Cunliffe expressed it, the finish will consist of stucco on top of the brick, with a red tile roof. In the green park setting the building is expected to stand out like a gem.

The blue prints show the following features:

GROUND FLOOR.

Swimming pool 30x80 feet, from 3 to 7½ feet deep, with 25 feet all around to take care of spectators. The pool will accommodate 300 persons per hour. This feature cannot be completed until the patients move out.

(2) Locker and dressing room for users of outdoor facilities, i. e., athletic track and field, 4 baseball diamonds, 2 soccer fields and 16 tennis courts. It supplies a place to leave all athletic equipment.

(3) Auditorium, with two basket ball courts, a stage for entertainments and a hall with seating capacity of 750 persons. For convenience of big gatherings or entertainments, adjoining this auditorium there will be a kitchen, pantry and banquet room.

SECOND FLOOR.

(1) Promoting the social community feature to which it is planned to adapt the building will be a branch of the Public Library—the Public Librarian has given his consent—an information office and a social hall.

(2) Lecture hall, capacity 500 persons.

(3) Club and games rooms, and committee meeting rooms capable of accomodating from 2 to 100 persons.

THIRD FLOOR.

(1) Gymnasium, equipped with the best modern appliances, 200x60 feet or long enough to allow of 50-yard dashes and hurdle events. The "gym" will be laid out with two basket ball courts (50x70), volley ball and indoor baseball arrangements.

(2) Boxing, wrestling, locker, shower and physical directors' rooms are all grouped in the west wing.

(3) Three handball courts, trophy room, women's locker rooms and showers, etc., in the east wing.

Physical Fitness Paramount.

"THIS grouping of athletic and social features is done with a purpose," Park Commissioner Cunliff explained. "If we can get the public to come to the Sherman Park building to use the library, the lecture room, the social hall or any of its other nonathletic conveniences, we believe that contact with the enthusiastic athletic element will infect those not now interested in physical development and lure them into athletic activity. The basic idea is always the old one which holds that a healthy body means a healthy mind; and a healthy mind is an asset to a community.

"We seek converts to physical education, believing that the mental training of the public has in the past, gone forward at the expense of the body. Our plan, however, has a triple appeal: Physical, mental and spiritual.

"The Sherman Park community building is admirably located for its purpose, being in the center of a rather densely populated district with no recreation ground nearby. The athletic features will be run on the permit system, after the manner of our outdoor municipal pastimes. No charge for enjoying the privileges of this 'club' are to be made other than 1 cent for a towel, soap and kindred trifles, merely to cover expenses.

"We expect to put the building in charge of a physical director and 10 assistants. They will conduct classes, various forms of athletic competitions, organize teams and leagues, all as a part of the Municipal Athletic Association.

Schools May Take Up Swimming

"LESSONS in swimming will be given free. An endeavor will be made to interest the Board of Education in making swimming a part of the school curriculum. It has been found from statistics that 90 per cent of the swimmers of the city learned before they were 14. Only 10 per cent attempt it after that age; so that it is felt essential to begin early, in this branch of activity.

"I am greatly interested in the development of boxing and think this fine, manly sport has been misunderstood by some and abused by others. It is my idea that the city should interest itself in the game, throwing about it the proper safeguards.

"This community building is not a mere dream—it is already a fact, although the elaboration of it will depend somewhat on the bond issue. The building will require about $30,000 additional spent on it, for necessary refinements in beautifying it—I hope to get it. If we do not, we still will be able to work out our main idea, although we must make some sacrifices.

"It is our hope that the Sherman Park Community building will be only one of several that will be operating in a few years. We believe that each district of the city will, in time, be equipped with a similar establishment."

JAKE SCHAEFER BEATS COCHRAN 500 POINTS

Takes Match in Chicago, 3600 to 3100 With Grand Average of 26.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Young Jake Schaefer concluded his 18.2 balkline match with Welker Cochran tonight with a victory that would have brought joy to his late dad, finishing with a score of 3600 to 3100. By winning he is even up with Cochran in matches, as the other youngster took the match in Detroit.

Schaefer rolled up a grand average of 26.9, while his opponent notched 22.1. In the final blocks yesterday neither player tore off big runs; the best being 141 by Jake. Going out with an unfinished run of 130, Schaefer won in the afternoon game 300 to 267.

He opened the final session at night with a run of 141, making a continuous run of 271 points. He also accumulated a count of 138 in his thirteenth inning and went out with a spin of 82 points. Cochran didn't seem to be able to get the balls rolling and his best count of the evening was 98 in his fifth. Summary:

Afternoon—Schaefer: High run, 130 (unfinished); average, 18¾. Cochran: High run, 109; average, 17 12-15.

Evening—Schaefer: High run, 141 (completing afternoon run); average, 21 6-14. Cochran: High run, 98; average, 22 10-12. Grand averages: Schaefer, 29 9-135; Cochran, 22 130-135.

SPORTSMEN TO DRAFT CHANGES IN GAME LAW

Fishing License and Reduction of Nonresident Hunting Fee to Be Asked.

At a convention of delegates representing 25,000 Missouri sportsmen, to be held at Sedalia, Jan. 23-24, under the auspices of the Missouri Fish and Game League, a bill setting forth a number of changes in the existing game law will be drafted and later submitted to the Legislature.

Steps will be taken to improve the fishing in Missouri by establishing a fishing license, so as to provide funds to build hatcheries in different parts of the State.

It is roughly estimated that there are 10 fishermen in the State to every hunter; if so, a fishing license would bring in the revenue necessary not only to build several hatcheries for large and small mouth bass, which are suitable for our Ozark streams, but for catfish, which could be propagated for distribution in the more sluggish streams.

Departments May Be Consolidated.

Among proposed changes in the game laws that will be discussed at the convention will be the consolidation of the State Fish Commission and the Game Department under one head, with an additional department to have charge of State parks. Means will be discussed at the convention for providing funds to purchase State parks and build hatcheries.

It is proposed to have a Conservation Commissioner apointed by the Governor, who will appoint a fish culturist, a chief game protector and a superintendent of State parks and forestry, together with deputies and necessary assistants to run each department.

The nonresident hunting license should be reduced from $25 to $10, as the State of Illinois reduced its nonresident license at the last session, fully expecting Missouri to do the same. The reduction in license charge would add considerable revenue to the game fund, as there are very few licenses taken out at the present high fee.

Seek Spring Shooting Season.

The discrepancy between the State laws and Federal regulations that now exists on the migratory bird law will be up for discussion, and some action will be taken to get relief from the present regulations as they apply to this section of the country. The league is seeking to secure a return flight season of 30 days on water fowl to March 10.

ZAMZOW BEATS KEITH.

Eddie Zamzow of Corse's Parlors, defeated Frank Keith of the Rex, 50 to 40, in a City Three-Cushion League game at Corse's last night. The contest went 72 inings and Zamzow had a high run of 3. Keith's high run was 4. It was Zamzow's second victory of the tournament. He has not yet been defeated.

SUNSET HILL GETS WESTERN AMATEUR GOLF TOURNAMENT

St. Louis Organization First Choice Among Six Clubs Bidding for Event.

PLAY TO BEGIN JUNE 14

Olympia Cup Competition Starts Then — Tournament Play Scheduled June 16 to 21.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Out of a field of six entries in the race for the Western amateur golf championship tournament the Sunset Hill Country Club of St. Louis won an easy victory at the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association held tonight at the Congress Hotel.

Immediately the date was set by the Executive Committee. The Olympia cup event will be staged June 14 and the amateur championship June 16 to 21. These dates it may be noted preceded the coming of the dry period when the high ball will be no more and the cocktail will be relegated to oblivion.

Cleveland Gets Open Event.

The Mayfield Country Club of Cleveland was awarded the open championship which will be staged July 24 to 26, and the Junior event went to the Flossmoor Country Club of Chicago, Aug. 13 to 15.

The Blue Hills Country Club ran second to Sunset Hill, the other candidates being Olympia Fields of Chicago, the Town and Country Club of St. Paul, Mayfield and Flossmoor. Blue Hills was the only real contender, the others withdrawing early in the balloting.

The Town and Country Club and the Memphis Country Club applied for the amateur event in 1920, and Olympia Fields also announced it would at some time bid for the classic.

Barnes to Come Here.

Right after Sunset Hill had secured the event it was announced that James Barnes, the Western open champion, would be the club professional this season. Jim has resigned his position at the Broadmoor Club of Colorado Springs.

The St. Louis delegation included Jesse Carleton, Judge W. D. Becker, Eberhard Anheuser, W. G. Anderson and H. S. Wheeler.

634 STOCKHOLDERS IN CARDINALS MAY LOSE ALL RIGHTS

Foreclosure Might Prove Disastrous to Those Failing to Protect Interests.

COULD BE "FROZEN OUT"

Men Who Raised $90,000 Last Fall Hold Whip Hand; Final Appeal Made.

In response to a query from the Post-Dispatch as to the fate of the 634 out of 700 stockholders in the Cardinals, providing they ignored the final appeal of W. G. Schofield, secretary of the club, issued yesterday, one of the holders of a small block of stock replied that he had come to believe unless a foreclosure is averted, his stock will be worthless.

On condition that his name be not revealed, the informant of the Post-Dispatch discussed the position of the 634 small stockholders and explained he had long since regarded his investment in Cardinal stocks as a "flyer" and not likely to produce any dividends. To the best of his knowledge, he said there were 634 persons who had bought small blocks of stock ranging from $25 to $500 when the purchase was made and the original issue of stock placed on the market. In addition there are about 70 men who came to the rescue of the club and put up money last fall with which to pay a $50,000 installment on the purchase price of the Cardinals.

Appeal Was Ignored.

It is these 70 men who hold the whip hand under present conditions. The stockholder admitted that several appeals had been made to all interested last fall to come in and protect their original investments by subscribing to the fund to meet the $50,000 obligation.

Consequently, he says, those who failed to join in the subscription have none but themselves to blame if the club is taken over by the holders of the second mortgage and the 634 small stockholders consequently are "frozen out."

"If the club is put up at action under a foreclosure," he said, "it is likely to result in two things. One of these is that an outsider may come in and bid for the club. Whatever this outsider pays in excess of $90,000 (sufficient to pay off the second mortage) will be divided proportionately among the stockholders.

"On the other hand, if no outsider bids, men who put up the $90,000 can take the club at their own price and by simply settling the obligation will cause the many holders of small blocks of stock to lose their interest in the club.

"It is possible, but hardly probable, that the men who put up the money for the second mortage will make good, thus averting a loss for the small stockholders.

Concerning Russell Gardner.

"If Russell Gardner makes a bid of $250,000 for the club, it seems the wise thing to do would be to accept it. The men behind the club are now 'in' $265,000, which represents $175,000 paid at the time the thransfer was made and $90,000 additional. Consequently, if Gardner makes such a bid, the present owners would get out with a loss of only $15,000.

"Gardner, however, would have to assume an additional indebtedness of $125,000 which still is due the former owner of the club. As I understand it, whatever is realized for the club in excess of $90,000 would be divided proportionately among the stockholders. This would leave $160,000, providing $250,000 was bid, and the present owners would lose very little by such a deal."

W. G. Schofield, secretary of the Cardinals, recently pointed out that stock in the club has no market value. It is issued in blocks of $25, $50 and $100, he said, all of which is common stock. Moreover, the only assets the club possesses is the real estate upon which the park stands. The players, Schofield said, might be counted as assets, but in reality were not, since if they were disposed of, the club would cease to exist.

Upon Branch Rickey's return from New York, a meeting of the board of directors will be called at which time the question of whether foreclosure proceedings will be instituted, is to come up for decision.

BALL AND BURKE HOME FROM NEW YORK MEETING

President Phil Ball of the Browns, accompanied by Manager Jimmy Burke, arrived home last night from New York where they attended the joint session of the major leagues. Business Manager Bob Quinn remained in the East, hoping to complete several deals he has under way.

Burke said Quinn had exerted every effort to obtain material to strengthen the Browns for the 1919 pennant race. "I never saw the club owners so difficult to do business with," said Manager Jim. "Bob has several deals pending but I'm not sure he can complete them. The other fellows either are holding on to what they have or ask unresonable terms when trade is discussed with them."

Cardinals May Get Pitcher Dick Rudolph From Braves

At Least That Is Opinion of "Ringsiders" at New York—President Rickey Admits a Trade Is On and That He Has Already Completed Several Minor Deals.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.

BRANCH RICKEY, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced tonight that the deal pending in which the Mound City club is interested had not yet been completed, but that something might come tomorrow. He also announced that he had completed several minor trades which would not be made public until he reached St. Louis.

The reason ascribed by Rickey for the failure of the most important trade to be completed is that "there are so many angles to it." He says that the deal is not especially sensational, and will not cause any great upheavals.

Still the surface indications are that it is important, for the other "angles" to which he referred seemed to be the New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Pittsburg and Cincinnati clubs. The opinion of trained observers is that they are all involved in the same trade.

Cards May Get Rudolph.

The two most conspicuous players involved in the matter according to ringsiders, are Jake Daubert of Brooklyn and Dick Rudolph of Boston. Here's the angle:

The Cardinals need pitching strength and if Rudolph is shifted he will likely go to the Cardinals.

Cincinnati wants Daubert and it is said McGraw is willing to take a chance with Hal Chase and depend upon the New York club's influence in the National League councils to have the first sacker absolved of the serious charges made against him in Cincinnati.

It also is known that McGraw wants Lee Meadows of the Cardinals, but as usual does not want to give anything except cash for him. There is slight chance of a deal being made along these lines.

However, none of the magnates will admit that there is a chance for a big interclub exchange of players or even that several individual trades will be made.

Johnson Goes to Washington.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, will go to Washington otmorrow to take up the question once more with the War Department of facilitating the mustering out of players.

Protest Against New Tax.

Baseball owners awoke today to the wisdom of making protest against the increase of the amusement tax to 20 per cent.

The committee appointed at the joint meeting on Thursday to confer with the Internal Revenue Collector concerning the collection of the present tax, has now been instructed to confer with the Senate and House Commitees in an effort to show what a burden such an additional tax would be.

One major league owner remarked yesterday that a 20-per-cent tax on baseball tickets would limit the attendance to such an extent that no club could show a clean slate at the end of the season, much less make any money.

Minors Can "Draft" Players.

It developed today that under the "selected sale" plan a name which the minors are using in preference to the word draft that Class AA clubs can draw one player from each club of the classification next below between Oct. 1 and Oct. 10 for $1500. Class A can draft from Class B unrestricted as to members for $1200; Class B from Class C unrestricted for $750; and Class C from Class D unrestricted for $500.

On the face of it this is a much better plan than was in operation under the old order of things, more particularly as farming out under optional agreement will, if discovered, be punished by a fine.

To save a little time the national board of the minor leagues met and heard several cases, most important of which had to do with the charge by J. J. McCaffery of Toronto that J. C. McGill or Indianapolis har tampered with Larry Lajoie. Verbal statements were made by both sides, but decision was reserved until some documentary evidence can be examined.

Herrmann Signs Agreement.

The meeting of the minor baseball leagues adjourned here this afternoon without securing the signatures of all members of the National Commission to the temporary pact which is to take the place of the national agreement. A special committee reported back to the main body that Chairman Garry Herrmann had signed, but that the signatures of Presidents Johnson and Heydler of the American and National Leagues, respectively, were not expected before Monday. Secretary J. H. Farrell has appointed a committee to secure these.

This agreement when signed, will temporarily take the place of the national agreement until such time as a new and more complete pact can be drawn up. The National Association of professional baseball leagues will appoint a committee of seven to prepare the document which will be submitted to the National Commission at Cincinnati several weeks hence.

Browns Buy Bronkie From Indianapolis; Yale Sloan Signed

THE first deal since what may be called the "split between the major and minor leagues," came today, when it was announced by Business Manager Bob Quinn of the Browns, that he had purchased Third Baseman Herman Bronkie from the Indianapolis club of the American Association.

Bronkie played a few games with the St. Louis Cardinals at the close of the 1918 campaign.

At the same time, Quinn announced that he had signed Outfielder Yale Y. Sloan to a contract for next season. Sloan was a member of the Browns last season until he joined the navy.

SUTTON WANTS TO TEACH BILLIARDS TO SOLDIERS

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—George Sutton, Chicago, veteran "handless" billiard champion, is to volunteer his services to the Government as an instructor in hospitals of disabled soldiers. Sutton, referred to as the "miracle man" of the billiard world, is preparing his personal affairs so that he can undertake the work.

Sutton, who lost both hands in a saw mill accident when 8 years old, is pointed to as a clear illustration of what can be accomplished by self-determination. Sutton dresses himself, plays championship billiards, drives his motor car, plays golf and is able to write.

"I am confident that I can be of aid to soldiers who have lost hands," Sutton said. "These men need mental advise as well as instruction. I have been through the mill and can teach them to again become useful citizens."

SPEARS SIGNS TO COACH DARTMOUTH NEXT SEASON

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 18—Clarence W. Spears, coach of Dartmouth 1917 varsity football eleven, has signed a contract to head the green team next year, according to announcement made by Graduate Manager of Athletics H. G. Penden. Last fall Spears coached the Student Army Training Corps eleven, which mainly through lack of material failed to measure up to the standard of former Dartmouth elevens.

Spears has been associated with football at Dartmouth for the past five years. During the 1914 and 1915 seasons he held down a regular guard position and in the latter year he won a place on Walter Camp's all-American team. The following year he served as coach of one of the best freshman teams that Dartmouth ever turned out. This team won all its games by big margins, completing the season with its goal line uncrossed.

Spears was prevented from playing that year by virtue of the fact that he had already participated in intercollegiate football for one year before coming to Dartmouth.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

The clash will be for five games, total pins to count, and will start at 2 o'clock, at the Washington alleys.

The first specials of the season will be held at the Congress, with Healy and Schuttenberg oposing Beye and Schaefer in a doubles clash and Ben Winkler, a 16-year-old newcomer, opposing F. Bussman. A match also will be held in the evening.

Besides the Ameling-Smith vs. Schmitt-Waldecker clash, several other good ones will be staged at the Washington.

City Association Meeting.

The annual meeting of the City Bowling Association will be held at the American Annex at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Several important questions will be decided at this gathering. Feature among these is whether St. Louis will bid for the 1920 A. B. C. tourney at the annual meeting at Toledo in March. Opinion at present seems to be divided. Alley awards also will be made for the city scratch and handicap tournaments. Dates also will be selected.

Women's Tourney in March.

At the meeting of the Women's Bowling Association it was decided to hold the annual tournament in March, with the entries to close March 1, and the event to open a week or 10 days later. The choice of alleys was left to the officers. Immediately after the tourney, new officers will be elected and the prizes distributed. The event will be held on a scratch basis.

All the women voted in favor of the National tourney to be held in Toledo, and a good entry is looked for. Milwaukee, Toledo and Chicago as well as this city, has increased its membership. The entries close Feb. 20 and must be in at that time. Last year two Omaha fives were unable to roll because their entry came a day late.

Tournament at Byrne's.

Bobby Byrne announces that he will stage a mixed doubles tournament at his alleys Tuesday evening. An event of this kind last week drew 18 entries. On Tuesday afternoon Byrne's Ladies will go to Granite City for the first half of a home-and-home match with a quintet of that city.

Mixed Doubles at Werder's.

A mixed doubles tournament will be held at Werder's alleys today a week, it was announced yesterday by Al Werder. He expects at least 16 teams to compete.

INNISFAIL TEAM PLAYS BEN MILLERS TODAY IN FEATURE SOCCER CLASH

The feature game today in the St. Louis Soccer League at Cardinal Field will be the opener in which the leading Innisfails are scheduled to oppose the Ben Millers. The second clash brings together the Scullins and St. Louis Screw company. Kick-off at 2:15 o'clock, with Phil Kavanaugh as referee.

It was announced yesterday that Foley would use Szpanski at fullback in place of O'Neill, who has been suspended, while McCarthy will have O'Toole at forward for the Screw company in Bechtold's place.

Manager McCarthy of the Screw company was notified during the week by Secretary Cahill of the United States Football Association that the National Committee was at present taking under advisement the case of James (Dike) Brannigan, who was set down by the U. S. F. A. for playing here before getting his release from the Morse Dry-dock team.

Before today's game, President Barker will again warn the managers that the elevens must play clean soccer. Second offenses by players will not only call for suspensions, but expulsions from the league.

Should the Scullins win today, while the Innisfails are beaten, the two will be tied for first place. Tate Brady's aggregation has captured its last four battles.

NEW MISSOURI BOXING BILL BEING DRAWN UP

Judge Robert Hall and Others Interested in Legalizing Boxing Contests.

Before the close of the present session of the Missouri Legislature a bill calling for the legalizing of boxing bouts under a state commission will be introduced. Plans for drafting the bill are already under way and the bill will be presented in the legislature under favorable auspices.

Harry Uhlemeyer, of the South Broadway Athletic Club, has taken the matter up with Judge Robert Hall and Judge Granville Hogan, former members of the St. Louis Boxing Commission and other interested experts, with a view to making the law stand all tests. Judge Hall has volunteered to draw up the new boxing bill. No details have yet been agreed upon save that the game will be under the control of a commission and that promoters of new clubs will be heavily bonded. No decision bouts of limited length, eight or ten rounds, will probably be decided upon.

Promoters will be held in check and the Governor of the State will be given power to remove any commissioner from office at any time. Only men who will execute the boxing laws fearlessly and without favor will be retained on the commission.

Many States Ask New Laws.

At present several states have introduced or are planning to introduce boxing measures, among them being New York, Nebraska and Illinois. Four other states are asking for more liberal extensions of their present boxing laws, one of them being California where contests have been limited to four rounds.

Judge Hall, before his election to the bench, was associated with Judge Granville Hogan and Harry Sharpe on the St. Louis Boxing Commission. The commission laid down some excellent rules, but being without any power to enforce its rules, was unable to make promoters abide the regulations. The commission finally quit in disgust. Both Judge Hall and Judge Hogan are followers of all sports and games, particularly boxing and wrestling. They seldom miss an opportunity to witness a good contest.

Pal Moore a Busy Boy.

Pal Moore, who woke up Europe by outjointing Jimmy Wilde in London, will box Dick Loadman at Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 24, 10 rounds, no-decision. They're boxing in Buffalo, but not in New York Ciey, by way of a paradox, it seems. Moore is to receive $2000 and his opponent $1250. Loadman added to his reputation by knocking out the bantamweight championship pretender, Johnny Ertle, a few months ago.

Moore has another bout, even more dangerous to his prestige, scheduled a week later when he boxes Frankie Burns at Baltimore, 15 rounds at 121 pounds, no-decision. Burns is an exceedingly dangerous fighter and many believe him, despite his years, to be the best legitimate bantamweight in the world.

New York Governor Wary.

When reports that he had said he would sig na bill to legalize boxing in the State if one were passed by the Legislature, were called to his attention, Gov. Smith said: "I'll wait until I see the bill in my hands before making any comment on the situation. It's one thing to legalize boxing and it's another thing to create a commission to see that the law is properly administered."

The boys agreed to make 124 pounds at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest. While in the East serving with the navy, Regan won 22 bouts. He claims to have improved greatly since he last showed here.

SEMIPRO LEAGUE WANTS A NATIONAL CIRCUIT

Resolution Adopted to Aid in Fostering Athletic Activities Throughout Country.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 18.—A national movement for the promulgation and furtherance of athletics and recreational activities, the director of which will be appointed by the Government, was launched in a resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the National Baseball Federation, America's premier sand lot organization, here today.

The resolution declares that the war has demonstrated that physical training and public recreation is essential to the wellbeing and morale of the people and that baseball will be one of the biggest substitutes for the social feature eliminated by the recent prohibition enactment.

Action on severing relations with professional leagues was deferred. A standard set of rules covering playing and eligibility is to be drafted at the March meeting of the board of directors.

Affiliation with the American Industrial Athletic Association was formulated. Committees have been appointed by both organizations to draw up a working agreement.

Officers elected were: William S. Haddock, Pittsburg, president; James H. Lowry of Indianapolis, president of the defunct National Amateur Baseball Association, first-vice president; Tom Nokes of Johnstown, Pa., and V. E. Zetterlind of Detroit, reelected secretary and treasurer respectively; Clayton C. Townes of Cleveland was elected to the newly created office of counsel. Membership of the board of directors was increased by the addition of two past presidents.

The next meeting is subject to the call of the board of directors.

DON'T YELP, HELP

Why There Must Be a Scarcity of SUPER-SIXES

There have never been enough Hudson Super-Sixes to meet the demand.

Production was to have been stopped January 1st. Then, unexpectedly, the ban against manufacture was lifted. Orders for closed cars remained to be filled. So when authority to continue manufacture was given, all efforts were turned to filling those closed car orders.

At $2450 for the Seven-Passenger Phaeton (delivered St. Louis) it is a distinctive value

That is the condition today. No open car models, the seven-passenger and the four-passenger phaetons, will be built for some time. Normal factory production cannot be resumed before June.

Only a few open cars are in the hands of dealers. The factory will have none for some time. If you want an open model Super-Six, the type that has given Hudson so much prestige, you should try to get one of those now in stock. The first suggestion of Spring will exhaust all that are now available.

The Super-Six owes its leadership not alone to the performance and endurance it has proved, but to its dollar value.

What car in performance, durability, reliability, smartness and beauty at any price excels the Super-Six? The seven-passenger Hudson phaeton sells at $2450, delivered St. Louis.

60,000 Super-Sixes have made the White Triangle known on every highway

FORD ANNOUNCES PLANS.

J. J. Wright, general manager of the St. Louis district for the Ford Motor Co., returned from meeting of the branch managers held in Detroit, Jan. 6 to 11. He brings the information that present conditions do not warrant a reduction in price of Ford cars. It has always been the policy of the Ford company, he said, to reduce the price of Ford cars when consistently possible, but that is not possible at this time, owing to the high cost of manufacturing conditions.

Production of the Ford car is being rushed as rapidly as possible and Wright says that the normal output of 3000 cars per day will be reached by March 1. After that the Ford company will work toward a production of 4000 cars per day, which output will be reached as soon as the plants of the company now being used by the Government are released.

NEW ESSEX CAR PUT THROUGH HARD STUNTS

After you ride in an Essex car you do not believe it can be possible. That was the experience of a representative of the Post-Dispatch who was taken for demonstration in the new Essex Four, which has just been received by the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co. The Essex is practically a junior Hudson, and its four-cylinder valve-in-head motor runs as smoothly and with the same even torque as the average light six car.

From a standing start, in high, the car made the first half of Art Hill at 30 miles an hour and then slowed down to five miles, then started again, still in high, and reached the top of the hill, again going at 30 miles speed. The Essex has a stiff frame which gives it easy riding qualities and the springs and seats are soft and springy enough to minimize whatever vibration the former does not take up. In all of the demonstration run the sturdy motor was almost noiseless and on the hardest pulls up heavy hills there was no knock and no labor, although the car was taken directly off a freight car and put into service for the demonstration.

C. R. Frampton, the manager of the Hudson-Phillips company, says that the interest in the Essex has been far beyond his expectation. The showrooms at 3318 Locust street have been crowded with people looking at the new Essex since the first car was unloaded early Thursday morning. The new Essex is of very handsome design and the beveling along the body is carried out to the end of the hood and radiator, giving it a perfect streamline effect. One of the features of the Essex is its unusual economy in the use of gasoline and oil.

HALF SOLING IN FAVOR.

The demand for Gates Half-soled Tires has within a few years built the Gates Rubber Co. from a one-room factory into a great industry and the other half of the story is not yet told.

So far the demand has far exceeded the supply, but new factory units will soon be in full swing so that hundreds of new dealers can be appointed in the near future.

As a conservation measure, a saving to the motorist, the elimination of puncture troubles and improvement in the appearance and comfort of his car, the Gates Half-Sole Tire is without an equal. It is applied over the tread-worn tires, thereby giving the worn tire double life; it costs only half as much; increases the riding qualities of a car, gives more mileage on gasoline and makes the car look better. The St. Louis representative is the Cooper-Higgins Co., 1907 Locust street.

PULLMAN INSTALLS TRUCKS

H. B. Marshall, local manager of the Exide factory branch, has just received word that two new Elwell-Parker industrial trucks have been shipped to the local Pullman company for use in their local shops. Both of these trucks are equipped with the Ironclad-Exide type of battery.

The local industrial truck field was progressing rapidly until war broke out. At that time the Government required every industrial truck that could be made so that none were available for the commercial field and on that account the Ironclad-Exide type of battery has not been available, all of the factory output going to the Government. Present indications are that there will be a very marked increase in the number of industrial trucks used in and around St. Louis now that these are again available."

AUTO SHOW SET FOR FEB. 17-22 AT EXHIBIT BLDG.

With Second Floor Partitions Out and Concreted, Dealers Promise Biggest and Handsomest Display Ever Held.

The twelfth annual St. Louis automobile show is officially announced. The ban against such public functions having been lifted by the War Industries Board, St. Louis is to have an automobile show which will eclipse any previous effort that has been made in St. Louis by the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association. Automobile show conditions this year are changed. The manufacturers' shows heretofore held in Chicago and New York have been abandoned, perhaps forever, and the shows in those cities are local in character, given by the local dealers, just as the St. Louis exhibition is.

The dates for the St. Louis show have been set by the Show Committee for Feb. 17 to 22 inclusive. The place is the Exhibit Building, formerly the historic Southern Hotel, which occupies the entire city block from Broadway to Fourth street, between Walnut and Elm streets.

A contractor is now at work in the famous old hostlery, tearing out every partition on the second floor, o that when completed this floor will be as open almost as the main floor. The entire second floor is to have concrete flooring laid before the automobile show opens and the walls are to be smoothed and decorated.

The Show Committee, which is in charge of the big motoring event, consists of H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., chairman; Phil H. Brockman of the De Luxe Automobile Co., William L. Johnson of the Johnson Automobile Co., Joseph A. Schlecht of the Mound City Buggy and Auto Co., ex officio, and Robert E. Lee, editor of the Auto Review and association secretary, general manager.

The first floor of the building will be used for the display of passenger cars only. A large part of the remodeled second floor will also be given over to passenger cars but there is to be an unusual display made of motor car accessories and supplies and of the hundred and one things that go to add to the convenience or happiness of a motor car owner.

Friday, at the solicitation of a number of handlers of commercial cars, the Show Committee decided to allot a room for the commercial car men, in which they will have desks and the opportunity to meet possible truck buyers and to display pictures and literature pertaining to their respective cars. This room will be at the northeast corner of the first floor.

The show management mailed Saturday night invitations to nearly 10,000 sub-dealers in automobiles and accessories in the territory surrounding St. Louis. This territory is inclusive of Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, parts of Louisiana and a small portion of Indiana. At last year's show there were dealers in attendance from 11 states.

The space for exhibitors has not been allotted but will be the last of this week at a meeting called for that purpose. The affair is a lottery as intensely interesting to the participants as to those in any former big lottery now under the legal ban of Uncle Sam. The capital prize is the best space—the best located—in the building.

There is to be a novel departure in the scheme of decoration this year. The practice of former years will be abandoned and instead of greens and smilax, the motif will be patriotic with thousands of flags and streamers and festoons and a general blending of purple and gold therewith, the latter two being the official automobile show colors. The contract for the decorations was let by the Show Committee Friday to the Western Decorating Co. of St. Louis.

In remodeling the second floor none of the features of the old Southern Hotel of historic interest will be touched except what was known as the "breakfast room" or "ordinary" which is torn out. That was an octagonal dining room in which some of the most famous men of the country have taken their matutinal meal.

It is expected that the first floor cafe will be opened for the automobile show by the Statler Hotels Co. with Statler service for patrons of the automobile show.

STILL BUSY MAN AT 85.

S. C. Johnson, head of the S. C. Johnson & Son of Racine, Wis., celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday with his employes and the people of Racine, Dec. 24. This firm is the manufacturer of Johnson's Freeze Proof and Johnson's Wax, etc., which have a very wide-spread sale. M. Johnson announced on his birthday that $45,000 in Liberty Bonds would be divided among the 150 employes of the firm, and the employes in turn presented him with 85 American beauty roses and a handsome pair of binoculars. Although 85 years old, Mr. Johnson is still the active financial head of the business, spending several hours a day at the office. The business was started in 1882, when he was 48 years old and has grown from nothing to the largest wax polish concern in the world.

WHY PRICE CUTTING IS IMPROBABLE

James E. Newell, president of the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige and tearns distributors, thus explains why prices will be maintained:

"A general expectation that the termination of the war and the consequent release by the Government of priority claims, will be followed by a sudden drop in prices is a mistaken understanding. Automobile prices are determined by two factors—cost of mataerials and labor.

"Neither of these two factors will be changed for some time to come, as we know that numerous industries that use metals in their production were starved and their output curtailed in most cases because of their inability to secure these metals aat any figure.

"The personal or labor factor is a very important one and as its influence will be maintained for some time its cost will remain stationary. Labor on Government activities was maintained by the elimination of outside or private work and even then we were about a million men short. Skilled labor, such as is essential in the motor car industry, will surely be as well paid, if not better, because of the additional training that has been received by those in the Government service.

"Stearns and Paige cars are at reasonable prices, with no arbitrary inflation and in consequence there will be no arbitrary reduction. Price reduction will come only by the reduction of the two factors that I mentioned before, and that cannot be for some time to come, if ever."

France Gives Aid to America

The pouring out of French blood and the enormous financial sacrifices are not the only aid France has given America. We are indebted to the French peasants for a perfect remedy for stomach, liver and intestinal ailments which has not only been marvelously successful over there, but has been equally so over here. The ingredients are imported and put up for sale in this country by Geo. H. Mayr, for many years a leading Chicago chemist, under the name of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Lower Prices for Motor Trucks

One Government Act Tells the GMC War Story

One Official act of the United States Government tells in the simplest way the outstanding story of GMC trucks in war.

When the War Department sought to solve the problems growing out of too many models in motor transport, standardized truck sizes resulted.

Where no commercial model could be found to fit the exacting requirements, government specifications supplied the lack.

When it came to the ¾—1 ton truck there was a commercial chassis ready-built.

It was the GMC Model 16.

It had already been proved in ambulance service on the Mexican Border.

It had served the Allies ably in ambulance work before the United States entered the war, and was selected by the Medical Department in anticipation of the United States joining the Allies. Thousands were subsequently purchased for ambulance service.

Later in the war, when the Government decided to select a truck chassis to be adopted as Class "AA" for all military purposes, this GMC Model 16, strictly on its merits, in competitive tests, in the hands of Government officials, and subjected to the most exacting trials, made a perfect score, and it became the official Government standard—picked as it stood.

Because of the enormous Government demand our production on this model had reached the point at the close of the war which now enables us, by continuing full speed ahead, to offer the trade this same model at our pre-war price of $1,495, a reduction of $280.

This is the truck that made good in France, Belgium and Italy in the days of battle; and it will continue to make good in peaceful pursuits.

This history-making Model 16 is but one of six good trucks built in the GMC factory; every one of which has equally as good a record—even though less spectacular—in more than two hundred lines of business —prices reduced on all models.

WARD MADE MANAGER.

Samuel V. Ward, who about four months ago joined the truck sales force of the Kardell Motor Car Co., has been appointed manager of the motor truck department of the company, his service, according to Manager H. F. Fahrenkrog, having thoroughly demonstrated his capacity. The truck lines handled by the Kardell company are the Reo and the Kelly-Springfield, providing a complete range of capacities. The company's passenger car lines are the Reo and the Dort.

NASH AT FULL SPEED.

F. W. Webb, assistant manager of the St. Louis branch of the Southwest Nash Motor Co., returned Friday from the Nash factory. He reports that the factory will be in full production by February 3. The large number of inquiries coming to the factory from all sections of the country back up the information that this will be the biggest year in the history of the automobile trade in general. The Nash factory has guaranteed all prices not to decline prior to July 1 or later.

TRUCKS RECOGNIZED BY A. A. A. WITH BUREAU

NEW YORK CITY, Jan. 18.—Realizing that the passenger automobile and the motor truck are economical fellow-occupants of the road, the American Automobile Association, through recent action of its executive directors has added to its list of national boards one which will have to do with motor truck operation.

President David Jameson has appointed as the chairman of the new board, Stedman Bent, president of the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, who is thoroughly acquainted with motor truck transportation needs. John R. Eustis, who has made a special study of road transportation, is the new secretary of the motor truck board, which will have its offices at the New York City, A. A. A. headquarters, 501 Fifth avenue at Forty-second street claimed to be the busiest corner in the United States.

The motor truck board will include men from all sections of the country, and every A. A. A. club which creates a motor truck committee will be given representation.

WINTER TIRE CARE.

To the winter motorist who would reduce to a minimum his dismounts to repair tires under the unpleasant conditions of zero weather the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. offers some timely warnings regarding the cold weather care of tires.

The very first precaution against undue tire trouble is a rigid inspection of the casing for cuts and small holes, which should be plugged with tire putty. Tires should be kept water tight as protection against the wet, slushy roads and pavements. Water seeping into tire quickly rots and deteriorates the cotton fabric and causes blowouts.

A favorite place for rough frozen ruts and sharp pieces of ice to jab and slash a tire is the portion of casing between the rim and side wall. Such punishment will be greatly reduced by proper and full inflation.

Riding the car trucks is a popular winter practice with motorists because he dodges packed ice and snow embankments near the curbing. This practice is not only dangerous but wears ridges in the side of the tire tread. Avoid car tracks and frozen ruts.

Do not apply anti-skid devices too tightly to tire just to eliminate the clanking and racket of the chains beating against the mud guards or fenders. Tires are cut severely by tight chains. Chains should also be periodically inspected and when the cross links become worn, rough or sharp, should be removed and replaced.

WINTER BATTERY CARE.

C. E. Mouselle, general manager of the Willard Storage Co., says about battery care in winter:

"Winter days are short and often stormy; winter nights are long and dark. In winter you use your lights more. The engine is cold, the oil stiff and carburation is slow. It is harder to crank the motor and it takes longer. More current is needed.

"You run your car at slower speeds and for short distances only, so that the battery gets less current from the generator, although it must give out more current to lights and starter.

"If you lay up your car and pay no attention to the battery, it will gradually become discharged, the water in the solution will evaporate, and the plates will harden, and when spring comes, you will find it either maimed for life, or dead past all hope.

"If you are within reach of a Willard Service Station, drive in every two weeks for the consulting service which they render to all owners of storage batteries. Buy a Willard Hydrometer from your nearest Willard Service Station and test the battery solution frequently. If the reading for any cell is below 1.275 on two successive tests, go to the Willard Service Station and have your battery charged. Fill the cells with distilled water as you do in summer, keeping the solution about half an inch above the top of the plates."

ADVISED TRUCK PUSHING

Frank Martin of the Martin Motor Truck Co., St. Louis, and dealers from nearly every state in the Union and Canada and Mexico, gathered at the factory of the Fulton Motor Truck Co., Farmingdale, L. I., for a two-day convention Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 8 and 9. Plans for a big year in production and distribution of the Fulton ton and a half truck and the new Fulton Locomotor were discussed.

The keynote of the convention was struck the first day by H. T. Melhuish, advertising manager, who urged the dealers to take advantage of the co-operative advertising plan.

"Advertise in the newspapers," said Mr. Melhuish. "There is no surer method of attracting the buyers. You have agreed to take the trucks we make, but they will stay on your floor until you advertise to move them."

Practical advise on service was given by C. J. Fox, service manager. Dealers' were urged to carry an adequate stock of parts for the better serving of Fulton owners Mr. Fox also advised the dealers to take advantage of the supply of skilled mechanical labor coming from the army on demobilization.

ROADS NEED ATTENTION.

"If every motor car owner and prospect would do his little mite toward good roads, the benefits to himself and to the country at large would be so great as to practically prohibit an estimate of them," says J. C. Kardell, of the Kardell Motor Car Co., Dort distributor in St. Louis.

"I am sure we all want good roads but a good many don't seem to realize that to get any improvement like this necessitates action by the individual citizen. Citizens seem too busy to devote time to these things and yet a few moments by a large number would do more than ceaseless effort by a minority.

"City motorists especially should take this to heart. For city motorists not only like to use the highways for their own touring but they pay the food bills that are caused in part by lack of good roads on which to truck in the food stuffs from the farms."

NEW HUPMOBILE PRICES.

The new price of the Hupmobile touring car and roadster is announced by the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., at $1335 f. o. b. Detroit. This price will be in effect January 7. The Hupmobile factory has returned to production on a quantity scale, which in spite of continued high cost of labor and material has enabled the company to make this reduction in price.

PIONEER TRUCK NOW ALL STEEL PRODUCT

The new Pioneer truck, which is to be built by the Harry Newman Corporation, is to be known hereater as the Pioneer All-Steel truck. Newman announced Saturday that he had arranged to use on the truck steel disc wheels, which does away with the last piece of wood used in construction, so that the new name is justified.

Newman announces that he will hold his second annual truck show at his sales and service rooms, 3410-14 Locust street, February 17 to 22 inclusive, this being during the period of the regular passenger automobile show at the Exhibit Building. Newman will then show the new Pioneer All-Steel truck in all its models and a number of models of the Diamond T truck.

B. F. Niemeyer, formerly office manager for the Barth Motor Car Co., has returned to his position with that company from army service. Oscar L. Baerens has been added to the sales force.

OAKLAND PRICE FIXED.

E. A. Hatfield, president of the Mississipi Valley Motor Co., general distributors of the Oakland car, announces that Oakland prices are guaranteed against decline up to July 1. The factory advises that while there has been no appreciable reduction in the cost of materials, they do anticipate some reduction in their overhead expense, due largely to increased production.

Frank Bishop, Briscoe distributor for St. Louis; Arthur Walsh and J. C. Carlisle, the latter district road manager, will attend the Chicago Automobile Show.

VELIE'S BIG WAR WORK.

The Velie Atuomobile Co. of St. Louis have received a letter from the Velie Motors Corporation, advising that they have completed all war contracts, after four years of activity, commencing in 1914 when representatives of the French Government placed with it orders for 2000 motor trucks. In 1916 1000 more were sent to the Mexican border for the use of United States troops, while in 1917, when the United States entered the war, many thousand more were ordered. The Velie company supplied 3000 Liberty trucks. Later, an order was received for 1000 ¾-ton trucks. Then trailers were also manufactured for the heavy trucks.

The Velie company also turned out 25,000 small carts for carrying machine guns to their emplacements and to handle ammunition and other supplies. The order for the carts alone aggregated $3,000,000. The total of contracts handled during the war by the Velie company aggregated $10,000,000, which does not include the contracts handled prior to the entrance of the United States into the world war. The plant is now operating on a normal peace basis again and is preparing for a huge volume of business during the new year.

RECORD TRUCK ORDER.

"The size of a truck order does not necessarily depend upon the size of a city or town," says Andrew Langenbacher, sales manager of the Duplex Truck Co. of Lansing, Mich.

"Of course large orders are always forthcoming from cities of great population, like Boston, Philadelphia, St. Louis, New Orleans and Denver, but a small city up in Oregon, unknown to the great majority of Americans, recently forwarded to us an order that compares most favorably with the sales efforts of our big city distributors.

"The city in Oregon is Pendleton, with a population of about 5000—and our distributor is the Pendleton Auto Co., which has as its territory several counties surrounding Pendleton.

"This distributing agency placed an order for over $300,000 worth of Duplex trucks—an amount equivalent to $60 for every man, woman and child in Pendleton."

OPERATES TO SAVE GAS.

The Red Devil Manufacturing Co., 2807-9 Locust street, St. Louis, has put on the market, in addition to its Red Devil products, "Speedo Tablets" for gasoline improvements. It is claimed that the tablets eliminate about 85 per cent of the carbon trouble, because it makes the poor gas rich, and produces a film of oil in the combustion chamber after each explosion of gasoline. It is also claimed that the use of Speedo Tablets greatly assists in maintaining battery efficiency in cold weather. The tablets are used in all grades of gasoline or coal oil. In a special offer to commercial car users it is claimed that the tablets at the cost of one cent per gallon will increase the mileage and efficiency at least 25 per cent. They are guaranteed to contain no injurious chemicals.

CRANBERRIES ON CORDS.

An instance of the practicability of the use of motor trucks of the farm, is contained in the experience of Theodore H. Budd, a New Jersey cranberry grower, who is using a one tone truck on Goodyear cord tires. This truck is used to pull capacity loads of cranberries from the edge of a marsh over a route marked by treacherous bogs and soggy masses of sand, making twenty to twenty-five complete 4½-mile trips daily, replacing five teams, and carrying twice the number of boxes of cranberries formerly hauled by teams per day. The experience of this grower is that pneumatic tires are the only tires that have permitted the hauling of big loads through the deep soft bogs, other types of tires being unable to gain traction on account of their narrow surface and hard edges.

K-P The Lock That Stops the Leak

THE importance of Piston Rings in confining exploded gas to the production of power and also in keeping oil out of the explosion chamber, and thus determining the efficiency of the engine, is recognized by all experienced motorists.

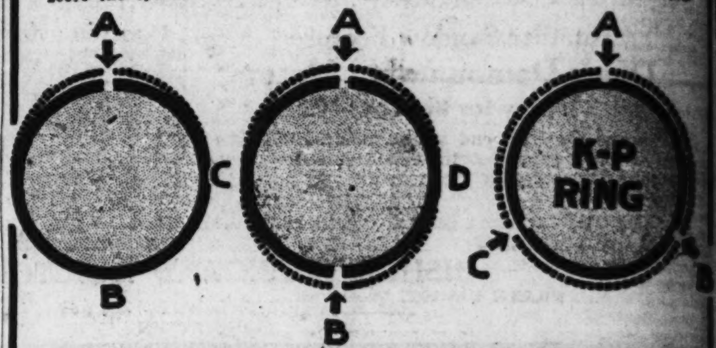
Many efforts have been made to devise a Piston Ring that would accomplish this, but it was not until the invention and introduction of the 3-piece K-P Piston Rings that success was universally conceded.

Attention is directed to the graphic illustrations below, which, with the explanatory texts, demonstrate why this Piston Ring is superior to all others.

Why One Point of Expansion fails to keep the Gas in and the Oil out—One opening provides rigid resistance at the point B, causing expansion at and in the direction of A. The result is a construction persistently out of round, not only failing to keep the gas in and the oil out, but also tending to score the cylinder.

Why Two Points of Expansion fail to keep the Gas in and the Oil out—Two openings provide two rigid bases for expansion in the direction of A and B. The segments A C B and A D B are without mutual support and the resulting oval wears the cylinder out of round and furnishes no obstacle to the passing of gas or oil.

Why Three Points of Expansion keep the Gas in and the Oil out—The arcs A C, C B, B A, represent triangular segments, each supporting the other so that the circumferential bearing always remains in a true circle. Expansion is equalized, and no gas or no oil can get by at all, thus saving gas and avoiding undue deposit of carbon.



There is, however, a particular feature of the K-P Piston Ring that immediately distinguishes it. In between the upper and lower ring there is a patented vertical tongue and groove which has proved to be the last and one needed thing to "Keep the Gas In and the Oil Out".

There are other noteworthy points in the construction of this Piston Ring. The three openings are absolutely sealed. The method of pinning makes it impossible for the pin to sheer. At the same time the construction is exceedingly resilient.

Send for our booklet which will inform you fully as to just why you should use K-P Piston Rings and no others.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

VALUES IN THE STOCK MARKET ARE REDUCED

Trade During Week Is Light, but Sharp Losses Are Scored by Many Issues.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Final prices on Liberty Bonds today were: 3½s, 99.20; first convertible 4s, 94.02; second 4s, 93.86; first convertible 4¼s, 96.10; second convertible 4¼s, 95; third 4¼s, 96; fourth 4¼s, 95.02.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"The dull performance on the past week's stock market—enlivened only by yesterday's 'bear raid'—brought forth the familiar comment that the financial community and the country at large are still waiting for indications of the future trend of events. In one sense, the market is always awaiting developments, but its more common and pleasing role is to 'discount the future,' before the outside public has any idea of what is about to happen. It is the apparent failure of the Stock Exchange to do this in the present instance that has puzzled the commentators.

"As a matter of fact, the trend of business in Wall Street not infrequently indicates a judgment which the observer himself has difficulty in interpreting, because it is expressed in negative terms.

The Recent War Markets.

"The relative stability of prices during most of the terrific German 'drives' of last spring and summer, when, according to the military critics, the fortunes of the allies were at their lowest ebb, is the most recent instance of the sort. It would be pressing the inference rather far to assume that even at that juncture, financial judgment foresaw, not only the failure of the German arms, but the failure of allied victory to result in a great rise in prices. At all events the market's behavior then was entirely consistent with its subsequent trend.

"Enough water has flowed under the bridge since the collapse of the Teutonic Powers to dispel, at all events, the expectation of an immediate and indiscriminate demand on the part of Europe for 'reconstruction materials,' or even of the prompt appearance in the commodity markets of domestic business, held in the check hitherto by war-time restrictions and high prices. From both these sources, much may eventually be expected.

"The real viewpoint of business people may be inferred by recalling that, as the war drew toward its close, predictions of active and highly profitable trade were mingled with warnings against the 'dumping' of Europe's stocks of cheap goods upon our markets.

"It is somewhat along these lines that opinion seems to lie. With the stimulus and artificial conditions of war removed, the commercial and financial world is confronted with a situation which is, in a measure, familiar, and with which it will know how to deal. Some of the practical factors are already making their appearance—a slow and irregular decline of prices in many lines of trade, a surplus of labor at some manufacturing centers, curtailments of output at the steel mills and copper mines and prospective heavy demands upon financial resources, in connection with loans to our own and foreign Governments.

Europe Must Pay Debts.

"Over against these considerations are powerful offsets. Europe will this year be called upon to repay some half-billion dollars borrowed in the United States. Fortnightly, sales of the Treasury's debt certificates, to the amount of a half to three-quarters of a billion dollars, are being absorbed on an easy money market, and are anticipating much of the financial strain incident to the placing of the next Government loan. When such a set of circumstances is compared with our position, both at home and abroad, prior to the war, the situation is revealed in rather striking perspective.

"It might have been possible to take a serious view of the sharp break in prices yesterday, and again this morning, had not the movement borne so unmistakably the earmarks of its origin. There was no significant development in the news, to account for a sudden decline. Speculators attempted to make capital out of the reported determination of the Railroad Administration to curtail expenditures for improvements and betterments; but this was precisely what the managers of the roads themselves had been urging, in view of present high costs of materials.

"Wall Street's own explanation of the decline, as being engineered by professional speculators who took advantage of the unwillingness of the public to take a hand in the trading, probably best accounts for the incident. Some light has been thrown on the "technical position" of stocks, but very little on the general financial situation.

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The city is not surprised at the recent developments in Germany. The immediate causes are unknown, but such results were really expected, following the deception of the German people by their rulers in regard to military, political and financial conditions. The German policy of conducting the war was justifiable from the standpoint of the German people, by absolute victory. Defeat inevitably meant danger of Bolshevism, through recognition of impending times of distress and continued hardships and sacrifices, in place of the dazzling expectations of world-wide power, accompanied by colossal indemnities to be collected from the allies.

The city, and the general community, entirely endorse your attitude toward the Russian Bolsheviki. It is recognized that Bolshevism, in the widest meaning of the term, is the greatest common danger confronting all countries, the menace varying only a degree. A united policy of all civilized Governments is necessary in dealing with it.

It is held, that probably, the best guarantees against unnecessary bloodshed, are great firmness on the part of the allies, combined with humanitarian action in supplying food. The present obscure situation, necessarily has a bearing upon both the peace conference and the League of Nations itself.

Finance in Peace Settlement.

The importance of finance in the final peace settlement is growingly recognized. Given a restoration of order, Germany's power of paying an indemnity, by installments, is regarded as almost unlimited, but on grounds of expediency, the allies will not demand an excessive sum, which would only unduly stimulate German exports.

Wholesale criticism of the new Cabinet, by the Northcliffe press, is unnecessarily sweeping. Universal exception is taken to the appointment of Churchill and Smith, but Milner as Colonial Secretary, and Chamberlain as Chancellor of the Exchequer, are considered excellent.

The important monetary development of the moment is the Bank of England's abandonment of special rates on French, Italian and Belgian balances. If, however, the policy is extended to other foreign balances, a general rise in money market rates is apt to follow.

It is believed that wages here will be maintained close to their present level for some time, partly through insufficient courage on the part of the authorities to attempt an immediate and material deflation of credit. Important developments are unlikely until the army is completely demobilized, which will consume a considerable period.

The Westminster Bank has adopted a novel form of "profit sharing," distributing to its employes, as a bonus, the actual shares of the bank.

IRREGULAR VALUES FOR CORN IN CHICAGO PIT

Market Is Influenced by Uncertainty as to Hog Prices to Be Fixed for February.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Doubt as to whether the current minimum value of hogs, $17.50, would be maintained in February, had considerable to do with making the corn market today average lower. Prices closed unsettled, at the same as yesterday's finish to 1½c down, with February $1.33¼ to $1.33⅛ and May $1.28⅝ to $1.28½. Oats closed ¼c off to ¼c up, and provisions unchanged to 17c lower.

Reports that the conference to fix the February price of hogs had been postponed from Jan. 23 until Jan. 28, tended manifestly to emphasize misgivings in regard to the duration of the present standard. Inasmuch as the feeding value of corn has been one of the chief bullish factors, the possibility of a reduction in the Government hog price outweighed all other influences affecting corn. Week-end evening up by shorts resulted therefore in only temporary bulges, notwithstanding that country offerings were light in practically all sections, and despite advances of South American vessel rates in the face of removal of the Government fixed rate to Argentina.

Oats were quiet and kept within a narrow range, governed mainly by the fluctuation of corn.

Provisions depended on the same conditions as grain. Cash interests, however, bought on declines.

The fat steer market last week was firm, especially on the short-fed, 60 and 90 day cattle, which brought $1 to $1.50 more than generally expected. A good many loads with weight, between 850 and 1200 lbs., went at $14.50 to $16.75, while the extreme top of the market was $18 per cwt.

The general trade basis on steers was very strong, and while stockers and feeders and best grades of butcher cattle sold steady, supply of canners, cutters and common to medium butcher stuff was rather heavy, and compared with the high time the week before, prices on these were 50c to $1 per cwt. lower.

Prime heavy beef steers are quoted at $17 to $19; good to choice, $15.50 to $17; medium to good, $13.50 to $15; common to medium weighty steers, $12 to $13.50; common light steers, $9 to $10.50. Good to choice feeders, $11 to $12.50; common to medium, $9 to $10.50. Good to choice stockers, $9.50 to $10.50; common to medium, $8 to $9. Choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $13 to $15; good to choice, $10 to $13; common to medium, $8 to $10. Choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $11 to $13; good to choice, $10 to $11; medium to good, $9 to $10; cutters, $6.75 to $7.50; canners, $6 to $6.50. Good to choice stock cows, $7.25 to $7.75; good to choice stock heifers, $8 to $8.50.

The market on good, fat, heavy hogs yesterday was steady with Friday's close; top, $17.80; but practically demoralized on Southern lights and pigs.

Bulk of the good hogs, 170 pounds upward, sold at $17.25 and up; bulk of the good butcher hogs showing weight, $17.50 to $17.85; 120 to 150 pound pigs, $14 to $15; light common Southwest pigs, $10 to $12.50; best roughs, $16.40; half-fat kinds, $12 to $15.

With a decline of fully 50c in most cases in the sheep market, with extremes of 75c on best lambs, it reflected a weakened condition of the trade, due to the fact of a fair supply, though not materially heavier than the week before. General conditions appear favorable in this department of the market.

Bulk of the good lambs are quoted at $16.25 to $16.50; cull lambs, $11 to $13; plain, half-fat kind of lambs, $15 to $16; fat sheep, $9 to $10; choppers and bucks, $7 to $8.50; canners, $5.50; fat goats, $6 to $7; medium flesh goats, $4.50 to $5.25; canner goats, $3 to $3.50; fat kid goats, $7.50 to $10.

CORN OFF 5 TO 8 CENTS ON THE WEEK'S DEALINGS

Market Is Influenced by Report That England and France Have Cancelled Food Contracts.

Rapid downward swings in the corn market took place here last week, chiefly owing to reports that Great Britain and France had canceled big contracts for food supplies in the United States, and that corn prices here and in Argentina would be brought nearer together. Corn quotations at the close yesterday, compared with a week ago, were down 5½c to 8c. Oats were off 2⅛c to 2¾c.

Bearish sentiment dominated the corn market the greater portion of the time, after word came of the action of Great Britain and France regarding food contracts, especially as the news was almost simultaneous with announcement by the United States Food Administration that all possible steps were being taken to reduce the cost of living—a statement which was later construed as having close relation with the United States Government's offers to sell wheat to domestic millers, and with notice that licenses would be given freely for imports from Argentina.

On the other hand, shipping delays in Argentina, together with renewed curtailment of the crop movement from the farms in this country, acted as a check on the bears.

Oats weakened with corn, but the market was quiet during the decline. Cash demands were fair.

Trade in corn here was nervous yesterday, but the market showed a lower drift after an early firm spell. Bear factors were fairly large receipts, slack cash and export demands, uneasiness in important circles over the labor and economic outlook, a reported embargo on Canadian exports and imports owing to congestion of supplies on both sides of the Atlantic and efforts in certain quarters to lower the high cost of living.

Bullish factors embraced a large short interest in the market, which might easily be run to cover with the advent of real winter weather, claims that the minimum price on hogs of $17.50 will be reaffirmed for February, at the meeting next Thursday, and announcement that not a bushel of corn had left Argentina for the United States, since the ban on shipment was lifted.

Announcement that the Government would release all private shipping under its control as a war measure was without much influence on sentiment, as also was the favorable reporting by the House committee of the $100,000,000 food appropriation bill.

Oats were irregular with corn in Chicago, but the market here was neglected. Receipts were fairly large.

MIXED PRICE CHANGES MARK TRADE IN COTTON

Freight Rates on Export Cotton Fixed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Schedules of freight rates on cotton moving from American Atlantic ports during January and February to Europe were made public yesterday by the Shipping Board. They ranged from $4.50 per 100 pounds for shipments to English ports to $5.50 per 100 pounds to Italian ports. French Atlantic ports were given a rate of $4.75, and Mediterranean French ports $5.25. To Holland, Belgium and Portugal the charge is $4.75, while to Spain it is $5.25. From American Gulf ports an addition of 25 cents is made to each rate.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—The cotton market was less active today and fluctuations were irregular, with March contracts selling off from 25.12c to 24.79c and closing at 24.90c, compared with 25c at the close of yesterday. The general list opened steady, net 15 points higher to 10 points lower, and closed very steady, net 6 points higher to 10 points lower.

Near months were relatively firm at the start on covering, and after the unsettled opening prices stiffened up a few points, with May selling at 23.74c and July at 22.60c, and with the general list showing net advances of 6 to 15 points.

There was no active or aggressive demand, however, while bearish sentiment seemed to find encouragement in the week-end reviews of the goods situation, and the market soon turned easier under liquidation and a renewal of scattering pressure. May sold off to 23.30c and July to 22.28c, making net declines of about 20 to 28 points, but at this level the market steadied on covering for over-the-week-end, and there were rallies in the later trading. May closed at 23.65c and July at 22.52c.

Southern advices indicated continued firmness on the part of holders in the interior, but also reported an absence of any important demand and trading here was considered chiefly local.

Some of the reports from the goods trade indicated good prospects for business this spring, but mill curtailment was said to be increasing in some centers, owing to the absence of immediate orders.

Manchester cables said that goods buyers were very cautious and that inquiries from India and China were too few to result in immediate business.

A report was circulating that the French commission would cease buying after April 1, leaving any further requirements to be supplied by purchases through ordinary trade channels.

Cotton futures closed steady; Jan., 26.17c; March, 24.90c; May, 23.67c; July, 22.52c; Oct., 20.45c. Cotton—Spot quiet; middling, 29.05c.

"CAP" TROLL'S $1500 BOND FOR ALLEGED ROBBER IS REJECTED

Krueger Says It Is Insufficient—Miller Allows It and Then Hears of Rejection and Tears It Up.

Charles (Cap) Troll, Republican politician and professional bondsman, yesterday failed to procure the release of Thomas O'Brien of 4400 Easton avenue, charged with attempted first degree robbery, on a $1500 bond submitted to Judges Krueger and Miller of the Court of Criminal Correction.

Judge Krueger rejected the bond on the ground that it was insufficient to cover the charge and should bear the signature of two sureties. Troll then submitted it to Judge Miller, who approved it. A Deputy Sheriff, who was about to release O'Brien, discovered the bond had been rejected by Judge Krueger. When the latter discovered the bond had been honord by Judge Miller, he ordered it revoked.

Judge Miller later met Troll in the corridor of the Municipal Courts Building, and when informed that Judge Krueger had previously rejected the bond, he took it from the clerk and destroyed it.

CROCKER MAN TAKEN HERE FOR BIGAMY

Merchant With Wife and Two Children Wed Rich Oklahoma Widow in Arkansas.

"I guess I'd better plead guilty," said Stanley A. Gleave; 47-year-old produce merchant of Crocker, Mo., when he was departing in custody of a Deputy Sheriff last night, after having spent the day in futile efforts to "fix up" the predicament resulting from having married Mrs. Ellen Briggs of Oklahoma City when he already had a wife, two children and two stepchildren in Crocker.

Gleave told a reporter that it looked like his only hope lay in having his first marriage annulled, and wanted to know if it could be arranged. Police told him that in view of the fact he had been living with his first wife 20 years it was rather late to seek an annulment.

"Well, I don't believe Mrs. Briggs will prosecute me," he said. "I'd like to talk to her; mighty fine woman, Mrs. Briggs is."

Gleave said, with a show of confession, that he "just got stuck on her," and didn't learn until later that she was wealthy.

Got Along Well With No. 1.

Barring "little spats," he got along well enough with his first wife for 20 years, he said, until he met Mrs. Briggs at Sulphur Springs, Ark., last summer. He posed as a bachelor, he said, and was married to Mrs. Briggs in Bentonville, Ark., Nov. 29, the wedding being a social event in Bentonville.

However, while they were on their "honeymoon," in Texas, somebody mailed Mrs. Gleave No. 1, who was at home looking after the children and the produce business, a clipping from the Bentonville paper, telling of the ceremony. She sent a photograph of her husband to the Bentonville Sheriff, who identified it as that of the bridegroom.

The Sheriff "casually" mentioned to the local paper that Bentonville's latest social light had a considerable family in Missouri. The person with the scissors again became active, and this time Mrs. Gleave No. 2 received a clipping, which revealed the unsuspected facts about her husband.

They were at San Antonio, and Gleave convinced his "bride" that the best thing for him to do was to go home and divorce his wife, while she went back to Bentonville to wait.

Gleave Arrested Here.

Meantime, the Sheriff issued a warrant and induced Mrs. Briggs-Gleave to meet Gleave in St. Louis. A deputy followed her, and arrested Gleave when she met him at the Terminal Hotel. She insisted that she didn't want to prosecute, but the unmoved deputy "allowed" she had no choice in the matter, as the Arkansas statutes permit the authorities to start and carry on such prosecutions.

A reporter who called to see Mrs. Briggs was met at the door by a rather plump woman whose eyes were swollen from crying, and who shook her head violently and closed the door without a word.

When Gleave was asked what he proposed to do about the wife and children at Crocker he replied: "I wish to the Lord I knew how I can ever fix this up with Mrs. Briggs."

FARMER LEGISLATORS ORGANIZE

Will Caucus on All Agricultural Measures in Missouri Assembly.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18.—The farmer members of the Legislature last night formed a farmers' organization for co-operation in enactment of agricultural legislation. The five farmers in the Senate and 54 in the House intend to caucus all agricultural legislation.

Sontaor Clark Wix of Butler was chosen chairman and Representative E. F. Spencer of DeKalb secretary.

A similar organization was in existence two years ago, and efforts were made by advocates of other than agricultural legislation to induce it to take caucus action on matters outside of farming, but met with little success.

TO BUY GOVERNMENT MULES

City Officials Will Attend Stock Auction at Funston.

Comptroller Nolte yesterday delegated City Veterinarian Heyde and W. G. Dierkin, superintendent of the city stables, to attend a Government livestock auction at Camp Funston next Tuesday and Wednesday, with authority to purchase 60 mules for the Street Department. Nolte said the mules would ordinarily cost the city about $13,000, but figuring from the prices at a Government sale at Camp Pike last week, he hoped to save the city considerable.

Nolte also announced the purchase today of a towboat from the Government for $1100. The boat, which originally cost $6000, will be used as a landing barge at the foot of Mullanphy street. Nolte pointed out that this was a rare bargain, as the city could sell the machinery and timber of the boat for more than the purchase price.

PACKERS ONCE DISCUSSED PLAN FOR JOINT WASHINGTON OFFICE

Scheme Was to Card Index Legislators, and Included Making Campaign Donations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Francis J. Heney, counsel for the Federal Trade Commission in its meat packing inquiry, told the Senate Agricultural Committee today of plans which he said the packers had discussed for establishing a joint office in Washington, with a card index on Congressmen and their attitude toward legislation. He said the scheme was outlined by John Eversman, former secretary of the National Republican Congressional Committee, and included arrangements for contributions by the packers for congressional campaigns.

Letterheads of the Republican Committee, Heney said, were used by Eversman in correspondence in behalf of the packers. Eversman, he added, was employed as Washington representative of Wilson & Co.

Senator France of Maryland inquired about relations between the packers and the Food Administration, declaring it was highly improper for Food Administrator Hoover "to arrange meat prices behind closed doors" in conferences with the packers.

"Do you think it was proper for Mr. Hoover to retain in his office men on the pay rolls of the packers?" Senator Gore asked.

"It was absolutely improper," replied Heney, who said he thought Hoover's efforts were directed toward "taking care of the middleman."

LEASES ARE ALSO CLOSED FOR 3 YEARS

Same Story Is Told Concerning Flats and Small Apartments on the South Side—Returning Soldiers Need Homes.

BY BERRY MOORE.

Another increase of rents of apartments and of modern steam-heated flats is scheduled, according to Edward L. Bakewell, of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange and an apartment house specialist, having under his management the Netherby Hall, the Cathedral and many other high-class apartment buildings.

"Bids are already forthcoming for leases of apartments which will expire next spring," said Bakewell yesterday. 'Advances of from $5 to $50 a month for apartments and from $2.50 to $5 a month for flats are being offered, according to the rentals now prevailnig and the location of the buildings.

"A tenant of the Netherby Hall apartments told me that she had been offered $300 a month for her suite of nine rooms for which she is paying $250 a month. The lease has a year and a half to run. Thus she would receive at the rate of $50 a month, a bonus of $900 for her lease. Many tenants in the same neighborhood have had opportunities to sublet their suites at advances. All the apartments in the Cathedral in the same district comprising nine-room suites, were leased or re-leased last fall, each at an advance of $40 a month and none for less than than terms of three years.

Not Much Building Lately.

"There has been virtually no building, especially of the flats and apartment building type in St. Louis for a year or more, owing to the Federal restrictions on construction, while the growth of the city has been unprecedented. The result is that the supply has been practically absorbed.

"With the return of the soldiers from abroad and from the camps in this country," continued Bakewell, "the demand for homes will be greater. Many of these men were married on the eve of their entering the service, and others will be married upon their return. Modern flats and apartments, in which the majority of them will elect to live, will be at a high premium."

"Rental advances of from $5 to $10 a month are contemplated by all owners of apartments, with leases expiring next spring, who have expressed themselves to me on the subject, said D. L. Dyas, president of the Dyas Realty Co., a leading sales and apartment house agency.

"For 18 months or more apartment buildings, declared Dyas, apartment houses have been operated at little or no profit, because of the high cost of maintenance and the increased rentals to be imposed should be submitted to by tenants as only fair to the owners. It is only reasonable that the owners should be reimbursed for the extra cost of maintenance, expended from their own pockets.

Big Advances in Rents.

"Everything entering into apartment house maintenance and construction has been advanced to almost prohibitory figures and indications are that they will remain at their present levels for a long time henceforth. Those who do not feel that they can afford to pay the increased rentals, due for apartments and for modern, steam-heated flats, and which owners are compelled to ask, owing to big uplift in cost of operation, have the alternative of removing to dwellings, of which there is no dearth, and which may be had at comparatively low rentals. Many of these old dwelling have been revamped and modernized and are quite habitable.

The demand for small apartments is greater than for large ones, according to Dyas, the supply of four and five room suites being almost entirely depleted, while modern flats are being absorbed with avidity, the indications being that by next spring there will be none remaining for renters. Advances in rentals of flats will range from $2.50 to $5 a month, according to many agents.

In the West End and on the South Side in Shaw's Lafayette Addition, and in Tower Grove Heights, where the construction is modern and new, vacancies, according to real estate agents are practically unknown. The demand for buildings of the flat and apartment house desigfn in these districts, by reason of the high revenue derived from them for investment, is greater than ever before, according to Martin L. Newberry, vice president of the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co. Another advanc in rentals is due, and all indications point to continued improvement in the real estate situation in St. Louis.

The regulations of the new zone ordinance, according to Edward L. Bakewell, are so stringent that little ground remains available for apartment buildings on a large scale. Most of the unrestricted vacant ground within the city limits is in districts already established for apartment buildings, and for flats, and is therefore not desirable for houses, especially of the better class.

Notwithstanding the fact that the embargo on construction has been removed, there is little disposition indicated by builders to resume construction owing to the high prices of labor and building material. As, for instances, carpenters demanding 92½ cents an hour and plumbers $1.25 an hour.

Only two building projects of magnitude have been pushed since the rule on construction was removed. These contemplate a six-story building to be erected on the south side of Delmar boulevard just west of Clara to comprise 60 apartments and a theater with seating capacity of 2500. This is to be erected by the Belt Investment Co., of which Sam Humburg Jr., is the dominant figure. The other provides for the erection of a six-story addition to the eight-story Westmoreland at 5330 Pershing avenue. Both projects originally contemplated eight-story structures but were reduced in height in compliance with the new zone ordinance.

Plans are announced for the enlargement of the Pageant theater at Delmar boulevard at the entrance of Laurel avenue by the Mathews Real Estate Co., representing Bushnell Palmer Real Estate Co., owners of the property. These will be executed at the close of the present season, the business of the Pageant Company having justified a decision to increase its seating capacity.

RAILWAY SUPPLIES FIRM IN ITS NEW BUILDING THIS WEEK

Southern Company's Structure at Seventeenth and Olive Streets Its Third Home in 13 Years.

The Southern Railway Supply and Equipment Co. will remove this week to its new building at Seventeenth and Olive streets, comprising seven floors and basement, and the finishing touches to which are still to be applied. Construction was begun less than a year ago by the Burdeau Realty Co., upon a long-term tenancy contract, negotiated with the lessee by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

The structure is of the type that characterizes the numerous improvements which have recently been made and are in prospects for that section of the downtown district, being substantial and attractive in general appearance and having modern utility features. It is of concrete and brick, with three elevators and floor space of 70,000 feet.

Company's Third Home.

Organized as the Southern Railway Supply Co., about 13 years ago, the concern's career has been marked by steady progress and expansion, the home which it will take possession of this week being its third. It will move from 113 North Second street. Its first home was of one room on Walnut street, facing the Southern Hotel building, from which it moved in May, 1910.

The company's original capital of $65,000 was increased to $150,000 in 1916, and a year ago a further capital expansion to $250,000 was authorized, at which time also the enlarged name was adopted. Officers of the company are: Joseph C. Reed, president; Walter D. Achuff, vice president and sales manager, and Ephron Catlin Jr., secretary-treasurer.

Business Reported Growing.

"Measured by the increase in our business, Government control of railways is not a failure so far as the physical properties of the transportation lines are concerned," Reed said yesterday. "For some time prior to the temporary surrender of private control there was only hand-to-mouth buying by the railroads, however, owing to financial difficulties, so that the contrast is not altogether fair to the private managements.

"The Government, with its manifest financial advantage, is carrying forward improvement of the short lines along with the larger ones, in its policy of building up the entire rail system to meet transportation needs, and we are naturally feeling the influence of this improvement process."

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY IN YEAR.

1400 acres of fertile land, ready for the tractor; located 12 miles, over good auto road, from Stratford, Sherman County, Texas. Other farmers who have bought land here for $15 per acre have received $35 per acre from first year's crop.

Climate pleasant. Rainfall comes during growing season. Inexhaustible supply clear, pure mountain sheet water underlies this tract. Schools, churches, telephones and splendid auto roads.

$15 Texas land has returned from 50 to 150 per cent more yearly, considering investment, than $200 land in Illinois, Iowa or Missouri.

One Illinois farmer went into Stratford district some 10 years ago with only $1000 cash and sold out recently for $150,000.

Your best chance today is on good fertile low-priced land, which should soon double and quadruple in value. One crop will twice over pay for this 1400-acre tract at $15 per acre.

Only reason for selling is that the present owner is 80 years old. If he was 20 years younger it would be his great ambition to farm this tract.

Will consider income property, going business, smaller improved farm, part cash, and balance long easy terms.

ST. LOUIS PIANIST REPORTED KILLED IN ACTION OCT. 13

Another St. Louisan Dies of Pneumonia in France, According to Yesterday's Casualty List.

Frank H. Tobias, 30 years old, of B Company, Fourth Infantry, was killed in action Oct. 13, according to an official notification received by his wife, Mrs. Mamie Tobias of 1117A East Grand avenue. He was a professional pianist and music teacher, and was drafted last May, being first in the 340th Infantry and then in the Fourth. His father is connected with a bank in Memphis, and a brother is in the service overseas.

Alonzo Fizer of A Company, 139th Machine Battalion, Thirty-eighth Division, was named in yesterday's official casualty list as killed in action. His wife, who lives at 1201 North Church street, Belleville, has received an official notification stating that he died of pneumonia in a base hospital in France Oct. 16. However, she has a letter mailed by him Nov. 25. She has received a dispatch saying that the first notification was probably an error.

John A. Vogel, 22 years old, of C Company, 354th Infantry, died in France Jan. 2 of pneumonia, according to a notification received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Vogel of 3219 North Newstead avenue. Vogel was drafted last April and fought at St. Mihiel.

No name from St. Louis or nearby places appeared in the official casualty list issued last night.

Drugs Stolen From Hospital.

A thief took a quantity of drugs, including an ounce of cocaine and an ounce of morphine, from the drug room of the Missouri Pacific Hospital, California avenue and Henrietta street, last night.

A Thousand Yous

When you thumb over your POST-DISPATCH and glance over the advertisements you quite unconsciously multiply yourself a thousand times.

In half or three-quarters of an hour you can, metaphorically speaking, visit every progressive store in town. You virtually poke your head into every department of every department store. You run into the florist's, the confectioner's, the oculist's, the leading groceries, banks, theaters, all the various places that supply the things that make this the twentieth century and life worth the living. Here is a greater choice in clothing, food, furniture, books, pictures, musical instruments, travel, entertainment, opportunities for investment, the service of public utility corporations than any monarch of old could command.

It would easily take a thousand yous, traveling hard all day, to find out for yourself what the advertisements in the Post-Dispatch tell you in a few minutes every evening.

They deserve your attention. They deserve your confidence. Without them, without the progressive spirit of the merchants and manufacturers who back them, the great abundance of things you now enjoy would be a memory—or something still to be realized. Without advertising the prices you would have to pay for many of the necessities you now buy for a few pennies would make a dollar look like a snowball on the kitchen range.

Read the advertisements in the Post-Dispatch for your own information and advantage. Read them to encourage the advertisers who are making these better things possible for you.

IGOE TELLS COMMITTEE HE DID NOT FAVOR PACKERS

St. Louisan Questions Heney Regarding Letter—Cites Record Showing He Voted for Inquiry.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Addressing the Senate Agricultural Committee which is investigating meat packers' activities, Representative Igoe of St. Louis today branded as an "absolute falsehood" the statement in a letter read to the committee recently to the effect that he could be controlled by the packers.

Several members of the House Judiciary Committee, including Igoe, were named in the letter, written by an agent of the packers and first disclosed a year ago at the time of the Federal Trade Commission's investigation. The letter referred to the Borland resolution of two years ago calling for an inquiry, and stated that certain members of the Judiciary Committee, to which the resolution had been referred, could be counted on to defeat any effort for an investigation.

Igoe, who appeared voluntarily, presented a letter from the secretary of the House Judiciary Committee to show that not only was he not opposed to the investigation, but that it was on his motion that the Borland resolution was reported favorably. The Borland resolution never came to a vote, a $400,000 appropriation for an inquiry was made and Igoe voted for this appropriation.

Igoe told Heney that a year ago he had denied the charge implied by the letter. In reply to questions by Igoe, Heney admitted that he had read the letter to the Senate committee without looking up the records of the Congressmen named in it.

Representative Caraway of Arkansas, who was also named in the letter, appeared before the committee and said that he, too, had voted for the Borland resolution in the Judiciary Committee and for the $400,000 appropriation.

SOLDIER OPERATED ON AT SEA AS WAVES RUN 40 FEET HIGH

Two Surgeons, Lashed to Table, Successfully Treat Artilleryman Attacked by Appendicitis.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Coast artillerymen from Connecticut and scattered states and aero construction troops from Pennsylvania, Iowa and Oklahoma, who reached port today on the armored cruiser South Dakota, went through a storm two days out from Brest, described by naval officers on the warship as one of the most tempestuous they had ever experienced. Mountainous waves buffeted the vessel and one demolished the pilot house, injuring Capt. Luby, Commander Caldwell and a number of officers and sailors. Caldwell was disabled for a week and his companions were badly cut and bruised.

In the midst of the storm, with waves running 40 feet high, two army surgeons performed an operation for appendicitis upon a soldier aboard the vessel.

When the condition of Corp. E. O. Williams of the Fifty-sixth Coast Artillery was pronounced dangerous, the vessel lay to in order to facilitate the operation. Lashed to the table, the surgeons accomplished their delicate task between lurches of the ship and today the artilleryman was removed to a hospital, on the way to recovery. Williams' home is in Airlie, N. C.

U. S. JUDGES' SALARIES RAISED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The Senate this afternoon by a vote of 3[illegible] to 32 passed the bill raising the salaries of Federal District Judges to $7500 a year, and of Federal Circuit Judges to $8500, an increase in each case of $1500. The bill already had passed the House.

Sentaor Reed of Missouri championed the measure, declaring there was danger of deterioration in the quality of the Federal judiciary. Opponents of the measure, including Senators Martin, Borah and Williams, argued that if salaries were to be increased, the Senate ought to begin among the poorly paid Federal employes at the bottom of the roll. The bill retains the House provision enabling the President to appoint an addtiional Judge in any district where the sitting Judge, being eligible to retire, remains upon the bench.

FORD WELCOMED IN MEXICO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Henry Ford's visit to Mexico has been marked by great enthusiasm in Mexico, according to official information received today. He has been welcomed as a national benefactor on account of his project for establishing three tractor factories in Mexico, and the Secretary of Agriculture accompanied him on his tours.

Ford visited Monterey, Puebla and Morell. Mexican officials contrast Ford's attitude with that of the oil interests, which they blame for Mexico's friction with America. He has asked the Mexican Government to appoint members of the boards which will control his factories, which, according to his plan, will take from the earnings only a fair profit, in order that the tractors may be sold at the lowest possible price.

Bonus for Government Employes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—A wage bonus of $240 for the year beginning next July for nearly all Government employes receiving $2500 or less was voted tonight by the House in passing the 1920 legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill carrying $96,000,000. The wage bonus, double that of the current fiscal year, will cost the Government approximately $14,000,000. Employes of temporary governmental agencies will not receive the increase, nor will postal employes.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

THREE.—Neck hollows may be filled out by using massage and drinking milk. A glass of warm milk taken on going to bed is one of the best flesh builders. Instead of using a cream for massage, take the best quality of olive oil. Moisten the skin over the hollows and massage gently with finger tips, using a circular motion. Do this every night and every morning. Keep bowels open and eat flesh-making foods. Breathe pure air deeply. * * * Twitching of eyelids is sometimes due to straining the eyes or to inflammation. When cause is removed the twitching disappears. It is a sign of overwork.

JANE.—No special bill of fare is given to the thin man. He simply must cram his stomach to the limit, both with food and with water, and sleep 10 to 11 hrs. a day. Potatoes, bananas and bread are indorsed as the most fattening foods. But it is the water drinking which the experts particularly advocate. The Government tells the thin man to drink water before and after and with meals. Fat, they say, is principally water; therefore, mix up your food with much water. Spring and summer, experts also say, offer golden opportunities for the fat man. The season offers tomatoes, onions, lettuce, radishes and such vegetables which the fat man may eat with impunity. And the heat of summer naturally tends to reduce weight by causing perspiration.

OLD PLANTING SIGNS.

A. B. R.—Aries—Ram—Head: This is a movable fire sign governed by the sun. Seeds planted in this sign produce vines or stalks. All crops that produce their yield above the surface of the ground should be planted in the new or increasing light of the moon to grow vigorously. Taurus—Bull—Neck: This is a fixed earthly sign governed by Mercury. Root crops of quick growth will be good when planted in this sign. These crops should be planted in the old or decreasing light of the moon to produce the best yield. Gemini—Twins—Arms: This is a barren sign and is only good to plant melon seeds in. The soil should be stirred in this sign to subdue all noxious weeds. Cancer—Crab—Breast: This is a watery, fruitful, movable sign in which all plants germinate quickly. This is a favorable sign for growth and insures abundant yield. If it comes at the full of the moon it is a good time to plant beans; if at the new moon, lentils. The best time to sow peas is if the day follows the new moon for they will then grow quickly and have an abundant yield. If this sign comes just before the full of the moon it is a good time to plant or prune fruit trees. Cancer is a good earth sign to prune grape vines. Leo—Lion—Heart: A barren, fiery sign. It is only favorable to the destruction of noxious growth. Weeds, briars and bushes, cut off the old of the moon in Aug. when its place is in Leo, will be more certainly destroyed than if at any other time. Timber cut at this time in Aug. will not be eaten by worms nor snap in burning and will last much longer than if cut at any other time. Virgo—Virgin—Bowels: This is a barren sign but is a good sign in which to plant all beautiful flowers. But is unfavorable to growth of seed or transplanting, other than excessively flowering plants. Libra—Scales—Reins: This is a strong, movable sign and seeds planted at this time produce vigorous pulp growth and roots, and a reasonable amount of grain. Scorpio—Scorpion—Lions: A fruitful sign, producing watery effects. A good sign to plant corn in. Sagittarius—Bowman—Thighs: This is a fiery masculine sign and is not a very favorable one to plant or transplant in. However, if it occurs when the moon is dark or on the wane, radishes or potatoes may be planted. Capricorn—Goat—Knees: This is a moist, movable sign which will produce a rapid growth of pulp, stalk or roots, but will not bring much grain. Aquarius—Waterman—Legs: An airy masculine sign. Seeds planted in this sign will surely rot and are only thrown away. Pisces—Fish—Feet: This is a watery, feminine sign and is one of the best signs for producing the fruit of the earth. It is a particularly good root sign if the moon is dark or on the wane. Being a watery sign it assists vegetation to withstand drouth. This is a good sign to make sauerkraut.

PUNCTUATION.—Comma marks the slightest actual turn or jointure in grammatical construction. No approximate length of subject for comma use has ever been presented. Semicolon, after clause when the turn in sense is too distinct to use merely a comma, and not sufficient for a period; most frequently between clauses all or some of which contain commas. Often it is placed between what might be made separate sentences. Colon is now generally confined to an introductory function. Period is at every sentence which is not a question or an exclamation. Dash denotes a sudden change in construction. Parentheses inclose explanatory sentences. Brackets inclose something having no effect on the meaning of the context. Apostrophe is sign of the possessive; it takes the place of omitted letters or marks the end of a quotation whose beginning is marked by inverted commas.

MRS. R. F.—Mutton suet preparation for chapped hands is given herewith. Though this preparation quickly heals the hands, it leaves them so soft that unless special care is taken they will chap again easily. Melt the fat from ¼ lb. of mutton suet, strain into a bowl, add 2 tablespoons vaseline and a few drops of any good perfume, beat with a spoon until it thickens, pour into the hands before going to bed. Somebody says that vinegar rubbed into badly chapped hands and allowed to dry will alleviate stinging pain almost instantly. * * * Hirshberg says: White lines in the nails, which popular legend attributes to restored health and convalescence, are really proofs of some ailment. Instead of the normal tissue juices being present, air has filtered into the layers of the nails, causing the pearly or white streaks. Ringworms and other moulds which work their way into the "matrix" of the nail—the mother part which pushes the completed nail out from beneath the skin—show themselves by rough, wavy and mashed-looking corrugations on the nails. Hangnails are the loose and torn edges of the skin which bounds the edges of the nails and keeps the matrix protected. "Felons" and "bone felons" are merely infections from the germs which are always present in the skin, in the dirt at the margins of the nails and in the air itself. These microbes burrow under the handnails into the open spots and there set up trouble. Painful swellings, the appearance of pus in the ends of the fingers and near the nails, may all come from hangnails, bitting the nails and allowing dirt to remain under the margin of the nails. The nails are as important as the teeth, and they should, of course, be cleaned oftener. * * * A first-class chiropodist says his business might be discontinued if people only knew the virtues of plain vaseline for curing corns. Just rub faithfully every night, and the worst corns are helped, even if not entirely cured. Witch hazel combined with vaseline is also good for tender feet; relieves the soreness and pain. Melt the vaseline and add enough witch hazel to make a soft salve or ointment, which may be rubbed in morning and night. Olive oil, in addition to its other virtues, takes off corns, but, like so many such applications, requires a longer time than most are willing to give. Any paring that is done should be only by someone that knows exactly how, and a chiropodist uses a tiny chisel-shaped knife, taking off the thick cuticle in shavings instead of slices.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our darling mother, Fannie Moehrle, who departed this life 3 years ago, Jan. 21, 1916.

A shadow fell upon our lives
When death, the reaper, came
And took our mother dear
From earthly care and pain.

But when the mist has passed away
We'll meet dear mother some sweet day
And may God help us all in time
To awaken in a brighter clime.

Asleep in Jesus, O, how sweet
To worship at the Shepherd's feet.
You suffer in silence, in patience you bore,
Till God calls you home to suffer no more.

She is safe in the arms of Jesus;
Safe on His gentle breast.
Thereby his love made perfect;
Sweetly her soul shall rest.

As she lay so sweetly there.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In sad, but loving memory of my dear mother, Leonora Bighem, who died Jan. 17, 1918:

One year has passed since that sad day.
One who we loved has passed away.
God took her home—it was His will—
But in our hearts she liveth still.

Sadly missed by her daughter,
MRS. WM. KLOSE.

In Memoriam.

In sad, but loving memory of my dear wife and our darling mother, Mary Dowd, who departed this life Jan. 18, 1917:

How true to our hearts was our darling mother.
No one knows how we miss you from our home.
We listen for that sweet voice in vain.
But in Heaven we expect to meet you again.
Dear mother is sleeping free from all pain.
Wake her not, sweet spirits, to suffer again.
I think how she suffered and moaned with pain
Till God in His mercy sent down from above
An angel, who whispered a message of love.

Sadly missed by husband and children and all those who loved her. There was a requiem high mass at 8 a. m., offered Saturday, Jan. 18, 1919, at St. Edward's Church, for the repose of her soul.

GERMAN SHIPS MAY BRING OUR MEN HOME

Mercantile Fleet, Including Giant Liners Turned Over to Allies Under Armistice Extension.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 18.—All the great German liners and the more important of the other German pasenger steamers, the list including the huge Imperator, may be placed on the North Atlantic route to transport American troops homeward, under the agreement for the extension of the German armistice signed at Treves.

The German mercantile fleet, virtually in its entirety, is placed at the disposal of the associated Governments to be distributed among them in accordance with the needs of the various nations. Only some of the smaller steamships are left to the Germans.

Allotment Determination.

The allotment of the steamers among the associated Powers will be governed partly by the respective needs of the nations and partly by the suitability of the steamers for use on particular routes. The giant liners like the Imperator and the other big modern steamers finished during the war are too deep in draft to pass through the Suez Canal. Hence, Great Britain will take the moderate sized steamers for the Australian service. The smaller steamers that are left to the Germans are for their needs in the Baltic coastal traffic.

Equitable remuneration for the use of these ships is to be paid to Germany. The money will be applied in payment for the foodstuffs furnished to Germany under another part of the agreement. The supplies to be furnished include 70,000 tons of pork to satisfy the urgent need of Germany for fats. The furnishing of 200,000 tons of cereals is provided for, but for part of this amount condensed milk may be substituted.

The meetings at which the shipping arrangement was elaborated, were held separately from those of the regular armistice commission, and were the first civilian deliberations between the Germans and the representatives of associated Governments since the conclusion of hostilities. They were marked by a less formal spirit than the strictly military deliberations of the armistice commissioners.

Hurley Presided.

Edward N. Hurley, head of the American Shipping Board, presided over the sessions. Philip Heineken of the North German Lloyd Co. was then the leading figure in the German delegation of ten.

Marshal Foch planned to have the agreement drafted and signed at one short meeting, but the shipping experts found this to be impossible. Three meetings lasting over midnight on Thursday and several hours into Friday were necessary for the discussion of the details. Another meeting is planned to be held the end of the month.

The delegates of the associated Governments proposed that the Germans furnish the coal and the ships' stores. The Germans protested that this was impossible, specifying the lubricants particularly as something they were unable to furnish. It was finally arranged that the Germans furnish the coal and the stores, and take the steamers to ports designated by the allies, who will then take them over and man them.

The Germans stated that the steamers were in shape for immediate service, having been kept in repair by the skeleton crews maintained aboard during thewar.

LEBAUDY TRIED TO PURCHASE POISON DAY HE WAS SLAIN

Drug Clerk's Affidavit Says "Emperor" Declared He Wanted Poison for Wife and Child.

By the Associated Press.

MINEOLA, N. Y., Jan. 18.—Attorneys for Mme. Jacques Lebaudy, who shot and killed her husband, the self-styled "Emperor of Sahara," in their home at Westbury last Saturday, obtained today from a New York drug clerk an affidavit stating that Lebaudy tried to purchase two pounds of poison the day he was slain. According to the affidavit, Lebaudy said the poison was for his wife and child. The clerk said he refused to make the sale. The affidavit will be turned over Monday to Charles R. Weeks, District Attorney of Nassau County.

Ernest E. Suffern, an attorney who said he had had charge of Mme. Lebaudy's affairs for more than 10 years, issued a statement today declaring there was no likelihood that a successful attempt would be made to prevent her and her daughter from inheriting the major part of the slain man's fortune, which is estimated at several millions. Mme. Lebaudy, he said, can prove a clear rigth to her dower interest in the estate. So far as is known, Lebaudy left no will.

"GRANDMOTHER OF RUSSIAN REVOLUTION" AT VICTORIA, B. C.

By the Associated Press.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 18.—Catherine Breshskoskaya, known as the "grandmother of the Russian revolution," arrived here today from the Orient aboard the Japanese trans-Pacific liner Kama Maru. She is going from here to Seattle and from there to Washington, D. C., and Boston, Mass.

"Strong and normal, Russia is a wall against all the injuries of dark power, no matter whence they come," she said.

"But woe to us and woe to you nations of the world if you refuse to face the difficult positions of your temporarily disabled ally. Nations of Europe, America, Asia—every nation—I tell you all that Russia will come and have a voice at the world's peace conference and will yield to none her right to a bright future."

ARMY OVERSEAS TO BE CUT TO MINIMUM, MARCH SAYS

Strength of Force to Be Maintained in France and Germany Being Considered by Allied Commanders.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—American forces in France and in the occupied territory of Germany are to be reduced to the minimum strength "consistent with our national obligations," Gen. March said today. He added that Gen. Foch had been informed of this policy by Gen. Pershing.

What strength is to be maintained is under discussion by American military officials and the allied military leaders. No report has been received indicating the number of divisions to be supplied by the United States, but Gen. March was positive that it would be far less than the 30 divisions given in unofficial reports as the probable American military contribution.

Occupation Force Fixed.

The American force for the occupied zone was fixed by international agreement at the time the armistice was signed. Gen. March said Marshal Foch undoubtedly would refuse to permit a reduction of his total strength to a point where it would be inadequate to handle any possible disturbance.

Demobilization of all army units in the United States has been ordered, Gen. March announced, with the exception of the regular army regiments needed for camp guard purposes and various detachments necessary to continue the demobilization process. The total now listed for demobilization is 1,177,000.

Troops actually returned from France for demobilization number 104,000. This gives a grand total ordered discharged of 1,281,000, of which 768,626 men and 51,593 officers have been discharged to date. The rate of discharge again is nearing the maximum capacity of 1000 men per camp per day after an interruption by the holidays.

Blanket Order Exceptions.

In addition to the regular regiments, the exceptions from the blanket demobilization order include the cavalry on the southern border, coast artillery troops in the coast defenses, detachments at ports and the medical personnel. This last force now numbers 95,000, but Gen. March said it would be reduced gradually as the number of men it had to care for was reduced.

Comparing the American method of demobilization with the French, Gen. March called attention to the fact that the French army was being broken up by service classes. Within the classes the only priority given is according to the number of children dependent upon the soldier for support, the men with four or five children being given first consideration.

Newspaper comment in France, Gen. March said, indicated that the French Government was having the same difficulty with public opinion over slow demobilization as had been experienced in England.

Assignment to early convoy home from France of units comprising 250 officers and 6500 men was announced today by the War Department. The units include the Eleventh Engineers, complete; 372d Infantry, Medical Detachment and Second Battalion; 371st Infantry, Fifteenth and Sixteenth Engineers and Third Evacuation Ambulance Company.

PRESIDENT FRATERNIZES WITH SAILORS CROSSING TO EUROPE

St. Louisan Who Was on the George Washington Tells How Executive Showed Democratic Spirit.

How President Wilson's democratic spirit won for him the admiration of members of the crew of the steamer George Washington during his trip to Europe early last December was described to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday by Ellis Marting, 21 years old, of 4556 Fair avenue, a sailor aboard the ship, who has just returned home from service.

The President, Marting said, on innumerable occasions upset the dignity of many naval officers by approaching, shaking hands and conversing with any "gob" aboard ship. His desire to be among the sailors frequently interfered with plans for his comfort and entertainment made by the officers.

On one occasion Marting was in charge of the "fire control" cabin on the bridge when the President, Mrs. Wilson and the Italian Ambassador and his wife appeared. The President, curious as to the function of the fire control stepped inside and asked Marting about it.

"I was nearly taken off my feet when he came, but his smile helped me recover my composure and I started to tell him how we maintained a look-out for submarines and directed the fire of our guns. An officer appeared about that time and 'horned in' taking the President outside and continuing the explanation.

GEN. CROWDER HERE JAN. 29

Members of Draft Boards Will Hold Banquet.

Provost Marshal Crowder will be the guest of honor at a luncheon of the members conference of the Chamber of Commerce at the Statler Hotel, Jan. 29. A banquet has also been planned in the evening by the 28 draft boards of the city, at which Judge William Kinsey will be the toastmaster. While visiting the city Crowder will be the guest of Judge Daniel J. Taylor.

A. Mitchell Palmer, custodian of alien property seized by the Government, will be a guest of the city Jan. 22. He will address the members' conference of the Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel, and read a report of the amount of alien propery seized and sold by the Government, and also outline the workings of the organization of which he is head.

PHYSICIAN SUES THE U. R.

He Wants $25,000 for Injuries and Loss of Practice.

Dr. John C. Lebrecht, 1737 South Grand avenue, yesterday filed suit for $25,000 against the United Railways Co., alleging that personal injuries received by him when he tried to board a car April 11 last caused him to be in a hospital until June 27. He estimates the value of his practice at $600 a month, and during the period he lost $2250 and has suffered a further loss of $400 a month since, he says.

The accident happened at Jefferson and Gravois avenues. As Dr. Lebrecht had his foot on the step to board a Bellefontaine car the door was closed by the conductor and the car started, it is alleged. Dr. Lebrecht says he was thrown to the street and suffered a "subluxation of the sacroliac joint in the left hip," his petition recites.

DROP IN COAL PRICES EXPECTED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—Fuel Administration officials expect a decrease in the price of bituminous coal and coke to result from an order yesterday discontinuing maximum prices on these commodities and eliminating the zone system of their distribution. The order is effective Feb. 1 but does not affect anthracite coal.

NEW ELECTION BILL SENT TO THE STATE LEGISLATURE

Measure Was Prepared by Glendy B. Arnold, Head of the St. Louis Election Board.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18. — A bill providing for a change in the Missouri election laws to provide for "permanent" registration of voteers, instead of the present quadriennial registration, has been sent to Jefferson City by Glendy B. Arnold, chairman of the St. Louis Election Board. In support of his plan Arnold says records show not to exceed 30,000 voters in St. Louis change their places of residence each four years, yet for these, all voters now are required to register periodically at great cost to the State.

Measures providing for revision of the election laws of the State are expected to be introduced in the Legislature next week. Speaker Samuel F. O'Fallon said today the Republicans of the House will support any proposal to amend the election laws that will make fraud more difficult, and Democratic members of the House, including Frank C. Wilkinson and Judge J. Allen Prewitt of the Jackson County delegation, have indicated their intention to support election reform movements.

LACLEDE SUED FOR $900,000

A suit for $900,000 damages was filed yesterday by the Helene Products Co., a Delaware corporation, against the Laclede Gas Co. for alleged violation of an agreement to sell drip oil, a by-product of gas, to the plaintiff. The agreement, it was alleged, was made in November, 1915, and was to last for three years, during which time the plaintiff was to pay 4½ cents a gallon for the commodity.

It is set forth that in this period the defendant company produced 800,000 gallons of the oil, of which only 100,000 gallons was delivered to the plaintiff. Drip oil recently has been largely used in the manufacture of disinfectants. It became valuable on account of the war.

2000-POUND FLYWHEEL BURSTS

A 2000-pound flywheel in the boiler room of the American Car and Foundry Co., Barton and De Kalb streets, burst yesterday afternoon. A fragment weighing 800 pounds went through the roof and through the third floor wall of the Pauley Jail Building Co., 200 feet away. A piece weighing 300 pounds went through the roof of the Hager Hinge Co., 2449 De Kalb street, and a third chunk, weighing 400 pounds, landed in the middle of Barton street, 300 feet away.

The engineer was out of the room when the wheel came apart. The other plants damaged had sent their employes home for the day, so nobody was injured. The car company's building was damaged $2000; the Pauley concern's $700 and Hager's $200.

POINTS IN SELECTING POULTRY FOR BREEDING

Noted Authority Tells How Appearance and Habits of Birds Will Help.

By T. E. QUISENBERRY,
President of American Poultry School, Leavenworth, Kan.

You should have all your pens selected and mated by this time and be ready to hatch at least a few early chicks. Some of the pullets entered in the American contest at this place are not mature enough to lay. This is especially true of the American and English breeds. All of these pens will no doubt make good records, but look how much better their showing would have been had they laid well in November and December. The Red, Wyandotte, Orpington and Plymouth Rock pens which were mature have laid well during the past two months. And look at the high-priced winter eggs that the owner of late-hatched chicks are cheating themselves out of. These early-hatched birds also make very good breeders for next years.

More depends upon selection and breeding than any other one thing. When you go into your yards to select your matings, you should go "with fear and trembling." You should try to eliminate disqualifications and serious defects and follow the standard as closely as possible. You should also give at least equal consideration to the general health, vigor and egg-laying qualities of your birds. In selection for egg production you will not go far wrong if you use the Hogan system if you haven't trap-nest records to depend upon.

How to Make Selection for Egg Production.

The rules that govern selection are as simple as A B C to any observing person. For instance, a hen that is slow to feather is lacking in vitality. Anyone ought to know that. You can't stuff her and make her lay eggs. She is by nature a weakling. Hens do not lay eggs because they want to; they lay because they are strong and vigorous and egg laying is a natural result which they cannot avoid. That tendency must be bred in them.

Why, if the average farmer would give half the attention to his poultry that he does to his livestock, he'd find the poultry the best investment in many cases. Success comes from being willing to discard.

Before mating your birds for another season, take one more look at them and keep the following rules in mind when making your selection:

1. Market those which have been slow to feather or seem to lack vitality.
2. Keep the pullets which matured quickly and started laying first. Those which start laying when less than 200 days old will be the best layers if they have the right care.
3. Keep the late moulters.
4. Keep the birds with rather large, plump combs and wattles.
5 Hens with pale vents, pale beaks and pale legs have been good layers.
6. The skin of the best layers should be rather loose and flabby on the abdomen between the vent and the breast bone.
7. The pelvic bones must be thin, straight, flexible and wide apart.
8. Market the hens which are baggy behind and which have a heavy, fat, thick abdomen which hangs down below the point of the breast bone.
9.—Keep the hustlers and heavy eaters that go to bed late and with full crops.
10. Birds that have long toe nails that show no signs of being workers are usually unprofitable.
11. If a bird meets the above requirements, it should have a broad back, long body, be stoutly built and in good flesh.
12.—If a bird is not moulting and still has a small dried-up comb covered with a sort of whitish substance, or if a bird has thick or crooked pelvic bones, which will be found on each side of the vent and above the point of the breast bone, these are always money losers.

No man or woman can afford to keep and feed a flock of drones at the present prices of feed, but the good layers will make more profit than in any previous year.

Judge Graves' Hen Wins Two Prizes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18.—A Cornish hen belonging to Judge W. W. Graves of the Supreme Court won the sweepstakes as the finest hen at the Kansas City poultry show yesterday. In the Cornish pen, the same hen won first prize, and another hen belonging to the Judge won second prize. Judge Graves was re-elected president of the Cornish Club of America for another year.

During the year 1918 the Post-Dispatch printed 59,878 Automobile "Wants"—18,109 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined.

Eggs Higher Than Ever—
And You CAN get them

if you help your layers. Hens cannot lay heavily unless they eat, digest and assimilate plenty of feed. Many poultry rations, especially in these times of food conservation, are inferior and do not produce results. They are not palatable, are coarse and hard to digest.

Pratts Poultry Regulator

makes good rations better, is an absolute necessity in inferior ones.
"Guaranteed satisfactory or money back."

Pratts Poultry Regulator flavors feed mixtures, thus inducing the layers to eat more. It strengthens and invigorates the organs of digestion and assimilation so the birds "get the good" of what they eat. It tones up the whole system, insuring that perfect health which is the basis of regular production. It speeds up the layers and brings a steady flow of high-priced, profitable winter eggs.

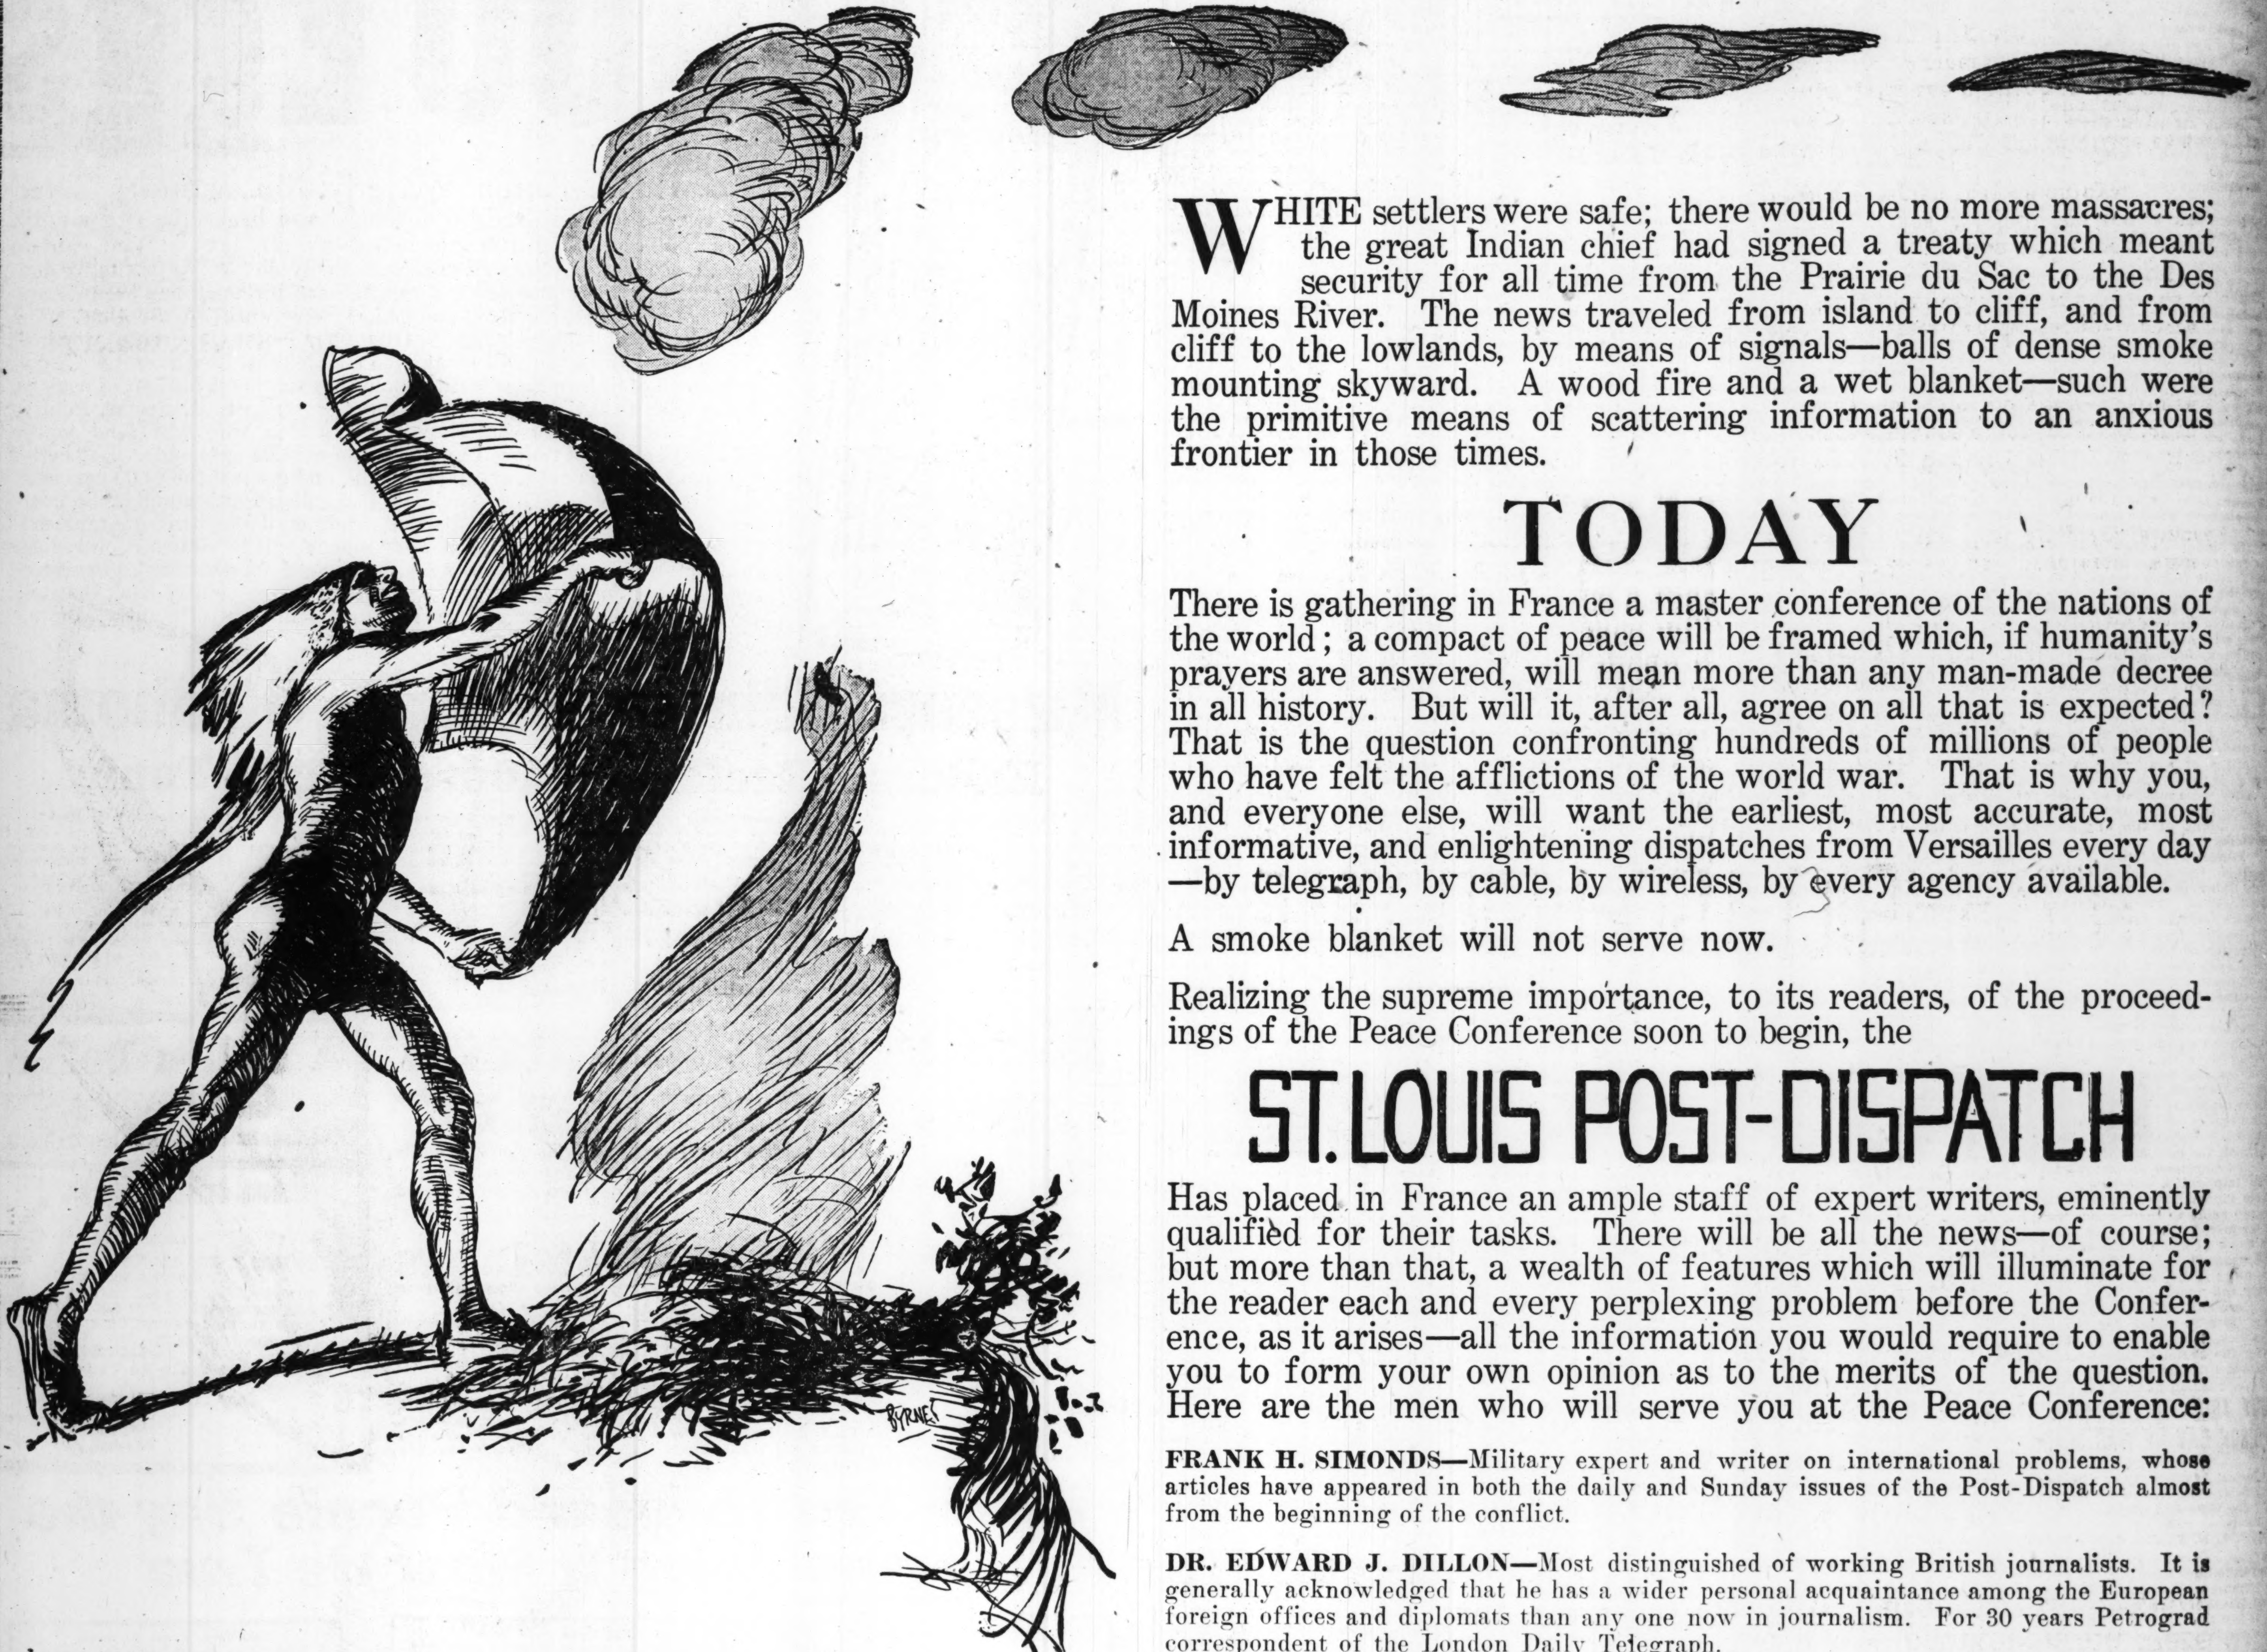
Thus Came the News of Peace, Down Through the Mississippi Valley, When the Black Hawk Indian War Ended in 1832



WHITE settlers were safe; there would be no more massacres; the great Indian chief had signed a treaty which meant security for all time from the Prairie du Sac to the Des Moines River. The news traveled from island to cliff, and from cliff to the lowlands, by means of signals—balls of dense smoke mounting skyward. A wood fire and a wet blanket—such were the primitive means of scattering information to an anxious frontier in those times.

TODAY

There is gathering in France a master conference of the nations of the world; a compact of peace will be framed which, if humanity's prayers are answered, will mean more than any man-made decree in all history. But will it, after all, agree on all that is expected? That is the question confronting hundreds of millions of people who have felt the afflictions of the world war. That is why you, and everyone else, will want the earliest, most accurate, most informative, and enlightening dispatches from Versailles every day—by telegraph, by cable, by wireless, by every agency available.

A smoke blanket will not serve now.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Has placed in France an ample staff of expert writers, eminently qualified for their tasks. There will be all the news—of course; but more than that, a wealth of features which will illuminate for the reader each and every perplexing problem before the Conference, as it arises—all the information you would require to enable you to form your own opinion as to the merits of the question. Here are the men who will serve you at the Peace Conference:

FRANK H. SIMONDS—Military expert and writer on international problems, whose articles have appeared in both the daily and Sunday issues of the Post-Dispatch almost from the beginning of the conflict.

DR. EDWARD J. DILLON—Most distinguished of working British journalists. It is generally acknowledged that he has a wider personal acquaintance among the European foreign offices and diplomats than any one now in journalism. For 30 years Petrograd correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

LINCOLN EYRE—Who has been Post-Dispatch correspondent with the various armies abroad since the very beginning of the war. Credited with a number of exclusive news reports.

CYRIL BROWN—Post-Dispatch correspondent in Berlin both before and after the United States entered the war. Last correspondent to leave German soil when this country became a belligerent.

LOUIS SEIBOLD—For twenty years attached to the New York World and Post-Dispatch Washington Bureau. War correspondent in the Spanish-American war.

DAVID LAWRENCE—Washington correspondent of the New York Evening Post. His dispatches from the Capitol, in the last two years, have attracted national attention. Possessed of unusual sources of information, he has often been the first to tell the country some important piece of news, or to foretell accurately something which was about to be done.

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE—One of the news editors of the New York World, now on his third trip to Europe since August, 1914. Author of "Inside the German Empire." In the last year Mr. Swope has been stationed in Washington writing on international topics.

J. M. TUOHY—Dean of American newspaper correspondents in London, where he has served the New York World and Post-Dispatch as European representative for twenty years. He is 55 years old, and probably no other similar correspondent has one-half the acquaintance among European statesmen that he enjoys.

JOSEPH W. GRIGG—Long in the London office as an associate of Mr. Tuohy. It was Mr. Grigg who obtained the documents proving the plotting in this country of Dumba, the Austrian Ambassador—an exposure which resulted in his recall in disgrace.

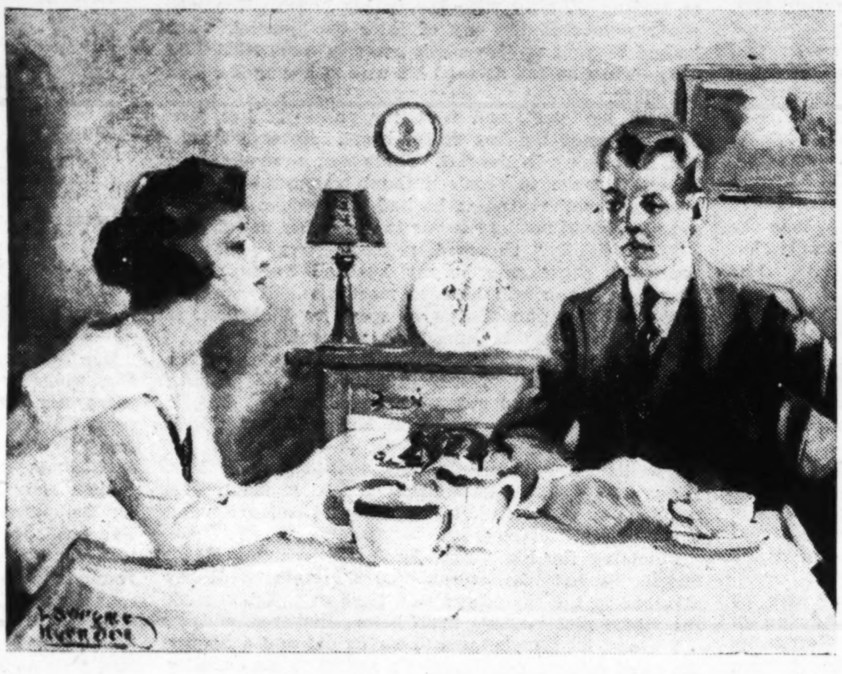
How it Feels to Earn $1000 a Week

By a Young Man Who Four Years Ago Drew a $25 a Week Salary. Tells How He Accomplished It



"How Do You Suppose It Feels to Earn $1000 a Week?" She Asked.

HOW does it feel to earn $1000 a week? How does it feel to have earned $200,000 in four years? How does it feel to be free from money worries? How does it feel to have everything one can want? These are questions I shall answer for the benefit of my reader out of my own personal experience. And I shall try to explain, simply and clearly, the secret of what my friends call my phenomenal success.

Let me begin four years ago. At that time my wife and I and our two babies were living on my earnings of twenty-five dollars a week. We occupied a tiny flat, wore the simplest clothes, had to be satisfied with the cheapest entertainment—and dreamed sweet dreams of the time when I should be earning fifty dollars a week. That was the limit of my ambition. Indeed, it seemed to be the limit of my possibilities. For I was but an average man, without influential friends, without a liberal education, without a dominating personality, and without money.

With nothing to begin with I have become the sole owner of a business which has paid me over $200,000 in clear profits during the past four years and which now pays me more than a thousand dollars a week. I did not gamble. I did not make my money in Wall Street. My business is not a war baby—on the contrary many others in my line have failed since the war began.

In four years the entire scheme of my life has changed. Instead of living in a two by four flat, we occupy our own home, built for us at a cost of over $60,000. We have three automobiles. Our children go to private schools. We have everything we want, and we want the best of everything. Instead of dreaming of fifty dollars a week I am dreaming in terms of a million dollars—with greater possibilities of my dream coming true than my former dream of earning fifty dollars a week.

What brought about this remarkable change? What transformed me, almost overnight, from a slow-going, easily-satisfied average man—into a positive, quick-acting determined individual who admits no defeat, who overcomes every obstacle, and who completely dominates every situation? It all began with a question my wife asked me one evening after reading an article in a magazine about a great engineer who was said to earn a $50,000 salary.

"How do you suppose it feels to earn $1000 a week?" she asked. And without thinking, I replied: "I haven't the slightest idea, my, dear, so the only way to find out is to earn it." We both laughed, and soon the question was apparently forgotten.

But that night, and for weeks afterward, the same question and my reply kept popping into my brain. I began to analyze the qualities of the successful men in our town. What is it that enables them to get everything they want? They are not better educated than I—indeed, some are far less intelligent. But they must have possessed some quality that I lacked. Perhaps it was their mental attitude; perhaps they look at things from an entirely different angle than I. Whatever it was, that "something" was the secret of their success. It was the one thing that placed them head and shoulders above me in money-earning ability. In all other ways we were the same.

Determined to find out what that vital spark of success is, I bought books on every subject that pertained to the mind. I followed one idea after another. But I didn't seem to get anywhere. Finally, when almost discouraged, I came across a copy of "Power of Will." Like a bolt out of a clear sky there flashed in my brain the secret I had been seeking. There was the real, fundamental principle of all success—Power of Will. There was the brain faculty I lacked, and which every successful man possesses.

"Power of Will" was written by Prof. Frank Channing Haddock, a scientist, whose name ranks with such leaders of thought as James, Bergson and Royce. After twenty years of research and study he had completed the most thorough and constructive study of will power ever made. I was astonished to read his statement that "The will is just as susceptible of development as the muscles of the body!" And Dr. Haddock had actually set down the very rules, lessons and exercises by which anyone could develop the will, making it a bigger, stronger force each day, simply through an easy progressive course of training.

It is almost needless to say that I at once began to practice the exercises formulated by Dr. Haddock. And I need not recount the extraordinary results that I obtained almost from the first day. Shortly after that I took hold of a business that for twelve years had been losing money. I started with $800 of borrowed capital. During my first year I made $30,000. My second year paid me $50,000. My third year netted me $70,000. Last year, due to increased costs of materials, my profits were only $50,000 though my volume of business increased. New plans which I am forcing through will bring my profits for the present fiscal year up to $65,000.

Earning a thousand dollars a week makes me feel secure against want. It gives me the money with which to buy whatever will make my family happy. It enables me to take a chance on an investment that looks good, without worrying about losing the money. It frees my mind of financial worries. It has made me healthier, more contented, and keener minded. It is the greatest recipe I know for happiness.

Prof. Haddock's lessons, rules and exercises in will training have recently been compiled and published in book form by the Pelton Publishing Co., of Meriden, Conn. I am authorized to say that any reader who cares to examine the book may do so without sending any money in advance. In other words, if, after five days' reading, you do not feel that the book is worth $3, the sum asked, return it and you will owe nothing. When you receive your copy for examination I suggest that you first read the articles on the law of great thinking; how to develop analytical powers; how to perfectly concentrate on any subject; how to guard against errors in thought; how to drive from the mind unwelcome thoughts; how to develop fearlessness; how to use the mind in sickness; how to acquire a dominating personality.

Never before have business men and women needed this help so badly as in these trying times. Hundreds of real and imaginary obstacles confront us every day and only those who are masters of themselves and who hold their heads up will succeed. "Power of Will," as never before, is an absolute necessity—an investment in self-culture which no one can afford to deny himself.

Some few doubters will scoff at the idea of will power being the fountainhead of wealth, position and everything we are striving for. But the great mass of intelligent men and women will at least investigate for themselves by sending for the book at the publisher's risk. I am sure that any book that has done for me—and for thousands of others—what "Power of Will" has done—is well worth investigating. It is interesting to note that among the 250,000 owners of "Power of Will" are such prominent men as Supreme Court Justice Parker; Wu Ting Fang, ex-U. S. Chinese Ambassador; Governor McKelvie of Nebraska, Assistant Postmaster-General Britt; General Manager Christeson of Wells-Fargo Express Co.; E. St. Elmo Lewis; Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, and thousands of others. In fact, today "Power of Will" is just as important, and as necessary to a man's or woman's equipment for success, as a dictionary. To try to succeed without "Power of Will" is like trying to do business without a telephone.

As your first step in will training, I suggest immediate action in this matter before you. It is not even necessary to write a letter. Use the form below, if you prefer, addressing it to the Pelton Publishing Company, 134-A Wilcox Block, Meriden, Conn., and the book will come by return mail. This one act may mean the turning point of your life, as it has meant to me and to so many others.

The cost of paper, printing and binding has almost doubled during the past three years, in spite of which "Power of Will" has not been increased in price. The publisher feels that so great a work should be kept as low-priced as possible, but in view of the enormous increase in the cost of every manufacturing item, the present edition will be the last sold at the present price. The next edition will cost more. I urge you to send in the coupon now.

PELTON PUBLISHING COMPANY,
134-A Wilcox Block, Meriden, Conn.

I will examine a copy of "Power of Will" at your risk. I agree to remit $3 or remail the book in five days.

How Presidents' Sons Lived Up to Their Fathers

Fifteen occupants of White House had 28 male children, of whom some died in youth—One became President himself, others cabinet ministers, ambassadors, members of Congress and college presidents — Twelve served country in arms, and two others fought for South — A record no royal family can approach —From a pre-wartime painting.

Abraham Lincoln and son, Robert Todd Lincoln.

THE average American citizen possibly has somewhat hazy ideas as to the names of the Presidents of the United States. To repeat correctly and in order the list of Washington's successors in the presidential chair would probably stump nine out of 10 voters.

Naturally, when such is the case regarding the men whom the electorate from time to time during the last 130 years has chosen to be its rulers for periods of four years or more, and whose names are set forth in our histories and taught in all our schools, it could hardly be expected that the American citizen of today would know very much concerning the sons of those Presidents. Yet no finer examples can be found of inherited ability and intelligence. When a comparison is made with the members of reigning families in Europe the results seem startling.

Of the 27 Presidents whom the United States has had since the inauguration of Washington in 1789, only one, James Buchanan, was never married. President Cleveland was a bachelor when elected, but was married during his first term. Presidents Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren and Tyler were widowers. Of the 26 married Presidents, seven—Washington, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Fillmore and McKinley—were childless when their terms expired. The only living child of President Pierce, a son, was killed in a railroad accident in the presence of his parents.

Four others, Jefferson, Monroe, Johnson and Wilson, had only daughters. Only 15 of the 27 Presidents, or but little more than half, left sons. Of the 15 Presidents elected prior to the Civil War, only six, less than one-half, had sons; while nine of the 12 elected since 1861 have left sons at their terms' end.

John Adams, our second President, left a son and two daughters. The son was John Quincy Adams. He was successively Minister to Holland, Russia, Prussia and England; Congressman, Senator, Secretary of State and then the sixth President. After his presidential term ended in 1828 he was again elected to Congress and continued to serve for 20 years, finally suffering a parlytic stroke, at the age of 84, during roll call in the House of Representatives. He was a man of great ability and during his long service in Congress was respected by all parties.

QUENTIN ROOSEVELT

BENJAMIN HARRISON

HARRY A. GARFIELD

His son, Charles Francis Adams, inherited the abilities of his father and grandfather. He was also a Congressman and was Minister to England for eight years. His three sons have been men of remarkable intellectuality, well known as authors and financiers.

President Van Buren left two sons, both of whom became prominent lawyers in New York City. John Van Buren, the older, known as "Prince John," had fine diplomatic talents.

William Henry Harrison, ninth President, was himself the son of Benjamin Harrison of Virginia, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. President Harrison, who lived only one month after his inauguration, left several children, the only son among whom was John Scott Harrison. He was president of a college at North Bend, O., and served several terms in Congress. His oldest son, Benjamin Harrison, entered the army in 1861 as a Second Lieutenant in the Seventieth Indiana Volunteers. He served throughout the war and was noted for his bravery. At the close he was mustered out as a Brigadier-General. He was very prominent in political life in Indiana for many years and was Senator from 1881 to 1887, when he was elected President.

He left a son and daughter. The son, Russell Harrison, is a lawyer in Indianapolis. During the Spanish-American War he was a Lieutenant-Colonel and served both in Cuba and Porto Rico. Aside from the Adams family, no other family in America has such a record of public service as that of the original Benjamin Harrison.

President Tyler was twice married. Robert Tyler, a son by his first wife, was a lawyer of prominence in Alabama. He reached high military rank in the Confederate army during the Civil War and was well known as an author. Lyon Gardiner Tyler, the younger son, became interested, after the close of the Civil War, in the rebuilding of William and Mary College. He obtained considerable appropriations from the State of Virginia and many donations from individuals. He was chosen its president, a position he still holds, and the college, the second oldest in the United States, is now in a flourishing condition.

Gen. Zachary Taylor, the twelfth President, left one son and two daughters. Col. Richard Taylor, the son, was an officer of the United States army, but during the Civil War took sides with his native State, Louisiana, and fought throughout the war on the Southern side. President Taylor's oldest daughter married President Jefferson Davis of the Southern Confederacy, and among their descendants are some well-known New Yorkers.

President Lincoln had three sons, two of whom died at the White House during the Civil War. Robert Lincoln, the oldest son, after serving during the latter part of the war on the staff of Gen. Grant, became a lawyer in Chicago and held a number of public positions in Illinois. President Garfield appointed him Secretary of War, which office he retained under President Arthur. President Harrison appointed him Minister to England, where he remained four years. After his return to the United States he became president of the Pullman Car Co., which position he retained until his resignation two years ago.

Gen. Grant, the eighteenth President, left three sons, of whom only the youngest, Jesse Grant, is now living. Frederick D. Grant, the oldest son, became a Major-General of the United States army during the Spanish-American War, and as such was in command at Governor's Island when he died in 1917. Nellie Grant, the only daughter, now Mrs. Sartoris, has been for many years a resident of England.

President Hayes left four sons. Webb C. Hayes, the oldest, was Colonel of the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteers in the Spanish War. He afterwards served five years in the Philippines and in China. He is now retired, living in Fremont, O. Birchard Hayes, the second son, is a prominent lawyer in Toledo.

President Garfield, the twentieth President, left three sons. James R. Garfield, the oldest, was Civil Service Commissioner under President Arthur, Commissioner of Corporations under President Harrison and a member of the Cabinet of President Roosevelt as Secretary of the Interior. He is now practicing law in Cleveland. Harry A. Garfield was president of the Chamber of Commerce of Cleveland, and is now president of Williams College in Massachusetts. During the last year, under appointment of President Wilson, he filled the very important but extremely difficult position of Fuel Administrator. Abram Garfield, the youngest son, is an architect in Cleveland.

President Arthur left one son, Chester Alan Arthur. President Grover Cleveland left one son, born after his father's second term had expired. Richard Cleveland is now serving his country with the army in France.

The four sons of President Roosevelt are probably better known by name and fame to the entire American people than any other men of their age. They are serving the country most nobly and already at terrible cost. Quentin Roosevelt had the honor of being the first son of a President of the United States to be killed while fighting for his country.

The sons of President Taft are also in the service of their country.

HON. JAMES R. GARFIELD

It will be noticed that without exception the sons of our Presidents have been men of ability, intelligence and high character. Most of them have become prominent in public life and have risen to high positions, which in every case they have filled with credit to themselves and honor and benefit to their country. One of them has been President in his turn. They have been Ministers to foreign countries, including in each case, Great Britain. Two have been members of the Cabinet and four have served terms in the Senate or House of Representatives.

Two of them are now well-known presidents of colleges. Ten of them have been prominent and successful lawyers, two have been authors and one is a prominent architect.

Patriotism and love of country has been forcibly shown among these sons. Twelve of them have served or are now among those serving in the army of their country, and two others fought on the side of the South.

When it is borne in mind that there were in all but 28 sons of Presidents, some of whom died in their youth, the wonderful showing of ability will be better appreciated. It could hardly be credited that of the 28 sons of 15 different fathers, from widely separate parts of our land, practically every one should make so admirable a record.

Its equal has certainly never been found in any instance among the reigning families of Europe.

The Lion's Mouse

"Don't I know that?" she answered bitterly. "I've known it since I saw you on board the Santa Fe Limited that day last September. I expected—someone else, not you; but I guessed in an instant why you had come."

"The man you expected being hors du combat," O'Reilly deigned to explain, "I accepted the obligations of friendship. And that brings us to another of the subjects for congratulation—your friend. A wonderful young person! I congratulate you highly upon her. I'd have bet a hundred to one, at the beginning of my—er—chat with her, against my coming to your house; but here I am. She informed me that she'd gladly die for you. Judging from her looks, she isn't far from doing so. I'm sure you must want to go to her now, so I won't keep you longer, my errand being done."

"Your errand being done?" Beverley echoed.

"Yes. I'm not so hard-hearted as you suppose. I couldn't pack my namesake—as she calls herself—back to you like a parcel. I had to bring her. That and the pleasure of congratulating you were the objects of my visit. Oh, by the by, one more congratulation—the pearls!"

"How did you know?" Beverley forgot her humiliation in sheer amazement.

"Weren't you told that Heron was trying to buy them for his wife?" O'Reilly returned, answering her question with another.

"No, I wasn't, indeed. They were a surprise present to me this afternoon from Roger—from my husband. If I'd known that Mr. Heron"——

"You don't expect me to believe you'd have sacrificed them to please him or his wife, do you, Mrs. Sands?" O'Reilly laughed.

"I—I'm not sure. I almost think I would. And even now—oh, Mr. O'Reilly, tell me this, I beg of you—does Mrs. Heron want the pearls very, very much?"

"I'm not in her confidence," said O'Reilly; "but I think Heron was disappointed. If that doesn't please you, it will please Sands."

"It pleases me so little that I'll give the pearls up to Mrs. Heron if you'll do as—as Clodagh Riley asked you to do. Oh, for pity's sake! I'd pay more than the pearls for those papers. I'd pay with my life, if that would be of any use; but I know it wouldn't. The pearls—can't we bargain with the pearls?"

"We can't bargain at all, Mrs. Sands," O'Reilly said gravely, but not so coldly as before. "I must go. I have an engagement to dine with the Herons. I planned to do a lot of work before dinner, but had to let it slide to bring my namesake safely home. I should like to hear how she is, and then I will be off."

Beverley had expected little from an appeal to this man's pity, but a sudden flame of hope had sprung up in her heart at mention of the Queen's pearls. The coincidence of Heron's desire for them was so strange that it ought to mean something mysteriously important. It seemed terrible that such a chance should be wasted.

How she could persuade Roger to let her give up the pearls, she did not know; but she would bring all the power of her love to bear upon him. If O'Reilly would look at the wonderful things and report upon their beauty, the Herons might be tempted to treat with her. In any case, the scheme was worth a trial, for with all Clo's audacity and devotion Beverley had small faith in the miracle of her success.

Silently she went to the door that she had closed and peeped into Sister Lake's room. It was no surprise to find that Clodagh had vanished. The girl's stealthy disappearance was part of the plan which shutting the door would help to carry out; the exclamation was for O'Reilly's benefit.

"Oh, the child's gone!" she cried. "That means she's feeling better. She must be in my room—or in my boudoir. Will you come with me? We'll look for her, if you want news of her. It will be on your way out."

O'Reilly followed into the hall. Beverley, thinking quickly, went to the door of her own sitting room, which adjoined her bedroom. A backward glance told her that the man had stopped, facing the vestibule which gave exit from the flat.

"Wait one moment," she said. "I'll see where Clodagh is."

As she touched the door of the boudoir, she was surprised to find it yielding before she turned the handle. This was odd, because she remembered shutting it the last time she came out. She had been particular to close the door because of the pearls.

She had placed the costly jewels on a table in the boudoir, ready for the pearl stringer. Not, of course, that she feared their being stolen. Her own maid had been sent out for the afternoon, and two of the other servants were also taking a holiday. Only the butler, the cook and his assistant were at home. All three had been in Roger's employ for years, and were above suspicion.

Besides, they knew nothing of the pearls. Not a soul knew, save herself, Roger, Clo and now O'Reilly. Roger had started off in his car before she brought the pearls from her bedroom into the boudoir. Who, then, had opened the door?

Perhaps, after all, Clo had not dared attempt her second adventure. Perhaps she was still in the flat, and, for some reason to be explained later, had taken refuge in the boudoir.

When Mrs. Sands switched on the electric light, it flashed upon a room untenanted. There was the magnificent but broken rope in its case, wound in gleaming, concentric circles, the unstrung pearls retrieved from the floor grouped together on the purple cushion. The door stood open between boudoir and bedroom. Beverley thought that this had been shut, also, though she was not sure.

"Clo!" she called softly.

There came no answer, yet there was some slight sound, or she imagined it. Quickly she went to the bedroom door and peeped in, flooding the place with light. Clo was not to be seen.

Turning off the electricity again, Beverley went out to O'Reilly in the hall.

"Come with me one moment," she said. "I've something to show you."

"Come and see," Beverley persisted.

She led the way into the boudoir, and reluctantly her companion crossed the threshold. Mrs. Sands pointed to the pearls.

"I wanted so much to show them to you," she pleaded. "See how wonderful they are! Mr. Heron's so proud of his wife. I could arrange some plan, I'm sure, if—if"——

A door slammed, and Beverley's unfinished sentence broke off with a gasp. If Roger had come back—if after all he had only pretended to go for the pearl stringer! She dared not guess what he would think at finding O'Reilly with her in his house. Too well she remembered the day of their one quarrel, when he had brought up this man's name in connection with Clo's—when he had accused his wife of crying it out in her sleep.

From her start, and from the paling of her face, Justin guessed the fear at her heart. He cursed himself for coming to the flat. There was no explanation he could make to Sands without compromising this woman. Small reason as he had to consider her feelings, he would not be the one to strike her down.

"Mr. O'Reilly," she said, suddenly very quiet and composed, "that may be my husband coming here. If it is he, you will have to meet him. It can't be avoided, but I should like to speak to him first, if you will wait in this room for a moment."

Without giving him time to answer if he would, she ran out. Minutes passed, and she did not return, though Justin heard voices—women's voices. One, it seemed to him, was raised in anger. After all, it couldn't be Sands who had come.

O'Reilly grew impatient. He wished to go. Mrs. Sands had spoken of waiting for a moment. He couldn't stop indefinitely, dancing attendance upon her whims!

Fumbling for his watch, he found it gone. Great Scott! Stolen! He remembered a certain small key attached to the chain, and in a flash of enlightenment the whole plot mapped itself before his eyes.

Furious, his impulse was to spring out and denounce the chief culprit; but Beverley's appeal to his chivalry stopped him, like a chain around his feet. Not till she called his name did he open the door.

"Mr. O'Reilly, I thank you," she said. "It was my friend's nurse who came in. She is vexed with me because I let her patient disobey orders. She threatens to leave at once, though her time's not up till tomorrow. I must talk to her and try to soothe her down before my husband comes. He hasn't arrived, after all, and may not, for a long time, but the self-reproach that I felt when I thought he had shows me I oughtn't to keep you here. Tell me once and for all, before you go, now you've seen the pearls—is there any hope?"

"None whatever," O'Reilly said positively. "I'm going, Mrs. Sands. You need have no fear of me where your husband's concerned, though I understand now exactly why I was kept till you were afraid to keep me longer. Our little friend is as smart at picking pockets as she is at acting. Again, I congratulate you upon her; but her tricks will do you no good. I wish you good-night!"

Beverley stood still and let him go. She had no answer to make. Precisely what he meant by his accusation she did not understand, but she knew that while she detained him Clo had indeed dared the great adventure. It was a blow to Roger Sands' wife that her offer of the pearls had been refused; but, even if O'Reilly had been inclined to bargain, the difficulty with Roger would have been formidable.

For the moment Beverley thought of the pearls almost with distaste. That they should come to her today, when she cared for nothing in the world but the lost papers, was an irony of fate. She did not return to the boudoir. She forgot the mystery of the open door, and neglected to close it.

She was nervously anxious to excuse herself to Sister Lake. She could not bear to let the nurse believe her heartless, yet above all it was her duty to defend Clo. She must confess that it was upon her errand that the girl had defied authority.

"Please don't blame the child," she pleaded. "She thinks everything of you, you know. She isn't ungrateful. She's too grateful—that's the trouble! She knew I needed something done for me—a thing I couldn't do myself; so she made this sacrifice. You must forgive us both."

But Sister Lake was not to be placated. After the first burst of righteous wrath on finding her patient not asleep, not resting, but gone, she settled down to quiet indignation. The thing was unprecedented. She could not sacrifice her dignity by overlooking it. The one adequate punishment was to go, and go she would. If Miss Riley were well enough to do Mrs. Sand's errands by day and night, a nurse's services were no longer needed.

Beverley was forced at last to submit. Sister Lake was paid and would accept no present in addition. The butler was summoned to call a taxi and attend to sending down the small luggage.

Meantime the Queen's pearls were forgotten.

A 16-Year-Old Heiress

Her own mother, who was Mrs. Gates' only sister, died when Dellora was 9 years old, and after several years her father married again. Mrs. Angell has proved an excellent mother and adviser to her stepdaughter, and her training will no doubt have a great deal to do with what Dellora makes of her future, though Mrs. Angell insists that she has no ambitions for Dellora except what the child may desire for her own good. If things are what they seem in this American family, Dellora will grow up a healthy, happy young woman, unspoiled by attentions and with unconsciousness of self.

In the things that count this multi-millionaire girl is not so very different from thousands of other American girls of her own age who are starting out to earn a livelihood. She is plucky and resourceful and fond of fun. Once she makes up her mind to do a task, she is pretty likely to stick to it until it is finished. One of her ambitions is to be able to drive her car from Lake Forest to Tomahawk without the assistance of a road map. The first stretch of road through Kenosha, Racine and Milwaukee is easy enough, but the roads do get confusing when one hits the hills and lake region of Wisconsin.

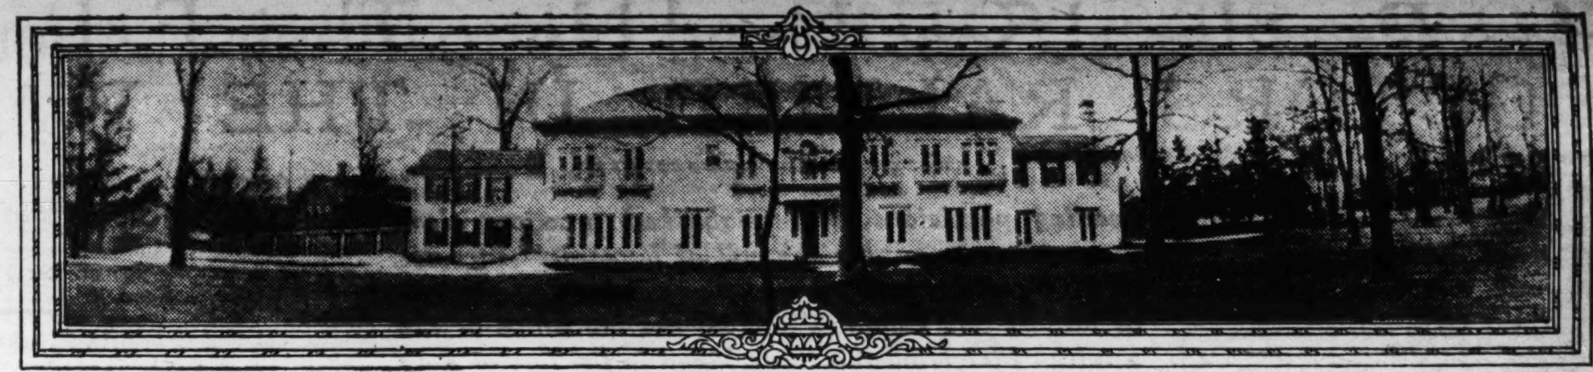
Over One Million American Women Are Now Using La-may Face Powder

There are actually three thousand different brands of face powder now sold in America, some on the market as long as fifty years. A new face powder has become the most popular among all of these other three thousand powders, and it is only a few months old. Yet it is now selling faster than many on the market for fifty years. Why did this new powder become famous so quickly? For two reasons: First, it is guaranteed absolutely pure. It does not contain rice powder, white lead or any injurious substance. Second, it stays on better than any other powder. This improved formula is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). The large size is fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. When you see how wonderfully it beautifies your complexion you will understand why La-may is now used by over a million American women.



Modest, as millionaires' places go, is the home in which Miss Angell lives with her parents at Lake Forest, Ill.

How Capricious Fortune Fluttered the Gates Millions - Down Into Hands of 16-Year-Old Schoolgirl -

Miss Dellora Frances Angell of Chicago, favorite niece of late Mrs. John W. Gates, principal heiress to spectacular plunger's estate, valued at more than $30,000,000 — Steel and oil magnate left fortune to wife and son, but latter died, and Mrs. Gates decreed estate should go to sister's child, named after herself :: ::

THE eccentric manner in which great fortunes sometimes flit from one ownership to another is strikingly exemplified in the case of the Gates millions. When the late John W. Gates, in his tempestuous career of battle, was conquering his way upwards from barbed wire to steel and oil, when he was plunging in Wall street and stripping the scalps from other redoubtable financiers, when his spectacular and adventurous temper was summed up in his raucous challenge of "Bet you a million!" he had little idea that his multiple millions, won in the smoke and stress of combat, would eventually flutter down into the hands of a simple little schoolgirl of 16.

Yet this is what has happened, through a train of circumstances perhaps unforeseen by him. When Gates died at Paris, on Aug. 9, 1911, he left his fortune in trust for his wife, Mrs. Dellora R. Gates, who had always taken an active interest in the vast financial interests of her husband, and for their son, Charles G. Gates. In the natural course of events, the whole estate would in time have descended to the son. But the latter died of apoplexy in 1913 while boarding his private car at Cody, Wyo., where he had gone on a hunting trip in search of health. The entire fortune thus came into the possession of his mother.

Now, it happened that Mrs. Gates had had a beloved sister, Mrs. R. F. Angell of St. Charles, Ill., who died about seven years ago, leaving a daughter, Dellora Frances Angell, who was named after Mrs. Gates. This child Mrs. Gates took into her home in New York and grew to love for her own sake as well as for that of her dead mother.

When Mrs. Gates died in New York on Nov. 28, last, and her will was submitted for probate, it was found that she had left $500,000 to her brother, Edward J. Baker of St. Charles, Ill., and sums to some 50 other legatees totaling, together with Baker's share, about $1,300,000. The remainder of her fortune was left in trust to her favorite niece, Miss Angell, with provisions that the money shall gradually come into her possession until, at the age of 40, it all will be entirely under her control.

When John W. Gates died his estate was estimated at between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000. Since then it has alternately increased and decreased until nobody but the trustees has any accurate knowledge of its value. Much of the property is on oil fields in the Southwest, and it is not unreasonable to believe that the fortune is even larger today than it was in 1911. Thus, Miss Dellora Frances Angell becomes one of the wealthiest schoolgirls in America.

In the belief that some insight into the character and life of this fortunate young girl would be of wide interest, a woman reporter for the Post-Dispatch recently visited her at her home in Lake Forest, the surburb de luxe of Chicago. She found a girl who, until a few weeks ago, had pursued the merry, care-free ways of normal American girlhood, and who, though she had emerged almost overnight from happy obscurity to a bewilderment of public curiosity, had no idea of changing her habits or ideals in any way.

Tall, straight and slender, the joy of living is expressed in every agile movement of Miss Angell's lithe, muscular body. Her hazel eyes are fringed with long lashes and her wealth of dark brown hair is arranged in simple schoolgirl style. Among her attractions, concerning which she is blithely unconscious, are two dimples that are always in evidence, for, as Dellora herself says, "I am noted for my giggles."

Dellora Angell would be wealthy without a penny of her fortune, for she is endowed with the sunny disposition and the sense of humor which are among the best gifts that can fall to mortals. One can imagine her leading a midnight frolic at boarding school, to the despair of the teachers; or she would no doubt take delight in teasing father for an hour for some forbidden pleasure. If she were not so thoroughly human and matter-of-fact, she would seem a bit blase over her new importance. Though surrounded all her life by every comfort, it would seem perfectly natural for a 16-year-old girl to be thrilled at the heritage that has fallen to her. But probably it has not occurred to Dellora that she has a right to feel important.

With frankness, she says she has made no plans except to get back to school as soon as possible and make up for the time she has lost since her aunt's death. She is a sophomore at Ferry Hall Seminary in Lake Forest, where she will probably finish her course. Her father and stepmother have made no definite plans regarding her schooling, except that they will advise her and help her to plan her life. They both think that Dellora will decide for herself, and wisely, when the time for big decisions comes.

Dellora is a home lover, and her happiest times are passed in company with her parents or her little half-sister, of whom she never tires talking. The home at Lake Forest, which the Angells leased when they moved there for Dellora to attend Ferry Hall, is a large, attractive house with spacious rooms and comfortable furnishings. There is no pretension, no formal period decorations, but just the settings for an average well-to-do American family of simple tastes. Her room is papered in French blue, and the sidelights have dainty shields of the same color. Ivory furniture and a rose-colored rug lend a cheerful air to the room, which is lighted by a row of casement windows, curtained in net, through which the morning sunshine streams.

In front of the windows stand two wicker cages, with two canary birds singing with all their little might. These birds are all that Dellora brought with her from her aunt's mansion in New York. She inherited all of Mrs. Gates' personal property, including one of the finest collections of paintings in this country, not to mention a casket of jewels which fills a good-sized safety deposit box in one of the New York banks. The paintings will be taken care of, and the jewels, too. But Dellora brought the canaries along.

As the reporter left the house, after talking with Mrs. Angell and Dellora, she started down the winding ways along which Lake Foresters proceed to the railway station. Mrs. Angell had asked if she thought she could find the way, and she had thought she might. But she had gone no further than a hundred yards when she heard a great honking, and Dellora was upon her, all smiles, as she opened the door of her little car, saying:

"I thought you might get lost and miss your train, and besides, I want you to see some of the pretty places around. I wish it were summer, so it would really show up."

If Dellora has a hobby, it is probably her cottage in the Wisconsin woods, where the family has spent the summers for several years. The big house, "Angell's Nest," sits on the hill overlooking Tomahawk Lake, and close by is Dellora's own little retreat, where she has her friends in for fudge parties and ghost stories and all the little innocuous good times girls love. A motor boat is moored at the landing and a book of kodak snapshots which she showed tells stories of many picnics and moonlight rides in the summer time.

As to accomplishments, Dellora vows, with disarming frankness, that she has none. She admits a fondness for tennis, an aversion to golf and a mild interest in horseback riding. She would love to excel in athletics, and has already won a prize for a high-jumping contest at school. She can swim and dive "a little." From her mother it was learned that she is fond of cooking and would much rather do it herself than bother with telling the maid how she wants it done. Sitting on a cushion and sewing a fine seam wouldn't exactly suit her exuberant personality, but one can easily imagine her making a frock in a twinkling of an eye, with an electric sewing machine at hand, or improvising a becoming hat without the aid of a modiste.

Dellora Frances Angell has just passed her sixteenth birthday. She was born Dec. 23, 1902, at St. Charles, Ill., 38 miles west of Chicago, and lived there until three years ago, when the family removed to Lake Forest. She was graduated from the eighth grade with honors. She is still jealously fond of her "home town" and calls it the best place in the world.

through. Something like a rope waved and undulated before him. He grasped it and gave three pulls. The thing came off in his hands. It was a long tendril of seaweed. He grew dizzy with disappointment and almost fell. His head swam. In desperation he stepped forward along the top of the submarine. The dizziness passed. He had been standing with one of his weighted feet on the air hose.

Another long waving line came toward him. The better air had cleared his brain. Some undercurrent of the sea waved it out of reach and he almost fell from the sloping top in his desperate attempt to grasp it. But another current brought it slowly back again, and at last he had it. What had looked like a bowline at the end did prove to be the welcome loop. Laboriously he put a foot through and drew the loop up to his body. Then, grasping the line firmly in both hands, he gave the signal—one, two, three. The rope grew taut with a jerk, then slowly he began to go up. But slowly. It seemed like hours to him since he had screwed fast the helmet. The air was not right, somehow, and suddenly he knew why. The air hose had fouled where it led out to the manhole. He could feel it catch. He let go the lifeline with one hand and tried to shake it clear.

Finally, he lost all count of time—all knowledge of anything except to hold on, hold on. Someone was trying to pull his fingers apart, one by one. He felt them slipping. The hand on the air hose, too, was being attacked. He resisted grimly, finger by finger, but at last they were all off. There came a dash of cold water in his face. It felt so good. Death was easy after all. Then suddenly he could breathe and he opened his eyes. He was lying in a cutter and men were dragging the diving suit off him. Then he fainted again.

Thanks to a robustness gained from much exposure, Marke was soon himself again.

"Who figured out the scheme to get me out?" he asked old Conway, when he came on deck the next day.

"You owe that to Mr. Trent," said the old sailor, looking Marke in the eye. "When he came up he was pretty near all in. We laid him in a cutter and the First Luff gave him the paper you sent up in a bottle. After a while, when he could sit up, he held that paper of yours in his hand and scowled until the scheme came to him. The first we knew of it he was smiling and asking for a sounding lead.

"He worked the lead all alone, sick as he was, for nearly two hours. Then some bubbles came up and we guessed you had smashed the ports and had been getting the signals. Then he went to pieces and we had to lay him out again. It took Pills two hours to bring him round that time. He's got the deck now, and I kinda think we have misjudged the man. Don't you, sonny?"

"Yes, I do," said Marke. "I'm going to him now and tell him." That's how there came to be harmony fore and aft on the mamma ship, Walrus.

do it by sprinklin' the salt all over their heads and backs jist as if they was a hunk of beef or a biled tater, I'm a sheep myself. Shore am.

"But old Tobe, with all his own percossity fer cuttin' up hisself, couldn't see through it. He jist swallered it whole, feathers and all.

"'That's wuss than the buttermilk cow and the bee,' I heerd him say to young Toby. 'I've heerd them tales on city gals, but I'll be everlastin'ly blowed,' he says, 'if I ever believed it on 'em. But seein' is knowin'.'

"But young Toby wasn't goin' to give up jist yet. He had hitched up old Bob to the single buggy and 'lowed it was a nice day fer a ride. But that gal—haw! haw! haw! hee-ee-e! She lets on like she was a-feerd of hosses fer some reason er nuther, though we hadn't heerd nothin' about it afore, and Toby, he was a-tellin' her how gentle old Bob was. 'All you have to do,' he says, 'is jist to keep the rein away frum his tail and he's all right.'

"'Oh!' says that there little innocent angel. 'Oh! I'm so glad you told me. I'll take my parrysol with us,' she says, 'so if it was to rain, I can hold it over his tail while you drive,' she says.

"Well, sir, afore the day was over Toby had give it up. No city gal fer him. No, sir! He wanted a womern that knowed enough to come in out of the rain when he got married. And as we was a-ridin' home in the wagon, him and Sudie passed us in the buggy—and Sudie wasn't a-carryin' no umbrell, nuther. Both their looks said so.

"And then that artist gal laughed the fust big laugh we'd heerd frum her, and me and Fronie jist natcherly busted loose and jined in with her, Fronie ketchin' on the same as I had.

"Jee-mi-nee! They couldn't no country gal a-done no better. Maybe not as good. She was shore some smart gal. And, as I said, she was a artist and brung it with her. She teached Fronie how to use her kodak and that's her pitcher hangin' up there on the wall, showin' her a-paintin' a likeness of our house. Plumb good, ain't it? Them there trees is as large as life, ain't they?

"And Miss Harriet wanted to vote. She told us so. And she got us all straightened out on the subject. And she said they was a lot of women in the city that didn't giggle.

"And so, I jist natcherly clim down frum the tree that I'd been a-settin' in fer 40 year er more, and shinned up another, where I've roosted ever sence."

St. Louis and Missouri Doctors in the War

the senior consultant in face and jaw surgery, in which position he directs the rebuilding of disfigured faces. Under his direction, such cases were treated immediately, in the advanced hospitals, instead of waiting until they reached base hospitals.

Dr. William Coughlin, 4946 Buckingham court, of the St. Louis University Medical School has been acting commanding officer of the American Ambulance, a large hospital in Paris, part of the time, and has had large surgical service there.

Dr. Nathaniel Allison of the Humboldt Building has had the direction of all splinting in the American army hospitals in France. Under his supervision the percentage of fatalities resulting from fractures was greatly reduced.

Dr. Malvern B. Clopton, 5391 Waterman avenue, who went to France with St. Louis Base Hospital Unit No. 21, was made commanding officer of a mobile hospital that followed close behind the battle lines.

Lieutenant-Colonel Fred T. Murphy, who departed as head of Unit 21, has been made head of the medical and surgical supply department of the Red Cross; Dr. Sidney Schwab, specialist in nervous diseases, has been in charge of a hospital devoted solely to shell-shock cases, and Dr. Borden Veeder has been promoted to Major in command of the unit at Rouen.

In addition to physicians and surgeons, the dentists of St. Louis and Missouri generally were on record early with tenders of aid, whenever it was desired. The St. Louis Dental Society, which includes in its membership a large majority of the practicing dentists of the city, sent 69 to the service, but has no record of the number ordered abroad. The report of the national organization, made a few months ago, placed the number for the entire country at 5983, most of whom were assigned to the training camps on this side. Of the St. Louis contingent only one figured in the casualty records. This was Dr. E. C. Stamm of 716 North Grand avenue, who went to France as a First Lieutenant. His relatives were notified that he had met with an injury while on duty, but not a very serious one.

Any review of the medical and surgical service furnished from this city that would not take into account the record made by the Red Cross nurses would be very incomplete, to say the least. While the surgeons may perform wonderful operations and practically remake the victims of the shot, shell and poisons of the Germans, it requires the gentle care and vigilance of the skilled nurse to make these efforts successful. Without the nurse, the badly wounded soldier would fare badly, as the operating surgeons are always too busy to watch the cases themselves.

St. Louis won fame that will long endure through the showing made by the organization of trained nurses that went abroad with the unit from Barnes Hospital and Washington University. Reports from Rouen, where this unit maintained a large hospital which was nearly always crowded, shows that the women there worked incessantly and uncomplainingly throughout, surprising doctors, soldiers and civilians by their wonderful courage and devotion to duty. When the air raiders threatened the hospital with death-dealing bombs, these women, recruited in St. Louis, stuck to their posts and their patients. That the head of this organization should be picked out for the highest rank and honor in the American organization of nurses is not surprising, in view of the records made by Miss Julia Stimson and her Spartan band.

How He Quit Tobacco

This veteran, S. B. Lamphere, was addicted to the excessive use of tobacco for many years. He wanted to quit but needed something to help him.

He learned of a free book that tells about tobacco habit and how to conquer it quickly, easily and safely. In a recent letter he writes: "I have no desire for tobacco any more. I feel like a new man."

Anyone desiring a copy of this book on tobacco habit, smoking and chewing can get it free, postpaid, by writing to Edward J. Woods, TE-28, Station F, New York City. You will be surprised and pleased. Look for quieter nerves, stronger heart, better digestion, improved eyesight, increased vigor, longer life and other advantages if you quit poisoning yourself.

Without an Operation

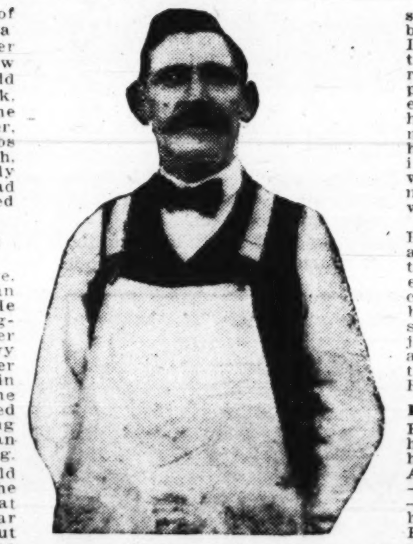
How a New Jersey Man Got Rid of a Severe, Obstinate, Right Inguinal Hernia Without the Slightest Trouble.

Below is a picture of Eugene M. Pullen, a well-known carpenter of Manasquan, New Jersey. If you could see him at his work, particularly when he handles heavy timber, jumps and climbs around like a youth, you would scarcely imagine that he had formerly been afflicted with a rupture.



Ruptured in Right Side.

At an early age, Eugene Pullen was an express driver. He handled railroad baggage. One day after delivering a heavy trunk on an upper floor he felt a pain in the right groin. The suffering increased and it was not long before the young man noticed the swelling.

The doctor told young Pullen that he was ruptured and that he must either wear a truss throughout life or submit to a drastic operation. All surgeons know that hernia operations, with anaesthetics, etc., are dangerous; they may end fatally. Moreover, it is a well-established fact that many rupture operations are not successful; the bowel soon breaks through the sewed-up opening and protrudes worse than ever.

Afraid of Operation.

Like most others, Mr. Pullen declined to take the risks of an operation; the expense and loss of time had to be considered, too. Hoping he might get a little better encouragement, he went to another physician who, to his sorrow, gave him even less hope. It was pointed out to the young man that unless the rupture were perfectly held all the time or the surgeon's knife successfully used, he might expect an increase or doubling in the rupture with further complications, or the dreaded strangulated hernia which kills so many ruptured people.

Victim of Trusses.

The victim bought a truss, a hard, spring-like affair, the best he could get. It tortured him. He tried another—still no relief. He was compelled to give up his express business. The hard tasks of ordinary men were forbidden him. He became an insurance agent, in which position he did not need to do bodily work.

For six years Mr. Pullen dragged around, using various trusses, hard, elastic, etc., with never any contentment. One day his mother told him something she had just found out. It was a simple and easy thing for him to do. He lost no time.

Discarded His Truss.

Relief came at once; he almost forgot that he had any rupture. Afterward came a cure—a complete healing—and, although years have passed and Mr. Pullen is an energetic carpenter, working on buildings, climbing over roofs lifting lumber and such like, he is absolutely free from the old hernia. He knows he is completely, lastingly cured. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble—comfort and contentment from the very outset. He is a strong, cheerful-minded man.

Valuable Information Free.

The valuable information which Mrs. Pullen read in a newspaper many years ago and gave to her son, together with further important facts, will be sent free to any reader of this who writes to Eugene M. Pullen, 1045E Marcelles avenue, Manasquan, N. J., inclosing a stamp for reply. Mention the kind of rupture you have, whether on right or left side and what you have already done in your effort to cure it. A legion of cases of all kinds of rupture in men and women, including inguinal (groin), femoral, navel, scrotal, etc., have been reported completely healed. Age seems to make no difference.

HOW ST. LOUIS AND MISSOURI DOCTORS RALLIED IN THE WAR

Leading physicians with established practices close their offices to answer the call of humanity—Incomes of $100 per day and more exchanged for commissions as Majors and Captains and all the hardships of the service—Five from this State killed in the line of duty and two locked up in a German prison -:- -:- -:-

DISCIPLES of Aesculapius and Hippocrates played a most important role in the greatest of all wars. Doctors, surgeons and specialists, representing every branch of medicine and surgery, willingly closed up their offices, turned over their patients to brethren of the profession, and offered their services, in obdience to the call of humanity. Medicos whose earning power ran all the way from $20 to $100 per day, and some far beyond the latter figure, sent in their names, knowing in advance that a majorship and the limited salary attached thereto would be about the most exalted lot they could expect. Other of the younger M. D.'s reached for captaincies and did not falter when they grasped only the grade of Lieutenant. At no time was there any scarcity of medical and surgical skill, so far as this country was concerned.

St. Louis stood up well under this drastic test. Doctors with large, lucrative practices offered their services to be sent wherever they were most needed and that they were greatly in demand is shown by the very considerable number who were accepted for duty, overseas and in the great cantonments throughout the country. Even before the United States accepted the gage of battle forced upon it by the Kaiser and his piratical crew, doctors here and in fact everywhere throughout the country announced their willingness to give their best to the suffering French, British and other allied soldiers who bore the brunt of the early fighting to check the onrushing Prussians. France and England received these proffers of help with unfeigned delight.

Under the standard of the Red Cross they flocked into France from every part of this country, with medicine chests, surgical appliances and everything else needed to correct, as far as possible, the woe and suffering incident to modern warfare. There was the great opportunity to save the lives of brave men and lessen the torture of wounds received in a cause that concerned the American people as much as it did the allied Powers. And when the history of the war shall have been written, the service given by American doctors and nurses will vie with the most notable achievements of the comamnders on the battle fronts.

From the beginning to the end of hostilities Missouri offered the services of 1499 doctors, including 496 volunteers from the St. Louis medical ranks. Of the total number only about 25 per cent were sent overseas. The others went to various camps and some went on the reserve list, to go wherever and whenever called. The records of the State Medical Society place the total number at 1499, and they also show that a very large majority were assigned to the camps and reserves. They do not profess to give the exact number sent abroad, as the censorship, which was only recently relaxed, would not permit the publication of such information, even in the medical journals. The St. Louis Medical Society furnished 317 of the whole number, or more than one-fifth.

Of the representation sent abroad from Missouri, five perished from wounds received in discharge of duty. All of these were from points outside of St. Louis. The first to give up his life was Lieut. William T. Fitzsimmons, a young physician of Kansas City, who went over with the Harvard University unit. While dressing the wounds of soldiers in one of the hospitals back of the lines in France, he was struck by a shell dropped from a bombing plane and was almost instantly killed. This was reported as a deliberate attack by the Germans on a hospital that was unmistakably marked.

The last of the doctors of the Missouri medical organization to make the supreme sacrifice was Lieut. W. A. Fair of Pleasant Hill, killed on the Argonne front Oct. 6, 1918. While going to the rescue of Capt. Harry B. McPherson of the Twentieth Engineers, who was wounded, Lieut. Fair was struck by a volley of machine-gun bullets and instantly killed. When his body was picked up a Croix de Guerre was found in his wallet. The other Missouri doctors killed in action were Lieut. Leroy R. Boutwell of Kirkwood, Charles R. Long of Sedalia and Frank V. Frazier of Altemont. Four more died of illness contracted in the service. None of these was among the St. Louis volunteers.

Two noted women physicians were among the St. Louis volunteers, and both were sent abroad. One was Dr. Elizabeth Reed, who closed her office and abandoned a large practice among children, and the other was Dr. Isabel Gray, who went over as an anesthetist, and who has been kept constantly employed ever since she reached France. She is now stationed at one of the base hospitals, where she is still administering chloroform and ether in connection with capital operation. Dr. Reed announced when she left that she expected to remain after the war and give her attention to children suffering from neglect accruing from the war.

Among the first of the St. Louis doctors to go over were Drs. Malvern B. Clopton and Scott Heuer, who saw service under the auspices of the Red Cross in 1916. Both of these physicians served in French hositals and when the United States entered the war both immediately volunteered and were accepted. Dr. Clopton accompanied the Washington University unit with a commission as Major and Dr. Heuer was a Captain at the Second Northern General Hospital, Leeds, England. Dr. Clopton has remained with the unit and participated in many operations at the Rouen station when the university unit was made Hospital No. 12 and given the task of converting a race track into a hospital. This institution handled thousands of cases, and though Rouen was visited repeatedly by German aerial raiders, the buildings sheltering the wounded escaped the bombs.

The first organized body from St. Louis for service abroad was Unit No. 21, supplied by Barnes Hospital and Washington University, which left here May 17, 1917, a little over a month after the United States joined the allies. This unit went completely organized in every detail. Dr. Fred T. Murphy was in charge of the medical section, assisted by Drs. Clopton, Nathaniel Allison, Walter Fischell, B. S. Veeder and Eugene L. Opie, all ranking as Majors. The doctors going as Captains were Sidney I. Schwab, L. T. Post, C. H. Eyerman, Hugh McCulloch, W. R. Rainey, W. S. Thomas, R. M. Spivey, Alan M. Chesney, Edwin C. Ernst and H. M. Young. A number of younger doctors went as Lieutenants.

The nurses were in charge of Miss Julia Stimson, whose work at Rouen won her the appointment as chief army nurse of France and placed her in direct charge of an organization of 8000 nurses stationed in all parts of the war zone. When this organization went abroad, it was stationed for some time at Blackpool, England, and was then ordered to Rouen. Its worth was appreciated, as was shown when its personnel was repeatedly drawn upon for new organizations. Shortly after its arrival overseas Dr. Murphy was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

Two of the volunteers from the St. Louis Medical Society had the misfortune to be taken prisoners when the Huns broke through the British lines in the great offensive of March 21, 1918. The victims were Dr. John F. Hardesty of 3206 California avenue and Dr. Arthur H. Sewing, 2349 St. Louis avenue. They were taken to one of the German prisons, and it was many months before their anxious relatives and friends could get any further information. They were then serving with the English army and were treating wounded soldiers, when the advancing Germans took them in charge and ordered their removal to prison. Both doctors had the rank of Captain and the Germans sent them to an officers' prison.

Another St. Louis physician who got into the war early was Dr. Edgar F. Schmitz of 5385 Waterman avenue. When the war began he was in Vienna and witnessed the excitement attending the mobilization. He then went to London via Berlin. He entered the service in June, 1917, with the rank of Lieutenant, and was assigned to a first-aid station back of the British lines. He was constantly employed, as the fighting was at all times sanguinary. He accompanied his division in the drive on the Hindenburg line and was in the sector where the Germans launched the drive last Easter. Here he was cut off from his army for four days by reason of staying back to dress the wounds of the fallen soldiers, instead of going with the retreat. For this service he received a special mention from the Major-General in charge of the division. He was later awarded the British Military Cross for "devotion to duty in attending wounded under heavy fire." Last July he was called to the American army and assigned to an evacuation hospital back of the American lines. He was also promoted to the rank of Captain.

A most important assignment was that given Dr. Virgil Loeb, another of the St. Louis doctors whose proffer of aid was eagerly accepted. Ranking as Captain, he is at present in charge of Maxillo facial surgery in the hospitals of the Mesves center, France. These institutions have 20,000 beds and specialize in the treatment of shell and gunshot wounds of the face. As there are thousands of American, French and British soldiers under treatment in these hospitals and as the process of treating the wounds is necessarily slow, it is expected that Dr. Loeb will be required to remain abroad for some time.

Dr. P. A. Schaeffer, formerly dean of the Washington University Medical School and instructor in chemistry, is in charge of the nutrition of the entire expeditionary force. He fixes the soldiers' diet and sees that their food is properly balanced. His headquarters are at the central laboratory, at Dijon, France.

The Way of an "Artist Gal" With an Ozark Swain

Gentle Art of Nipping a Tender Passion in the Bud

Young Toby Stoggs went "plumb hawg-wild" over Miss Harriet, down from "Sent Louis" to board, and Sudie Lee was "a-bustin'" her heart out for fear of losing her "feller"—But when the city girl "salted the sheep" as if they were "biled 'taters," Tobe he just allowed he couldn't stand for "no sich ignoramus as that" -:- -:-

By Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing.

"WHENEVER I diskiver that I am up the wrong tree," said my host, "I jist natcherly climb down and look fer another. Whenever I find that I've got the wrong pig by the ear, I shore turn it loose and keep my weather eye out fer the right one. That's my ticket, and I vote 'er straight."

He knocked the ashes from his pipe and refilled it with the native long leaf. "You see," grinning whimsically, "that's what I done about this here womern sufferage. Not but what I always believed in it some. I always 'lowed that Fronie, here, knowed how to vote as well as any man livin,' not even exceptin' myself, and I could look around and count my neighbor women who could travel in the same wagon. But frum what I had always heerd about the women of the city—well, I don't mean no disrespect, you a-bein' frum the city yourself—but frum what I'd always heerd, I shore didn't want to see any votin' done by them there silly, gigglin', card-playin' city gals like I'd heerd you all was.

"But that was before Miss Harriet come to board with us. Haw! haw! haw! hee-ee-e! Ever' time I think of old Tobe Stoggs and young Toby, his boy, and that there artist gal, Miss Harriet, I purty nigh bust a-laughin'. Miss Harriet is a teacher up in Sent Louis and a artist for playtime. Paints pitchers of houses and things.

"Say! Jist step to the door and listen, will you? We're a-goin' to have some weather. When you hear the owls a-talkin' 'mong theirselves like they're a-doin' tonight, I never knowed it to fail. And listen to 'em laugh. Don't it sound like the very old boy hisself—that laughin' of their'n? Which minds me ag'in of old Tobe Stoggs. He's always been a powerful feller to joke. Twenty year ago, when little boys was a-wearin' red-topped boots, he tuck little Toby to town to git him fitted out with his fust pair, and he still tells how the owls was a-hootin' at him all the way home, a-sayin' ever' little bit:

"'Who-who-who-who-who-air-ye?' And how little Toby would up and answer, all skeered like, 'I'm Toby Stoggs, with his new red-topped boots on.'

"'Ah-ha-ha-ha! Hardly knowed you!' laughed the owl. And he can laugh exactly like them fellers out there. Makes the cold shivers run up and down your back to hear him. Jist plumb like the devil—tail, horns, hoofs and all.

"Miss Harriet's a artist for playtime—paints pitchers of houses and things."

"And you've heerd about Joshua and the fellers that made the moonshine, I reckon, though it ain't hardly ever told jist straight? Well, that there joke started with old Tobe's daddy, Uncle Josh Stoggs. I was jist a little feller when it happened, but I've heerd my own daddy tell it a thousand times, I reckon. Old Tobe's daddy had a still in the hills right around here close. I know the identical spot. Once when he got ketched and was brung up fer it, the Jedge says, 'Stand up,' he says, 'and hear your sentence. What is your name?"

"'Joshua,' says Uncle Josh, 'Joshua Stoggs,' he says.

"'Joshua,' echoed the Jedge, in surprise, as if he hadn't knowed him all his life. 'Joshua! Air you the man that made the sun stand still?"

"'No, sir,' says old Josh, winkin' at the Jedge. 'No, sir; I'm the man that made the moon shine.' And that was the startin' of all them jokes you've heerd sence.

"But about this here womern sufferage and Miss Harriet, and how she made young Tobe stick to the gal he'd been promised to ever' sence he was jist a goslin—haw! haw! haw! hee-ee-e!

"I didn't take much stock in havin' her come, feelin' like I did towards them city women, but Fronie was jist bent on boardin' her. A womern Fronie used to work fer wrote about Miss Harriet a-wantin' a quiet place to spend a month and sorter git rested up, her bein' a teacher and all busted up and broke down frum hard work. I reckon it shore is hard to teach them city kids nothin'.

"And young Tobe Stoggs, he 'lowed that he was plumb proud that a gal frum the city was a-comin' in our midst and if we'uns was a-goin' to be busy the day she got to town, he said he'd drive in and git her hisself with his pa's new buggy. 'Won't keer to go at all,' he 'lowed, which meant that he was plumb crazy to git the chance.

"Well, the fust thing, purty nigh, was that me and Fronie and the kids and Harriet must go over to old Tobe's fer dinner. She hadn't more'n got here hardly till we had to promise 'em we'd come the very next Sunday and stay all day.

"Me and Fronie seen the fust thing that it was young Toby's doin's. He was gittin' plumb hawg-wild over the city gal and the gal knowed it, too, but she didn't know at first what me and Fronie knowed—that Sudie Lee was plumb sick ever sence Toby had that long trip with her frum the railroad. Old Tobe and young Toby's ma was fer Sudie and unbeknownst to young Toby they got Sudie to come fer Sunday dinner, too.

"You see, it had been a settled fact atween young Toby and Sudie fer a right smart while. I reckon Sudie was jist 14 when it was ordained and decided fer 'em by the cat in the quilt a-jumpin' out at her."

"The cat?" I questioned.

"Shore. Didn't you never hear about the cat a-jumpin' out at a person at a quiltin'? Er don't you have quiltin's er nothin' in the city?

"It was Sudie's birthday and her ma give a quiltin' fer 'em both together—her and Sudie—and her pa give a rail-splittin' so the whole famblies of all the neighbors could come and make theirselves useful and have a big dinner. The quilt was finished jist as the menfolks was a-comin' in to eat, and old Tom was ketched and throwed into the middle of it and shuck around till he was dizzy, and the one he jumped out at—well, it would be decided in some austerious way who her future intended was. He jumped out right over Sudie's head, with a yowl like a wild animile—a painter, maybe, er somethin'—and lit right onto young Toby's shoulder and clawed him on the ye'r. They couldn't nobody doubt that kind of evidence and Toby and Sudie was set apart fer one another right straight.

"Well, they hadn't nobody told Miss Harriet a darned thing, but she jist knowed somehow soon as we got there. Cutest thing I ever was acquainted with. And too square to let Sudie spend one single minute a-bustin' her heart out fer fear she was a-goin' to lose her feller. 'Sides, Harriet was tard and I reckon she didn't want to be bothered with no fellers a-hangin' around.

"But that fool Toby, he jist stood around that Sunday and fanned hisself and Miss Harriet with his ma's turkey wing so vigorously, that by the time we set down to dinner they was a expression on that artist gal's face that was too innocent fer this world. I didn't know her well enough yet to understand all about jist what it meant, but I wasn't surprised when she clapped her little plump hands and says: 'Oh, Mr. Stoggs!' she says. 'I see you keep a bee. I do love honey better than anything. And, oh,' she says, 'this is the finest buttermilk. You must show me which cow it is that gives the buttermilk and which gives the sweet milk. And this yaller butter!'

"Now, I jist an't fer shore whuther she said 'yaller' butter er 'yeller' butter. She used powerful good language. But anyhow, she says: 'I reckon,' she says, 'that you git it frum a cow of the same color, don't you?' she says.

"Toby's face turned as red as a turkey gobbler's snout, and I seen old Tobe and young Toby's ma nudge one another. As fer Sudie, she was plumb tickled and showed it. Toby wouldn't have no sich ignoramus as that, she was a-lowin' to herself.

"I could see that Fronie was plumb whipped out to think we had her fer a boarder and we all commenced talkin' about the election that was a-comin' off next November, though that was jist July, and jist as we got through eatin' we heerd the sheep a-comin' down the lane and Old Tobe, he changed the subject by 'lowin' that he must salt 'em afore they went off to the woods agin, and things looked as if we was a-gittin' over bein' plagued, when up and spoke that darned gal agin, a-sayin', 'Oh, Mr. Stoggs! do let me salt the sheep.'

My host refilled his pipe.

"And how do you reckon she salted 'em?" he asked. "I jist knowed from the innocent look on her face that she was a-goin' to pull off somethin', but she had me guessin'. Haw! haw! haw! hee-ee-e! She salted 'em all right. Salted 'em by the handfuls—but if she didn't

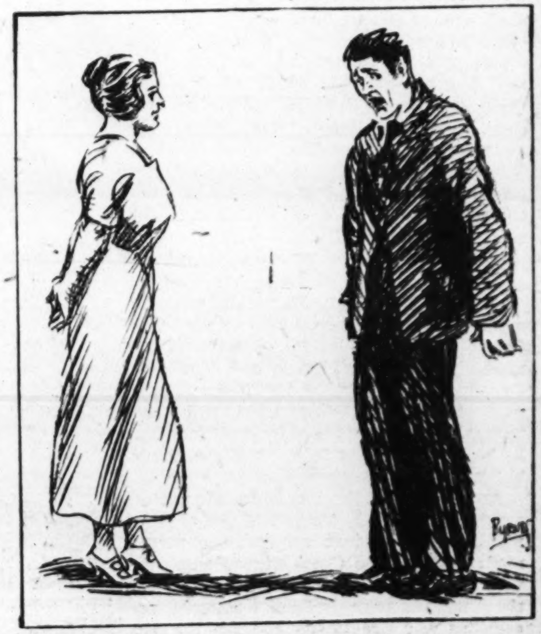
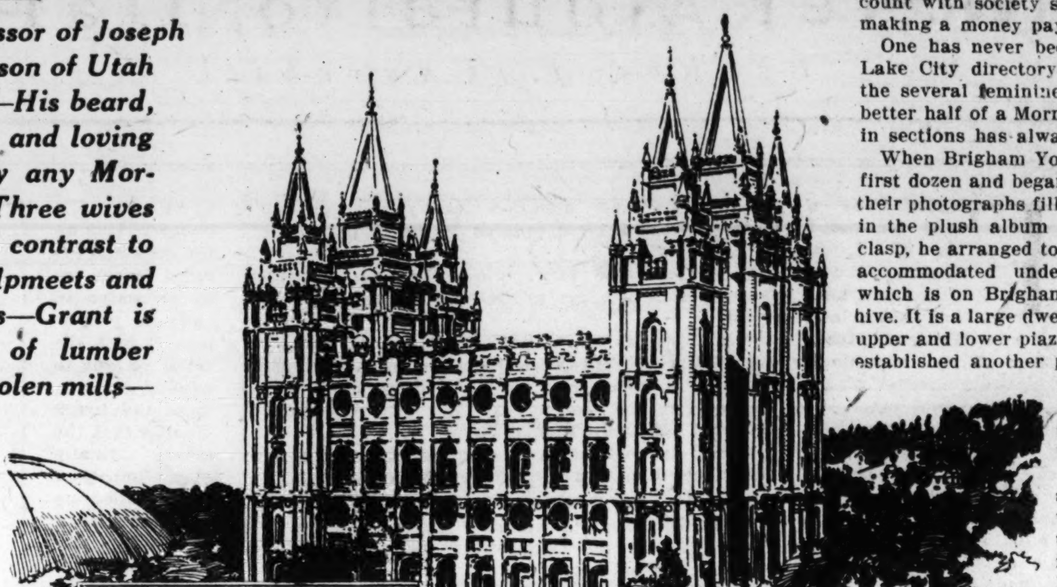
"He jumped right over Sudie's head and lit onto young Tobe's shoulder."



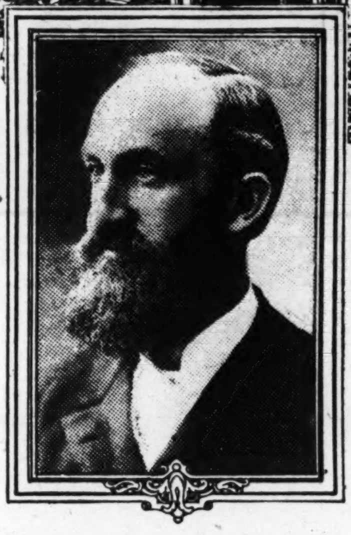
"Oh, Mr. Stoggs! I see you keep a bee!"

Mormonism's New Prophet and Business Agent

Heber Jeddy Grant, successor of Joseph Smith, first native-born son of Utah to become head of sect—His beard, in natural luxuriousness and loving culture, unsurpassed by any Mormon cheek and jowl—Three wives and 13 children in mild contrast to Brigham Young's 25 helpmeets and 40 sons and daughters—Grant is bank president, head of lumber company, director of woolen mills—Has been active in politics. :: :: ::



Mormon Temple, Salt Lake City.



Prophet Heber Jeddy Grant.

THE Mormons have a new Prophet, Seer and Revelator.

Automatically moving up from the consequential post of President of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, as the Mormon Cabinet is called, Heber Jeddy Grant now occupies the First President's chair of supremacy, made vacant in mid-November last by the taking off of the rugged and defiantly bellicose octogenarian, Joseph Fielding Smith.

Grant is the first native son of Utah to be elevated to the Mormon presidency. He is a figure of force and direction. If there were such a thing as a Quorum of Twelve in business, he might easily have attained a place in it, for his interests are as widely diversified as they are prosperous. He is president of a bank, head of a lumber company, director of woolen mills and active in insurance. In politics he has served in the upper house of the territorial Legislature and been a Councilman in Salt Lake City. He is 62 years of age, tall and rawboned.

The formality of confirming Grant in the Prophet's place, with strict adherence to the Mormon ritual and portentous ceremony, will occur when the dignitaries assemble in annual conference in the great temple at Salt Lake City in April. In the meantime, with two counsellors of his own selection, chosen from among the Apostles, the First President will function large as the fountain head of the sect, and pass along to the Mormon world whatever prophetic visions he may discern; for, according to the tenets, the triple title of Prophet, Seer and Revelator is in no sense merely perfunctory, but is bestowed in the full Mormon belief that it truly represents the powers of him that bears it.

From the time that followers of the original head of the sect, taking the overland trail to a new country in 1848, halted their oxteams at Fort Utah and set up a community, to the present day, there have been only half a dozen regularly chosen prophets.

The original Joe Smith wasn't elected. He announced himself. He pretended to have dug up the plates of a golden bible, with silver-bowed spectacles of supernatural quality, lying alongside, ready to be slipped on the nose. With these glasses he read the revelations, which he afterward dictated to a blacksmith and which were made into the Book of Mormon. Then the golden pages and the specs were wafted away. Joe had been a well digger and a retail dealer in hops before this episode. He quit both lines to become a prophet.

Sidney Rignon, who came after him, was a Pittsburg printer who delighted in cross-word puzzles, rebuses and things mystical. One day he threw up his job and joined the Smith party.

Brigham Young, a New England painter and glazier of great physical vigor and resourceful mentality, was the real organizer of the sect. He dominated the others and became the prophet without serious opposition.

John Taylor came next. An English itinerant preacher of great lung power, he had a reservoir of words which never ran low, no matter what the outflow.

Wilfred Woodruff was a Connecticut farmer who early in life became obsessed with the idea that some day he would see a great religious light.

Lorenzo Snow was a student at Oberlin College who fell in with the Mormons during a college vacation and accompanied them on their westward journey.

Joseph F. Smith was a relative of the original Joe, and was firm in the belief that anyone outside the Mormon camp was a pathetic figure with blindfolded eyes. The seventh in the line of prophets, Grant, stands out with what may be called a sturdy masculine pulchritudinousness with respect to whiskers. He possesses a beard which in luxurious growth and superior training, not to mention its amplitude as a windbreak and chest protector, has never been outclassed on cheek and jowl of any dignitary in all Utah.

Nearly all of the Mormon prophets have worn beards. They never contented themselves with a growth which suggested a willingness to halt short of the elaborate. Of the entire number, only Brigham Young could be said to have offered anything approaching Grant's in decorative completeness.

The Grant beard is known the world around, wherever an effort has been made to establish a Mormon recruiting station. Grant has served as chief missionary to Europe, with headquarters in Liverpool; been to Japan in the interest of the sect and spent some time in Mexico and South America. He was delegate to the international conference on hygiene in Nuremberg.

When one considers the record of his predecessors in the polygamous field, Grant does not bulk large as a multiple husband. Counting his first, or legal, wife, now dead, his total of three helpmeets and 13 children, all girls, seems scarcely worthy of mention.

If the information has come through correctly, Prophet Smith was survived by a quintet of Mrs. Smiths, as well as by 43 children, and, by the unofficial canvass, 91 grandchildren.

Brigham Young, accepting the dogma of the sect as nothing less than a command, and living in a time before the enactment of laws against having more than one wife at one time, made marrying as it was understood in Utah at the time, both a habit and a custom.

His accumulation of Mrs. Brigham Youngs was shady and progressive. The wedding bells rang out for him time and again. It was a facetious saying among the flippant Gentiles in Salt Lake City that when the bells rang if it wasn't a fire it was sure to be another orange blossom occasion for Daddy Young. The final notation at the vital statistics registrar's showed Brigham Young to be the lord and master over 25 wives and the father of a brood which, when all in corral, numbered 40.

Lorenzo Snow was credited with seven wives and 49 children. Woodruff had four wives and Taylor, who ran mostly to hair above his ears, rather than on his chin, had three.

There were 18 children in the elder Grant's family. Grant himself is his mother's only son, but there are a number of other sons and daughters, who bear their father's name. Three years before the death of his first wife, Grant was fined $100 because of his relation to one of the two other establishments which bore his name. He drew a check and squared the account with society so far as it was possible by making a money payment.

One has never been able to tell by the Salt Lake City directory or the phone book where the several feminine fractions of the collective better half of a Mormon lived. Housing a family in sections has always been a problem.

When Brigham Young's brides had passed the first dozen and began to grow so numerous that their photographs filled about all the oval spaces in the plush album with the ornamental brass clasp, he arranged to group as many as could be accommodated under one roof. This house, which is on Brigham street, is called the Beehive. It is a large dwelling of plain exterior, with upper and lower piazzas. A few blocks away he established another private residence, which is known as the Lion House, where the matrimonial overflow of the Beehive was domiciled.

There is nothing in the story that the name Lion was suggested because of the likelihood of there being much growling therein. Brigham Young had his peculiarities, but he wasn't frivolous. He had no cozy corners in either house.

On warm afternoons some of the wives usually drew their rockers out on the piazzas and worked at tatting or fancy crochet; while waiting for pa to come home from the office. No one could tell whether he would sit down to corned beef and cabbage with one, drop into chicken dinner with another, or what he would do. Under perfectly statutory and normal conditions, one husband frequently manages to keep his one and only wife guessing. What possibilities were open to Young in this respect anyone may figure.

The Mormon organization is made up of units of 70, which are called the "seventies." There are seven presidents of the seventies and 70 elders in each unit and 140 societies outside of the elders.

Such of these society members, or members of the "seventies," as contracted plural marriages, naturally had one or more or several homes and pairs of house slippers. A Mormon with a number of helpings of helpmeets could take almost any carline out from the four corners and find a welcome at the end of the run. So far as anyone is permitted to know, it never has been the custom for a much-married Mormon to call up all the sundry wives whenever he found it impossible to get away from business in time for dinner.

Nearly all of the Mormon Prophets were successful in business. They managed to accumulate fortunes, in spite of the fact that they were under naturally heavy expenses, incident to the upkeep of their households and the payment of grocery and drygoods bills. Brigham Young's estate was estimated at $2,000,000. He wasn't exactly a tightwad, but he didn't go in much for a splurge. The Mrs. Smiths weren't makers of a smart set, and Young wouldn't tolerate anything like a competition among them in millinery and dress finery.

The Mormon institution, on its purely financial and business side, is on a substantial foundation. Its corporate holdings of property are worth many millions of dollars. It owns hotels, theaters and business blocks and is interested in any number of other ventures.

All the Mormon business investments are in a trust. The First President, by virtue of his office, is trustee of the trust. Utah financiers, both inside and outside the Mormon sect, believe that Heber Jeddy Grant has demonstrated in his own private affairs his ability to make as fine a showing as an administrator as did Brigham Young.

Bolshevist "Wine Massacres"

TO the man who loves old wine the story of the wine pogroms narrated by Bessie Beatty in "The Red Heart of Russia" is almost heart-breaking. The Bolsheviki, when they had gained control of Petrograd, decided that the best thing to do with the stored liquors was to pour them into the Neva; that is, the responsible leaders thought that. Many of the soldiers and sailors thought drinking it would be a better solution.

The Czar's cellar had in it wine 300 years old. Another cellar had 1,200,000 bottles. The cellars under the Winter Palace were valued at 30,000,000 rubles. The sailors began removing the wine for possible later shipment to England and America. The soldiers thought the sailors were getting ahead of them, and there was trouble. Finally the wine pogroms were declared, and squads of soldiers visited thousands of cellars, broke millions of bottles on the spot, and fire engines pumped the cellars dry.

ostrich plumes. No man with blood in his veins could have touched them without a thrill.

"I'm a fool!" he thought; but he did not think himself the kind of fool he really was.

His hands and attention well engaged, Clo had the chance for which she had waited. Delicately, stealthily, like the mouse she called herself, she extracted the door key from O'Reilly's pocket.

So far, so good; but the next deed would try her mettle. Lightly as a flitting shadow the small fingers moved over the man's waistcoat, from the belt line to the breast.

Clo had noticed that men often wore a short chain or ribbon, attached to a watch, and hanging from the waistcoat pocket with a seal—a society badge or some cherished souvenir. O'Reilly wore no ornament of that sort; but there was a watch—a thin watch, which she could feel through the cloth—and with it was some flat object. If she could slip a finger into that pocket without his knowing!

By this time they were in Park avenue, not far from the apartment house at the corner where Mr. and Mrs. Sands lived. Clo availed herself of a slight bump, and showed signs of sliding off the seat. O'Reilly, who had just extracted the offending hatpin and stuck it into his coat, steadied her with an effort.

The taxi stopped and O'Reilly prepared awkwardly to carry the fainting girl into the house. As he got out of the taxi with Clo in his arms, very self-conscious, a man came forward.

"Won't you let me help you, sir?" he inquired, civily. "I see the young lady has fainted."

"You might look for the porter," said O'Reilly. "I can manage the young lady myself."

The man who had offered his services disappeared into the house, and found the porter, a substantial person in livery, who came out promptly. As for the volunteer messenger, O'Reilly forgot him. The porter took the lift up to the Sands' floor.

Almost instantly a man servant appeared. His cry of surprise brought Mrs. Sands herself out from a room at the end of the hall. The porter tried to explain everything; failed; broke off to question O'Reilly; O'Reilly answered; Beverley exclaimed; and, among them, all was confusion and excitement.

Clo, looking through half-shut eyes over her bearer's shoulder, saw a shadow flit between the portieres. Had someone come in? If so, who could it be? Or was it only the shadow of a blowing curtain she had seen?

The rush of air and babble of excited voices gave Clo an excuse to gasp.

"Where am I?"

"We'll get you to your room, dear," said Beverley.

"No—please!" Clo saved herself from being deposited like a bundle. "Take me on—into the next room—Sister Lake's room. I must be there! I'll tell you why presently."

Seeming to realize that something important was at stake, Beverley threw open the door between the two rooms, hurried ahead and turned on a light.

"Now, lay me on this bed," Clo commanded.

Having obeyed, O'Reilly stood as if awaiting further orders. Clo glanced from him to Mrs. Sands.

"I've been so ill!" she moaned. "I felt I could never get home alive. Please, Mr. O'Reilly—you've been kind—don't let it all be for nothing!"

"What do you want of me?" he stiffly inquired.

"Only for you to talk to Mrs. Sands. In that next room—my room—nobody will disturb you there. If the nurse comes back she'll come into her own room first. That's why I asked you to bring me to it. I know I couldn't persuade you to give me the papers. Perhaps even Mrs. Sands can't persuade you; but I beg, I pray you, to give her the chance. Listen to what she has to say!"

"Very well," he answered grudgingly. "I'll do what you ask; but I'll only do it for your sake."

Beverley had remained on the threshold of the next room. Now she retreated into it. O'Reilly followed; but at the door he turned.

"Good-by," he said to Clo.

"Good-by," the girl echoed. "And thank you again—for everything."

She had more to thank him for than he knew—the keys that were tightly clutched in her hand.

CHAPTER XII.

FOLLOWING Mrs. Sands, O'Reilly left the door between the two rooms open; but Beverley stepped quickly back and closed it.

"She's grand, the darling!" Clo thought. The girl was deadly tired. Her head ached, and her limbs weighed heavily, yet she sprang up as the door clicked. O'Reilly had remembered to bring in her hat and had dropped it on the table. The hatpin was not there—it still remained sticking in his coat—but Clo crushed the soft toque down over her masses of red hair and hoped she was not untidy enough to be conspicuous.

Unsteadily she tottered to another door—the door that led into the corridor. This faced a narrower passage, which went to the kitchen. Clo would have to take that way, because, if she ventured into the lift and showed herself in the hall below, the porter might take alarm.

In a quaint outside pocket of her new frock Clo had put the purse given her by Beverley. Now she opened it, and took out two $10 bills and two of $5.

Money in hand, she ventured to the kitchen door. Only the chef and a woman assistant were at work. Clo had never seen either, but they had seen her.

"I'm Clo Riley, the girl Mrs. Sands has been good to," she explained. "I'm well again, and I have to go out on business. Mrs. Sands has a visitor, and I don't like to disturb them. Will you let me down your way?"

So speaking, she laid a $10 bill and a $5 bill side by side on a table. She made no reference to the money, nor any gesture indicating it; nor did the others. The chef, who was French, smiled knowingly.

"Ah, a little love affair!" a twinkle in his old eye seemed to say.

He left his assistant in charge of the oven while he acted as Clo's escort to the servants' elevator. Five minutes more and she was in a taxi, tearing back to the Dietz Hotel.

This time she marched boldly to an elevator in a long row of half a dozen.

"Fifteenth floor, please," she said, as if she owned the hotel; and was taken up without question.

Armed with O'Reilly's key, Clo threaded her way through several corridors and arrived at the door of his suite. Now that the moment had come for the great adventure, she was quivering all over, partly from eagerness, partly from excitement. Her fingers shook so much that she could not find the lock. As she fumbled for it, the door of an adjoining suite opened. Clo started as if she had been shot, and dropped the key on the carpet.

If only the people—she knew by the voices that they were man and woman—would pass before she had to look up! But they were in no hurry. They had stopped in front of their own door, and were talking in low tones—about her, Clo was sure. Yet it was stupid to worry! In a big hotel, the chances were ten to one against their knowing O'Reilly.

Raising her head, she tried to eye the pair with airy arrogance; but their interest in her was too frank to be doubted.

"I mustn't seem to care," she thought, and tried to wither them with a look before again attacking the keyhole.

The woman was beautiful—next to Beverley Sands, the most beautiful Clo had ever seen. Oh, a gorgeous, dark creature, and wasn't she gorgeously dressed and jeweled? But oddly, it was the man who riveted Clo's attention, the man whose eyes gave the girl an electric shock.

He wasn't young, and he wasn't handsome. He was a tall, lanky, middle-aged individual with red hair and a close-cut red beard streaked with gray. He had a stoop, as if he wished to diminish his height, and no air of distinction, despite the well-cut evening clothes; but from under a pair of beetling black brows there flashed a light which took Clo's breath away.

Frightened, she slid the key into the lock, and, almost falling into the room, slammed the door behind her. In the corridor John Heron and his wife stood in front of their own door.

"Well, if that's not the queerest thing I ever saw!" Dolores Heron exclaimed.

She was staring at O'Reilly's door, as if it had been shut in her face. She expected her husband to agree about the queerness of the incident.

"What's the matter, Jack?" Mrs. Heron asked. "How odd you look!"

"I was thinking," Heron said at last.

"It isn't like O'Reilly to have a girl calling on him in his rooms?"

"It doesn't matter, anyhow. After all, why shouldn't he? What is it to us?"

"Well, I feel queer about it," objected Dolores. "The creature may be a hotel thief."

"Nonsense!" fumed the man. "The girl was a child—16 or 17. We can't mix ourselves up in such an affair. Come along, and let's mind our own business!"

They went down together and sat side by side on a rose-colored sofa, in the immense salon, generally known as "the hall." Guests of the Dietz had tea there in the afternoon, listening to music, or pretending to listen. Already a crowd was beginning to assemble.

Mrs. Heron wished that Justin O'Reilly would come. Sometimes she thought he liked her quite a good deal, and would like her even more if he weren't too loyal to Jack.

Upstairs the girl in question was making the most of every moment.

The queer little key attached to O'Reilly's watch couldn't belong to the desk. Still, there might be a box inside the desk which it would fit. Clo searched. She searched everywhere and everything.

The girl stared at the wall. Any one of those panels might conceal a safe. There were lots of them, panels of different sizes, painted a soft gray and edged with delicate white moldings. To test each would take hours, unless she had luck and hit on the right one first; for there might be a spring hidden somewhere in the flowery pattern of the molding.

It was to the left side of the room that O'Reilly had flung his anxious glance. Fortunately, this fact limited the scope of activities.

A wooden frieze or skirting board, painted gray, ran around the room to a height of three feet above the pink-carpeted floor. Above this frieze, distributed at regular intervals, were large plaster panels, two on each side of the room, forming backgrounds for colored prints with gilt frames; and between these were small, narrow panels ornamented with conventional flower designs.

Beneath and above these latter were panels still smaller, placed horizontally, and outlined with white curlicues and flutings. They were about four inches in height by 10 inches in length; and on the left side of the wall were two.

"Just the right size for nice big jewel boxes," Clo thought. "And the right height to open without stretching up. If I were putting a safe into a wall, that's the place I'd choose!"

She passed her finger around the edge of one. Nothing happened. No spring clicked.

She tried the other, with the same result, then stood disappointed, only to return to the attack with new inspiration.

"I bet it pulls out!" she told herself.

And—oh, joy, oh, triumph!—it did. The whole thing came away from the wall like the loose side of a box, having been kept in place by thin prongs of metal. Behind this cover was a steel door of practically the same dimensions as the panel. It also was painted gray, and showed a tiny keyhole like a slot made with a pair of sharp scissors.

Clo deposited the cover close by on the desk, where it would be within reach if wanted in a hurry. Then she inserted the key attached to O'Reilly's watch. It slipped into place like a magic key in a story or fairy land. It turned. It opened the small iron door, and Clo peered into the aperture, breathless with emotion.

In the receptacle lay a pile of greenbacks, held together with a paper band. There was also an envelope, but not the envelope the girl had pictured. It was larger, longer, wider and thicker. It seemed to be made of coarse linen, and instead of the dainty gold seals with the monogram, there were five official looking red ones.

Clo's heart contracted. What if all her hopes, all her labors, had been vain? It seemed too bad to be true. But there was plenty of space in this envelope to contain the other as well as its contents.

"I'll have to open the thing and look," Clo half decided.

But if she did, how could she make sure of what she wished to know? If the envelope with the gold seals had been removed, she had no means of recognizing the documents it had contained.

Arguing thus, she took the linen envelope from the safe and turned it over. Upon the other side was an address written in a strong, peculiar hand.

"Justin O'Reilly, care of the manager, Columbia Bank, New York City," she read.

This was vexing, and seemed to make decision more difficult. There was just one reason to believe that the envelope contained Mrs. Sand's papers—and that was Clo's own strong, instinctive conviction.

Tentatively she pressed one of the seals with her finger. It cracked across. Another went the same way; but just as she touched the third, there came a sound of talking outside the door.

"Open it for me with your pass key, please," a man said.

It was O'Reilly's voice.

CHAPTER XIII.

WHEN Beverley Sands had shut the door between Clodagh's room and Sister Lake's, she stood silent before Justin O'Reilly. She had meant to speak; she had even planned her words, but the look in O'Reilly's eyes and the half smile on his lips drove them away.

"Well, Mrs. Sands," he said, "I must congratulate you!"

"On—what?" she stammered.

She looked very young and humble, not at all the proud princess who had captured Roger Sands against his will. She was rather like a schoolgirl prepared to hear a lecture on her sins.

"On many things," O'Reilly answered, still smiling his cruel smile. "It's not too late for congratulations on your marriage, is it? By the way, perhaps one should wish well to the bride and congratulate the bridegroom; but really, I mean nothing invidious."

"You mean to hurt me all you can!" Beverley cried.

"No, I'm not as bad as that," the man defended himself lightly. "Though, if I were, I don't think you'd have the right to blame me much. I'm on the other side, Mrs. Sands."

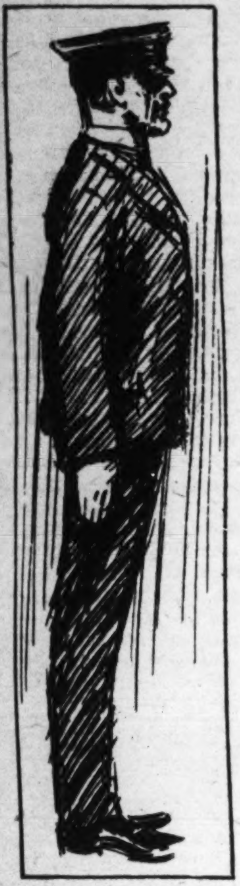
The Water Route to Harmony

By Roy P. Churchill



Life to him was a strict up-and-down code of ethics.

THERE was a feud on board the U. S. S. Walrus, storeship and tender for submarines. Ensign John Howard Trent and Boatswain Mate Samuel Marke had disliked each other cordially from their first meeting. The more they saw of each other the stronger their feelings became. The trouble was that each, through ignorance, thought little of the school which had made the other what he was.

Their lives had been vastly different. Ensign Trent was a graduate of Annapolis. He had absorbed the complex system of rules in that institution that he brought with him into the service, much too strict a set of laws for the game of life. When he saw a rule he came to attention and saluted. He was a stickler for discipline and had rather a wide streak of self-esteem. With men he thought his equals, he was rather a likeable fellow. Tall, slight and muscular, his classmates called him the "Ramrod." Life to him was a strict up-and-down code of ethics. In it there was small place for men like Samuel Marke.

Marke represented the other extreme. In his training there had been no rules except those he had made himself. At the time Trent entered Annapolis, Marke had run away to sea. Standing over against the grind of mathematics and chemistry in Trent's school days was Marke's adventure of the tramp steamer with the contraband arms, the square rigger which struck a reef, the oil tanker which burned, and others of like caliber. While Trent made friends with rules, Marke had worked a wireless outfit, trimmed coal, crossed yards, washed dishes, clung to wrecks, starved, thirsted, fought. He was as hard and healthy as a human animal can be; typhoid immune, smallpox scarred, and carried 180 pounds of weight to his six feet of height.

No wonder that when the two men met they should misunderstand one another. Trent thought Marke a bully and a ruffian, with none of the finer worthwhile qualities of a man. Marke thought Trent an "act-of-Congress gentleman," with plenty of rule-worship and petty codes, and little else.

Both were wrong. Marke should have known that only men with endurance, resource and power can run the gamut of galling rules and be polished instead of broken. Trent should have known that there must needs be moral fiber behind even a ruffian, if he can long hold his place among men, and come out clean.

It was inevitable that these two men should clash. They were so strongly opposite in type that the nature of each was like a red flag to the other. Marke was an impulsive leader of men, and Trent a cold, calculating official. Marke kept the spirit of rules only, while Trent seemed to hunt out even the commas to worship.

In dozens of little ways they opposed each other. Marke found himself criticised because his tailored uniform fit him, being therefore nonregulation. He was sent to the squad because the forefinger of his left hand was half an inch away from his trourers' seam; and so on and on, Ensign Trent, as Marke's division officer, finding fault with each rule infringement, no matter how trivial. Soon it became a passing bet forward the two would break openly to the tune of a courtmartial for Marke before another pay day.

But Marke had his innings, too, and he was too wise a general to let things come to an open break.

One day as relief coxswain in a launch, Marke was just ready to shove off from the shore landing when Trent came down to go off to the ship.

A liberty breaker, none too clean, slept in the cabin of the boat and Trent ordered Marke to put him off on the dock.

Marke explained very politely, and yet very contemptuously, that his orders were to bring off the sailor.

"I am just as much ashamed of him as you are," argued Marke. "He's been disgracing us long enough."

Trent resented the "us," and after more words stepped into the boat to move the sailor out himself, ordering assistance from the crew.

Marke signaled the engineer to go ahead, as soon as the officer was aboard, and steered for the ship.

"Stop the boat," ordered Trent furiously.

"Here is the schedule," said Marke, pointing to a typewritten order. "Coxswains are to make trips on time if at all possible."

"You heard my order," answered Trent. "Return to the dock at once." He was fairly beside himself with anger. "I shall see that you get the limit for disobeying an officer."

"That's up to you, Mr. Trent," answered Marke, as tauntingly as a cool man can speak to an angry one. "I must be sure that you really intend to upset the boat's schedule. The First Lieutenant is waiting to come ashore and I had positive orders to bring Taylor off this trip." During this time the boat was making full speed toward the ship, Marke steering with one hand and talking over his shoulder to Trent.

"Put back to the dock and carry out my orders," answered Trent furiously.

"Aye, aye, sir," answered Marke, curtly, and turned the boat toward shore.

There are several kinds of obedience in the navy. Marke had a special brand for this occasion. An adept in handling a launch, he succeeded in just missing the landing in four trials. Then it finally came in, bows on, backing frantically until only the nose of the boat touched the landing stage.

"I'm afraid that's the best I can do, sir," said he, with mock humility, while the rest of the crew could hardly hold their mirth. "What next?"

"Get that man Taylor ashore," said Trent, grimly. "You a coxswain of a boat! I'll have you disrated to mess attendant. Get a line off the stern and put the boat alongside."

"Aye, aye, sir," said Marke, with such humbleness that even Trent should have seen trouble coming. "Get out the stern painter, Thorp. Be careful about fouling the propeller."

Thorp hadn't been stern man on Marke's launch two years for nothing. He worked deftly and rapidly and seemed very anxious to do just as Ensign Trent wanted. So deft was he that just at the right moment his foot slipped, and before the engine could be stopped there were 10 fathoms of two-inch manila round the propeller. The bow man lost his boat hook at the same time, and the boat went adrift; a short swim, but a good wetting from shore.

"Now you've done it," yelled Marke to the engineer.

"'Tain't me, it's that fool rookie of a stern man," answered the engineer. "I got two bells and I give her two bells. That's what I'm here for." This retort rumbled dangerously near to a laugh as he bent over the engine.

Marke turned to the bow man. "What'd you let go for, Beany? Didn't you hear me say to hold fast?"

"What d' you think I am? A grapnel? I did hold fast until it was let go hook or go myself. What kind of a freak crew is this, anyway, with that spraddle-legged lobster on the stern stumbling over his big flat feet?"

"Pipe down, Beany," argued the maligned Thorp. "That thing in the engine room, greasing his hair with engine oil, didn't give me time to get set for the throw."

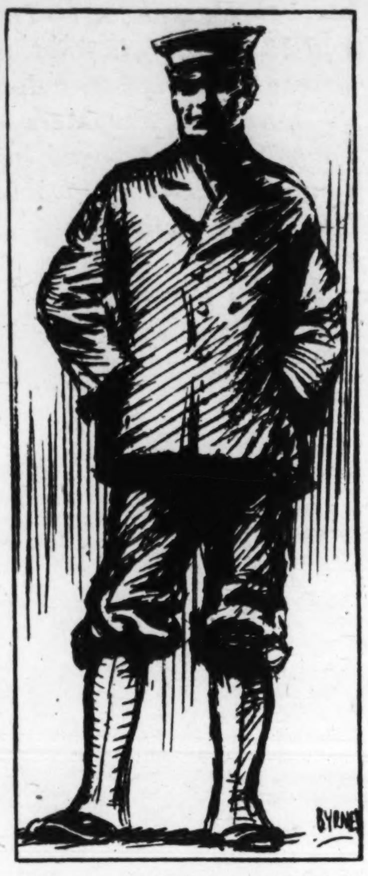
Trent remained silent while this wrangle went on. He was too angry to feel the undercurrent of levity in the banter. Marke was afraid he would see or feel it and called a halt.

"Stow the jaw and break out the oars," said he, and the crew knew from his tone that he meant it.

The boat was some distance from the landing and steadily drifting further out. With the best work possible at the two oars, the heavy boat was barely able to make steerage way. Finally, after half an hour, they made the dock and secured. During all this time Mr. Trent, the immaculate, shared the cabin with the despised Taylor. He was in no pleasant frame of mind. He felt that his dignity had been outraged, and his claim to being better than the common herd questioned. He clambered up on the deck and ordered Marke into the water to clear the propeller. It took the sailor so long to unwind and cut loose the tough manilla that the officer finally grew impatient and strolled up to the corner. His anger was somewhat appeased at the length of time Marke had been in the cold water.

When he returned the launch was disappearing in the direction of the ship and none of the crew were looking back.

Trent was furious. He knew now that Marke had simply killed time with the fouled propeller until he turned his back, and since he had forgotten to order him to wait, had slipped off without him. That a common sailor should dare such a thing was preposterous. It did not occur to him that as man to man Marke had paid him back for many small annoyances.



He was as hard and healthy as a human animal can be.

He hailed a shore boat and was taken off to the ship. The First Lieutenant heard his story in silence.

"I want this man Marke punished as he deserves," finished Trent. "He willfully disobeyed my orders and"——

"Just a moment, Mr. Trent," said the First Lieutenant, who knew the value of men; "it would not have hurt you to ride off with Taylor. You played a game of wits with Marke and he has beaten you. Why not forget it?"

"It is an outrage, sir, and I insist that Marke be punished."

"You may insist until the crack of doom, but until you bring me a better case than this, I refuse to have one of my best men thrown into the brig. This is final, sir," and the First Lieutenant turned his back and walked away.

Mr. Trent kept his eyes on Marke after that. In a hundred mean little ways he put on the screws until Marke all but lost his self-control. Day by day the load became harder to bear. He even thought of asking for a transfer, or running away, but pride kept him at the game, and now and then, as in the launch incident, he was able to get the best of Trent in some unpunishable insolence. One trick of his was to stare at Trent while that officer was on watch, putting so much contempt and hatred into his eyes that the officer would grow restless and send a messenger to have Marke sent about some work.

The ship's company became interested in the struggle. Marke, working for promotion to warrant officer, had to keep every galling rule to the letter or be reported by Trent, while Trent found the quick-witted sailor able to sting him on the raw tenderness of his conceit in many report-safe ways. It was as if they beseiged each other's souls and constantly sought ways of attack.

They were both assigned to the same submarine, and duty threw them together constantly. This diver, Submarine B-6, was the prize chick of the brood of five which called the Walrus home. In speed, maneuvering and general trustworthiness she was a model. Some of the old timers even shook their heads over her. "It ain't natural," said these wise ones, "for a submarine to be so all-fired good. You the call were delayed, he turned his back and sauntered to the elevator.

Ought she to phone to Beverley and put her on guard?

Yes, she would telephone from the Dietz, while wating to see O'Reilly. It would be safe, because by this time Roger must be far away.

CHAPTER X.

JUSTIN O'REILLY had a modest suite in the magnificent Dietz. It adjoined the luxurious suite of Mr. and Mrs. John Heron. He was tying his necktie when the telephone bell rang. He grabbed the receiver as if it were a snake that had to be throttled, and gave it a grudging "Hello!"

"A lady to see you," a voice answered. "She's Miss Riley."

"Tell her I'll be down in three minutes," he replied.

"She wouldn't trouble you to come down. She says she has some private news for you, and asks if you'll see her in your own sitting room."

"All right," he tried to answer calmly. "Have the lady shown up."

As he slipped into his coat, he heard the expected rap at his sitting room door, and hurried to open it. A bell boy, acting as guide, had run ahead of the lady to knock.

"Miss Riley to see Mr. O'Reilly," he announced, with Irish relish on the Irish name.

O'Reilly stood on the threshold, waiting for the lady to appear. Meanwhile, he was obliged to dodge back from a small, slim flapper in white, who, for some reason, had paused before his door. O'Reilly waited for her to pass on, but she remained.

"I beg your pardon," O'Reilly said, wanting to laugh. "May I pass? I must look for a lady who"——

"I'm the lady," the creature in white intervened. "That is, I am if you are Mr. O'Reilly."

"O'Reilly's my name," he admitted; "but I was expecting—or perhaps my cousin sent you?"

"Perhaps I am your cousin," suggested the girl.

"Delighted, I'm sure," he felt obliged to answer. "I thought I had only one cousin in the world, Theresa O'Reilly of Gramercy Park; but"——

"It sounds like the chorus of a song, 'Theresa O'Reilly of Gramercy Park,'" Clo was unable to resist remarking with her strongest brogue. "Will you please ask me in, Mr. O'Reilly?" she said. "My errand is really a very pressing one."

Mechanically the man stepped aside and let her walk into the room.

Her first move was to shut the door, which he had left ajar. Yet she did not speak.

"May I know your name?" he inquired.

"The same as yours but for a letter or two," said Clo, marking time. "That's why I may be a cousin. One never knows! I didn't come to talk about the family tree, though, Mr. O'Reilly. I came to beg—not for money, so don't be frightened!"

"I'm not afraid, I'm curious," he confessed. "What are you going to beg for, if not for money? Have you a message from my cousin?"

In her hot little heart Clo prayed for wisdom—the wisdom of the serpent; and as her elfin fact took on anxious lines, she became more puzzling, more interesting to O'Reilly.

"If I were Marat and she Charlotte Corday," was the thought that jumped into his head, "she would stab me!"

"It isn't a message from your cousin," she said. "It's a good thing for me you have a cousin, or maybe you wouldn't have let me in. I was obliged to get to you somehow."

"Good Lord, I hope you're not going to faint!" cried the man. "You can't faint here!"

"I won't, unless you make me—I'll promise." The girl had got her cue now.

"Sit down, for heaven's sake!" said O'Reilly, pulling up the biggest chair in the room.

Clo sank into it.

"Shall I ring for some brandy?" he suggested.

"No—please!" She opened her great eyes again. "Only listen. I've come from Mrs. Roger Sands—to beg you for those papers of hers."

"Mrs. Roger Sands! Her papers? I know nothing of any papers belonging to Mrs. Roger Sands," O'Reilly exclaimed.

"They weren't yours, anyhow," Clo persevered in a weak voice.

"Not mine? What papers are you talking about?"

"The ones you hired a man to steal when the train got to Chicago."

O'Reilly started.

"Whose accusation is that?" he asked sharply.

"Not hers!" Clo promptly exonerated Beverley. "It's mine."

"Yours? Once again, who are you? What are you in this?"

"I'm nobody! I'm only—a lion's mouse."

"And I'm the net you hope to gnaw! Miss Mouse, your little teeth will find me tough. I may say I'm a patent, ungnawable net. The best thing for you is to go home as fast as you can, and tell those who sent you"——

"I sent myself," Clo explained with tired obstinacy. "Oh, Mr. O'Reilly, you don't look the sort of cruel brute I thought you would be. If you only dreamed what Mrs. Sands is going through, you'd give her back the papers! Don't pretend not to know what I mean."

"I won't pretend anything, you small, strange creature," O'Reilly said. "I do know what you mean, and I got the documents—which were not the property of Mrs. Sands—more or less as you think I got them. But that's ancient history. Even if I had them to this day, and I don't say I have, no mouse, no mastodon, could induce me to hand them over to Mrs. Sands!"

"If you would see Mrs. Sands, maybe you'd change your mind," Clo pleaded in her creamiest Irish voice. "Take me back to her, and take the papers. Then, if you"——

"I can't do either," was O'Reilly's ultimatum. "I'll take you downstairs and put you in your car, if you have one, or a taxi, if you haven't. But"——

"You'll have to take me home," said Clo. "Don't you see I'm not fit to go alone? I won't try to start without you. I'll just let myself collapse. I promised not to faint unless you made me."

"Brace up!" O'Reilly cried. "I'll take you home. I know where the house is. I happened to pass it this afternoon. There was a man who—but no matter. Have you a car below?"

Clo was almost past answering—almost, not quite; but weakness was her cue, as well as the line of least resistance. She shook her head, then let it fall to one side, her eyes drooping, her lips apart. Her body was exhausted, but far down the fire still burned under cooling ashes of fatigue. Something within was on guard, and knew that O'Reilly had to be watched.

He dashed to the telephone and ordered a taxi. Then he returned to the girl in the chair.

"She's fainted, fast enough," he growled.

Clo heard the words dimly, as if she had cotton in her ears.

O'Reilly gently laid down the hand he had taken. It was limp as the hand of a dead girl. Clo would have felt less compunction if he had dropped it roughly. He took a few brisk steps, as if he had come to some decision. She forced herself back from the brink of unconsciousness to realize that he was going toward the door—not the outer door, through which she had entered, but another. He opened it, and Clo saw that beyond was a bedroom.

Quickly the man went to a table where stood a tall glass pitcher filled with crushed ice and water. His back was turned to the girl as he began pouring the contents of the pitcher into a tumbler; but suddenly, as if on strong impulse, he turned.

Clo did not even quiver. Something told her that the thing she had prayed for was about to happen.

CHAPTER XI.

O'REILLY'S first look into the sitting room was not for the girl. Involuntarily, it seemed, he sent a lightning glance to the left, to the side of the room furthest from the big chair where she sat.

Now, Clo was certain not only that he had the papers, but that they were in the room, somewhere on that left side, where his glance had flashed. Now she must stiffen her nerves, lest she should flinch at the thought of that ice-cold water! Would O'Reilly empty the pitcher over her head, or down her neck, or would he merely sprinkle her hands?

What he did was no deed of violence. He moistened his handkerchief, and gingerly dabbed the girl's forehead. It was a relief to be able to open her eyes and draw a long breath. Neither spoke at first; but when Clo felt it safe to stare at him dazedly, the man reassured her with a kind of boyish awkwardness.

"There! You're better, aren't you?" he asked.

"Yes," she breathed. "Thank you very much. I—should like to go home, but I'm afraid"——

"Don't be! I'm going with you," he said. "By this time a taxi's waiting for us. Do you think you can walk, if I give you my arm?"

"I'll try," Clo answered gratefully.

No pretense of weakness was needed, for she felt like a rag.

"Lean against me," he said, in a kind voice.

Clo did as she was told, not knowing whether she wanted most to laugh or cry. It was so odd to be cuddling against the shoulder of that brute O'Reilly and not disliking it or him!

"You're very good to me," she whispered. "I should like you, please, to remember that I thank you."

"Whatever else you may be, you're a brave girl! Now, here we are at the door. Are you sure you can walk to the elevator?"

"Yes. Perhaps I can even walk alone, if we don't go too fast."

"Better not try. Hang on to my arm."

They reached the lift, which came to them in a few seconds, unoccupied save for the youth whose gloomy mission in life was to run it. Clodagh kept up bravely until she was seated in the taxi, and could have kept up until the end without too great an effort, for her temporary collapse had done the girl good. But it was not enough merely to keep up. Her task was but half accomplished, and the hardest part was to come.

She knew—or thought she knew—that O'Reilly had the papers, and that they were in New York—not only in New York, but in his private sitting room at the Dietz Hotel.

Those big black eyes of Clodagh Riley's had not been given her in vain. One swift glance during the cold water treatment had shown her many details useful to remember. On one side of the window was a desk. In the desk was a drawer, and the key thereof was in the keyhole. It seemed improbable that secret papers should be kept in such a place, but circumstances might have forced O'Reilly to leave them there.

On the other side of the window was a kind of buffet, with glass doors and shelves and a closed supboard, but Clo had less hope of this than of the desk. There might be a less obvious hiding place than either—perhaps a sliding panel in the wall. There must in any case be a key, and that key was practically certain to be on the person of O'Reilly.

She would have to use all her wits to get it while they were together in the taxi! And there was the key of the suite to get also; but that would be easier. She had seen O'Reilly take the big key from a table, as they went by and slip it into the pocket of his dinner jacket.

"Of course," she reflected, "I've got that bunch of keys Angel gave me; but it's doubtful if any of them will work. I must do better for her somehow!"

With this design burning in her head and tingling in her hands, she decided to faint again as they started for home, so as to keep O'Reilly occupied every inch of the way.

"I'm afraid—I'm not so strong—after all," she sighed, as the taxi door shut.

She proceeded to flop down like a rag doll. Her head fell on the man's breast and rolled across to his left arm, her hat askew.

"I'm very ill," she moaned. "Something hurts so! My hatpin"—— And her voice trailed into silence.

"Poor child!" the man exclaimed.

Clumsily, obstinately, he fumbled among the meshes of ostrich plumes wound around her hat. The head of the pin eluding him there, he tried beneath the brim, his fingers tangling in thick waves of hair. They were soft waves, softer and silkier than the just naturally have to do some tinkering on 'em. When she goes bad she will go the limit."

None were prepared, however, for the limit to which B-6 debauched herself. With a crew of 20 men, after acting her part as a perfect lady in fleet drill, she went wrong in her steering and ran down a sister ship. They were running on the surface and before the struck submarine sank all her men were able to crawl out of the manhole to safety in the water.

B-6 filled more rapidly. Despite the letting-go of emergency weights, six of her crew were unable to get out in time. As water began to pour into the open manhole, one of the six shoved the crowding five to one side, closed the manhole from the inside and secured it. He was just in time. B-6 plunged down and struck bottom at six fathoms.

The imprisoned six knew just what kind of a predicament they were in. They were all experienced submarine sailors. Trent, who was in command of the boat, and Marke, his enemy, were among them. Marke had been steering when the accident occurred. Swiftly they took stock.

The large storage tanks of compressed air were intact, and had the boat been uninjured, the six could have lived in her for a week. But water came in rapidly. It was a matter of hours only until she would fill completely.

The six wasted no time. Five men could be shot out of the torpedo tubes. Six fathoms did not give a killing pressure. The tubes were clear, and there was plenty of air pressure in the tanks. It was only a matter of nerve, of holding the jaws set, and a grip on the nose with the fingers. They had tried it in practice. But the sixth man must remain. When he had fired out the fifth there would be no one left to do the trick for him. Number six must drown. As they began hurried preparations the men looked at one another. They were brave men, but curious. One must die. Which one?

In a moment one of the tubes was ready. Trent stepped to the wireless telephone and found it out of order. As he turned away, Marke said: "A note will do, Mr. Trent. We can send it up in a bottle through the tube." Trent wrote a short message on a scrap of paper and this was soon attended to. It was necessary to let the frantic rescue boats above know what they were about to do.

"Off with your shoes, one of you," said Marke, after waiting a few minutes for the bottle to be opened and read above.

The men hung back. "Who's going to—stay?" said one.

There was silence for a moment. Finally one of the older men spoke. He was gray in the service and carried an arm full of service stripes. "I'm about due for retirement, anyway, boys," said he. "I'll be it. You young fellows go on up. The water pressure would be too much for me anyhow."

"Tommy-rot," cried Marke. "You'll not do it, Conway; we'll draw lots. Six strips of paper numbered from one to six. Number six stays down. What do you say, men?"

There was a chorus of "That's well. Fair enough," and Marke tore six blank leaves from a notebook and numbered them. Putting them folded into a cap, the men drew. It took only a moment. "Number one," said Marke. Old Conway came forward and protestingly crawled into the tube. Water was let in around him and then the air turned on. In a moment he shot toward the surface like the seed from a squeezed orange. "Number two," said Marke.

Another man stepped forward. "Look out for old Conway when you go up," cautioned Marke. "He's not as young as he once was." The man nodded. A moment afterward he vanished upward in a whirl of bubbles.

Numbers three and four followed him in quick succession. Marke had not looked at his folded slip as yet. Trent sat on a half-submerged chest. His unfolded slip lay beside him, number down. He seemed little interested in the successful launching of the men. His eyes constantly marked the ever-rising water.

"Five," announced Marke. Unconsciously, he had taken command of the situation, which should have been dominated by his superior.

Trent did not move. Marke took out his folded slip, which he had thrust into his waistband. He unfolded it hurriedly and held it to the dim light of the port. Except for a tightening of the jaw muscles his face did not change. The number was "six." He crumpled the paper in his hand and tossed it in the water.

"Number five," he repeated steadily. "Off with your shoes, Trent."

Trent slid off the chest and came wading through the water to Marke. "My number is 'six,'" said he. His voice was a little husky, but steady enough and tinged with hatred.

"You're a liar," cried Marke. "My number was 'six.' There couldn't be two. Let's see it."

For answer Trent crumpled up his slip and threw it from him. His slow-burning hate leaped into fierce fire.

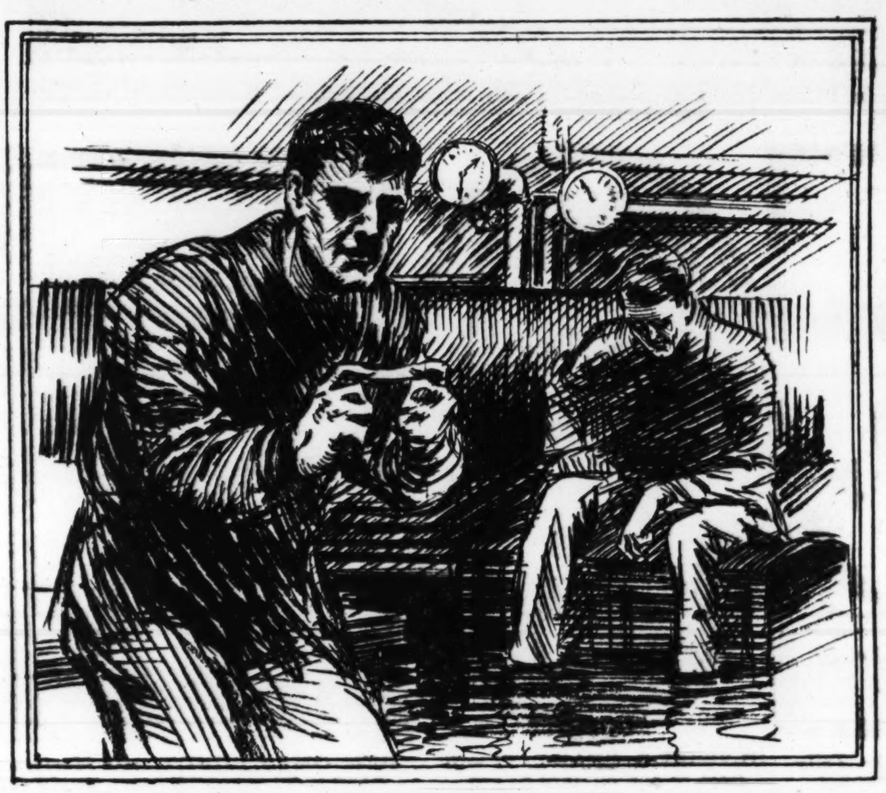
"I did lie. Yes. But do you think, you common, world-trotting scum, that I could let you give your life for mine? Life isn't sweet enough to own, if I have to have it through such as you."

Marke laughed. "You are a hysterical fool, Trent, and I'll pass what you said. I don't care a bean about your exalted notion of honor. My rule has been to play a square game. You won in the draw and I lost. I was to stay down and you go up. We will play the hands that way."

"I refuse," answered Trent, bitterly. "I am in command of this vessel, and my place is last man out. You arbitrarily took command of the situation, but you cannot command me. I refuse to leave the ship."

"This is no time for quarterdeck ethics," answered Marke, angrily; "this a man-to-man proposition."

"Exactly," answered Trent. "I refuse to have you do the hero act for me."



Except for a tightening of the jaw muscles his face did not change. The number was "six."

"You're a fool, Trent. Surely you wouldn't die just for a whim like that."

"I would. Though I'm so little thought of topside, I'd rather take my slim chance down here than go up safely and face the sneers and jeers and side glances given an officer who lets one of his men drown to save himself."

For a moment the men were silent. The incoming water gurgled and bubbled as it rose steadily about them. A little pin point of spray shot from a crack overhead and struck Marke's back. They stood close together, hatred and contempt blazing from their eyes.

Marke spoke aggressively. "One more time, Trent. Get into that tube!"

Trent laughed. Then stopped abruptly to parry a blow. In a moment the men were struggling fiercely—locked in each other's arms. "I'll make you go," stormed Marke, trying to get his fingers on the other's throat.

"Never," gritted Trent, as he broke the sailor's hold and struck out skillfully.

The fight was swiftly over. Trent was quick and skillful in boxing, but with the water round his legs he had no show with the larger and more powerful Marke. A lunging, full-arm swing, which might have been evaded under fair circumstances, ended the brief struggle.

When Trent went down before it, Marke lifted him out of the water and laid him on a chest.

A quick examination showed that Trent was only stunned and would soon regain consciousness. As Marke cupped his hands and threw water in the other's face, some of his anger left him. "He's a stubborn fool, anyhow," he muttered; "plenty of nerve, too." Then, obeying a sudden impulse, he took out the notebook and wrote on a leaf of it:

"Trent drew 'five' and I drew 'six.' Only by force could I keep him from taking my place. Am sending him up in five minutes. Look out for him."

"That will help square him with the boys, anyhow," said Marke. Then he put the note in a bottle, corked it tightly and sent it to the surface through the tube.

In a few minutes Trent began to regain consciousness. Marke picked up the half-dazed man and shoved him into the torpedo tube. Then, waiting a few minute more, until Trent called out, to be sure that he was conscious, Marke shouted: "Hold your nose, Trent, I'm turning on the water." Trent was trying to wriggle out backward as he closed the tube. A moment afterward he had operated the necessary valves and Trent was gone.

Half an hour passed. Marke began to wish for the end. He was as good as dead already, so why delay matters? Fascinated, he watched the creeping water cover one by one the row of bolts in the ship's lining. He wished there was some way to hurry it. One moment he was half sorry he had not taken Trent's sacrifice, and the next he was glad he had played a clean game. He wondered how death would come—how long he would struggle before unconsciousness came. He considered putting his head under water at once and ending the suspense. It seemed a good plan. Yes; he would do that.

In a moment Marke came up spluttering. The cold water had cleared his mind. He would die fighting anyhow. Also, there had come to his ears, while under water a new sound—a tapping on the steel top of the submarine. He put his head under water to make sure and caught his name, "Marke." They were signaling him from above with a lead line!

Distinctly now, even above the noise of the incoming water, he caught wigwag signals. Since he was listening for them, they were clear enough with his head out of water.

First would come his name, "Marke," then in a moment, very slowly, "Break out the diving rig." Then again, "Marke, break out the diving rig." Then silence.

Hurriedly Marke set to work. Here at least was employment instead of morbid brooding, and possibly a fighting chance for life itself. The taps from above had thrilled him with hope.

As he finished with the helmet and suit and coiled down the air tube, the taps came again.

"Reduce pressure No. 1 air tank. Attach tube of diving rig to tank."

This was repeated several times. Then more instructions came. "Find ax and lay by. Put on suit. Screw weights to feet. When interior of boat is almost full, put on helmet. Smash ports with ax. Open manhole. Find life lines outside. Three pulls."

Marke understood perfectly and at once set to work. The scheme was only a bare chance, with many possibilities of failure. No one in the history of submarine disaster had tried it, so far as he knew. He wondered who thought it out. The different steps were possible: First to live by the air in the tanks by means of the diving suit until the ports were smashed and water let in. This water would equalize the pressure on the outside and inside of the boat, and allow him to open the manhole. He had then to crawl outside and find one of the dangling lines from above and give three pulls. To do all this before the air failed meant life.

By the time Marke found the ax and put on the suit the water was up to his waist. He then attached the air hose to the tank and sat down to wait. In a little while the water came to his shoulders. While he waited the message from above was repeated several times. "Wish I could tell my friend, whoever it is, that I get him," said Marke to himself. "It takes good nerve to keep on hammering like that with no assurance that you aren't talking to a dead man."

By this time the water was around Marke's neck. He screwed fast the helmet, turned on the air from the tank, grasped the ax and clumsily made his way with his weighted feet to one of the ports. There was a slight singing in his ears, but the air seemed all right. With two blows he smashed the heavy glass. The rush of water knocked him backward, but his heavily weighted feet kept him upright, and he hurried to the manhole. The ringing in his ears had become a road. The manhole port took all his strength. It seemed to stick. Finally it opened and he crawled

THE STORY FROM THE START.

Roger Sands, a New York lawyer, married Beverley White, on agreement that her past should remain a secret, as they were traveling eastward on the Santa Fe Limited. Their otherwise happy home life now has one shadow—Roger's vague jealousy of Congressman Justin O'Reilly, who has already figured as one of the passengers on the railway journey from California.

Beverley has rescued and adopted a little Irish waif named Clodag Riley, whom she intrusts on a secret errand to meet a man sent from Chicago to obtain from Mrs. Sands some important papers in a sealed envelope. Clo delivers the envelope to the stranger, who opens it, to find it contains only blank paper. He now threatens dire consequences unless the evident substitution is made good by 10 o'clock that night. In this dilemma Clo, who suspects Justin O'Reilly of holding the key to the complication, proposes a desperate plan for getting her "Angel," Mrs. Beverley Sands, out of the scrape.

CHAPTER IX.

"YOU must tell me!" Beverley insisted. "Tell me at once!"

"Well," replied Clo, "what will happen is this—I will happen! While Mr. O'Reilly is here with you, Miss Riley, without the 'O', will be at his hotel, in his room, helping herself to his—I mean your—papers."

"My child, you're mad!" Beverley gasped.

"Not so mad as he'll be when he finds out! The whole business is settling itself in my head, the way tea leaves settle when the pot's been shaken. The one trouble is Mr. Sands. The rest will be all right. Think what to do about him, Angel—think hard!"

Hypnotized by the girl's insistence, Beverley thought until her brain whirled.

"I might say I've a headache—goodness knows it's true!—and I don't want dinner. I might suggest Roger's dining at his club," she said. "But how I should hate to do that! He's vexed already—he has a right to be. This afternoon he gave me a wonderful present—a rope of pearls that belonged to a Queen. It must have cost a fortune. I hardly stopped to thank him, I was in such frantic haste to get the envelope to you. Then, worse still, the rope caught in the key of a drawer, the string broke and a lot of pearls ran all over the carpet. I didn't wait to pick them up. I ran down to you, and I was gone so long that Roger went to my room to look for me. I came back and found him picking up the pearls. My excuses did more harm than good, and I was simply sick about everything! Roger pretended that he had an engagement and was obliged to go out, but I saw by his face that he wanted to go. He wanted to walk off his anger in the fresh air. If he does walk it off—if he comes back ready to make up, and I send him away again, I'm afraid that will finish it. Things may never be the same between us any more!"

"He was angry because you didn't seem to care enough for the present," said Clo. "But if you can get him out of the house for an hour or so, and at the same time prove that you adore the pearls—how does that plan strike you?"

"How could I do both?"

"Beg him to go and fetch a pearl stringer, and bring her back here himself, tonight. Say you can't rest or sleep till the pearls are restrung."

"You forget it's Sunday, and"——

"I don't forget. I know a pearl stringer. She's the best pearl stringer in New York. The big jewelers and lots of swell society women employ her. She lives out in Yonkers. She'll love to come, and she'll sit up all night if she needs to—I know she will. There's no phone at her house. The only thing is to fetch her. Do you think Mr. Sands will go?"

"It depends upon how he feels when he comes in," said Beverley. "Clo, you're wonderful!"

"Oh, I forgot to give you the pearl stringer's address. It's Miss Blackburne, 27 Elm street, Yonkers. And tell Mr. Sands to mention my name. Sounds silly and conceited, doesn't it? Still, it might make a difference. She's sure to be in. She doesn't like leaving her mother evenings; but I know she'll do it for me."

Beverley was gone for 15 minutes. When she flew in again, flushed and excited, she was surprised to see Clo in bed as before; but hardly was the door closed when the girl threw back the coverlet, to show that she was fully dressed.

"I was afraid Sister Lake might pop in, by bad luck," she explained. "I've only to put on my hat. Well—is it all right?"

"Roger will go," said Beverley. "He's phoning now for his car. I'm putting off dinner till 8:30, to give him plenty of time to get home and change. He puzzles me, Clo. He didn't make any difficulty when I told him about the pearl stringer and wanting her at once, and all that. He agreed with me that it would be best to do such an errand himself, if it were to be done. And he was very kind, but his manner was different. I'm frightened—frightened!"

"Don't be," said Clo. "I'll go first to the Westmoreland and see our man. He said he'd be in, waiting, till 10 o'clock. I'll tell him things are in trim, but he must give you till midnight, if necessary. From there maybe I can phone the Dietz Hotel. It wouldn't be safe here. By that time O'Reilly ought to be in his room, dressing for dinner. He'll see me, I'm sure, and I'll manage the rest. Now, I'm off."

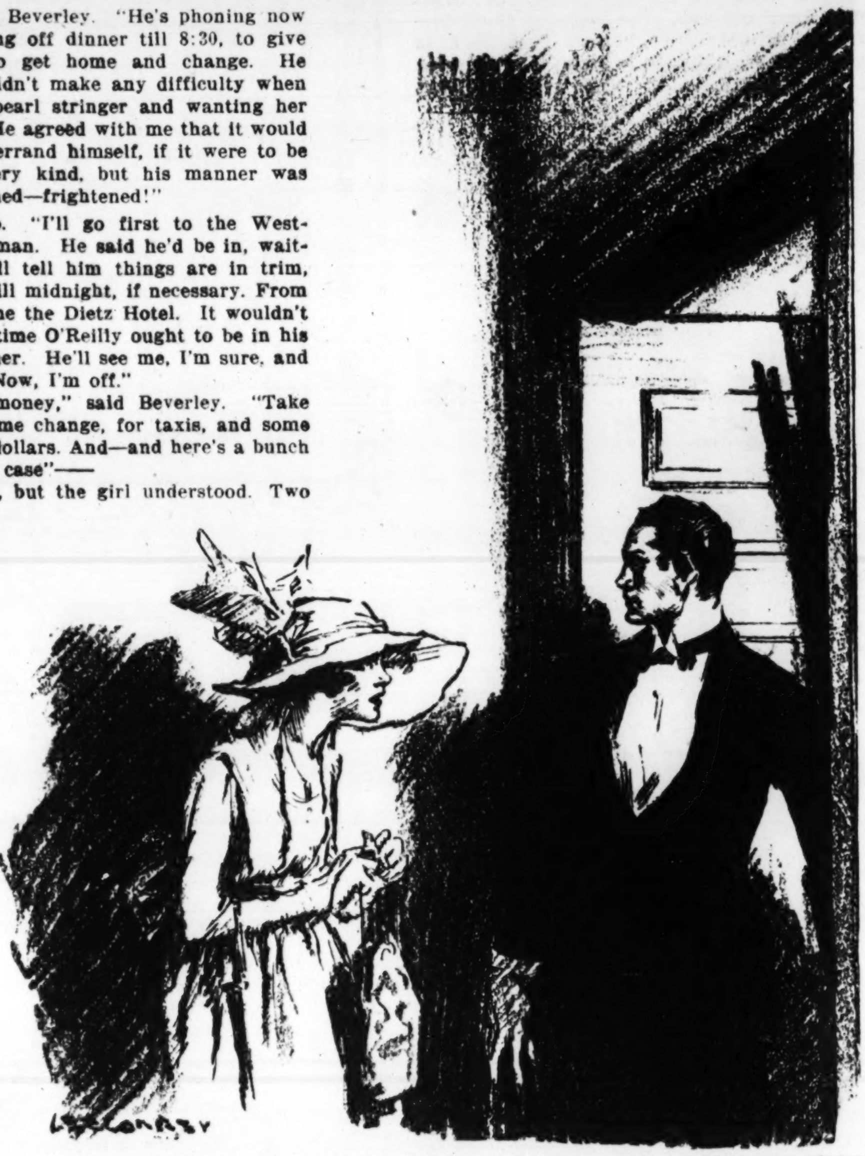
"You'll need some money," said Beverley. "Take this purse. There's some change, for taxis, and some bills besides—50 or 60 dollars. And—and here's a bunch of all sorts of keys, in case"——

She could not finish, but the girl understood. Two minutes later Clo was in the street.

She saw a car about to drive away from a nearby house. It was a public vehicle. The chauffeur had just been paid by the woman who had got out. Clo hailed him and gave the Westmoreland as her destination.

"Mr. Peterson" was in, according to promise, and had evidently been doing what he could to keep himself from being dull. Clo smelled as well as saw him as he entered the hotel parlor. He was not drunk, but the girl suspected him of having consumed several appetizers.

"You again, is it?" he remarked at sight of her. "I was expecting Mrs. Sands."



"Will you please ask me in, Mr. O'Reilly?" she said. "My errand is really a very pressing one."

"I'm her messenger for the second time," said Clo; "if you get what you want, it doesn't matter who brings it, I suppose?"

"Then you suppose wrong. My business is with a woman, not a kid. All the same, if you've got anything for me"——

"I haven't yet," Clo snapped him up. "It isn't time. I'm on to where the thing is, and how to get it; but it may take till after 10 o'clock. That's what I came to say."

"Save your breath! Ten o'clock's the time. If she don't want me to go back on my bargain, she'd better not go back on hers!"

Clo stared back with a bold defiance which she didn't feel.

"It suits us just as well as you to finish up at 10 o'clock and get it over," she said. "If we can, we will. If we can't, you'll have to wait, or you'll throw away your game. The way things are, you have to be in with us, you see, not against us."

"I ain't one darned bit sure my fine madame's not in the game t'other way round—and her husband, too. I know now that she and Roger Sands traveled in the same train from where she started. Blowed if I see why she'd do it, but it might be they fixed a frameup between them. I can see why it would suit Sands, if it wouldn't her, and a man's stronger than a woman. Sands was working for John Heron at the time. That means a lot!"

"It doesn't mean that Mrs. Sands would be disloyal to her word. I know she's true as steel. Things would be a lot easier for her if she wasn't," Clo insisted.

The feeling she had on hearing John Heron's name puzzled and even thrilled her vaguely. It was as if the words had been whispered into her ear in a dream.

"Anyhow," Peterson went on, "there was a frameup, and those that was in it has got to pay me for what I went through. That's partly why I'm here in New York. I'd like to see what this guy Sands is like when he's to home. If I don't have those papers by 10, I'll be darned if I don't show up at his flat and ask for the missis. I've only to lamp those two people together to know whether she"——

"You wouldn't find Mr. Sands at home," the girl cut in. "He's out, and he'll be out a long time. When he comes back, he's likely to go away again at once."

"Ah, he is, is he?" echoed Peterson.

A light flashed in the man's little eyes. He seemed abruptly to throw off the effect of the appetizers. Clo wondered at the change.

"Better go home and grow up, kiddo," he advised, "before you try to tackle a man's-size job." His tone was no longer gruff or hectoring, but good-natured. "Shall I see you back to where you live, or"——

"I have another errand to do," the girl announced with dignity.

She had meant to telephone from the Westmorland to the Dietz to learn if Justin O'Reilly was in, but now she determined not to do so. Better waste a little time, rather than let Peterson hear her inquiring for O'Reilly.

Instead of waiting to telephone, she walked to the door and asked a half-baked youth in hotel livery to call her a taxi.

"If ferret-face tries to follow, I'll lead him a dance," she thought.

But ferret-face seemed to read her mind, and to be willing to relieve it.

"So long!" he said. "I've got a job o' work, too. It will take me till about 10. After that I shall be lookin' for a call."

SAYINGS OF AMERICANS THAT WILL EVER LIVE IN HISTORY

THE war has added brilliantly to the stock of superb sayings in which great and heroic Americans, phrase-makers by nature's gift, have been inspired since the beginning of our national history to sum up the spirit of the United States and its glorious deeds.

Beside Capt. James Lawrence's immortal order, "Don't give up the ship," uttered as he was carried below, fatally wounded, in the battle between the Chesapeake and Shannon, will rank Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Whittlesey's reply: "Go to hell!" to the German commander who begged him, in the name of humanity, to surrender the famous "Lost Battalion."

Gen. Pershing's saying, "Lafayette, we are here!" compresses into four sublimely simple words more than a century of mutual love between France and America. Gen. Bundy's saying at Chateau-Thierry, "My men would not understand the order to retreat," voices the great turning point of the war. The fact that the American troops invariably held what they took is epitomized in Gen. Bullard's order to the American Second Army on the Meuse: "You are there; stay there!"

NATHAN HALE, hanged as spy by British during Revolution: "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, after battle of Lake Erie: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

CHARLES C. PINCKNEY, to Tallyrand: "Millions for defense but not one cent for tribute."

ULYSSES S. GRANT: "I will fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

GEN. OMAR BUNDY, with Marines at Chateau-Thierry: "My men would not understand the order to retreat."

PATRICK HENRY: "As for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

LIEUT.-COL. CHARLES W. WHITTLESEY, Commander of "Lost Battalion," to Germans who begged him to surrender: "Go to hell!"

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in Gettysburg address: "Government of the people, for the people and by the people."

JOHN PAUL JONES, asked to surrender when Bon Homme Richard was sinking: "We have just begun to fight."

What is it Worth to You to Know Shorthand ?

SHORTHAND, as an efficiency aid for everybody, has just come into its own. From the time that Tiro reported speeches in the Roman Senate down into our own day, it has been considered a mysterious and difficult thing, a sort of Chinese puzzle that only the brave and patient could ever hope to master. Always its usefulness has been restricted chiefly to political and court reporters, or to business stenographers. This was due to the great amount of time and intensity of study required to learn any of the various complicated systems of stenography.

Now K. I. Shorthand has been evolved—a new simplified stenography that is playing a tremendously larger role. Its reception reveals the fact that there are numberless people, other than stenographers, to whom shorthand is important. Executives and their subordinates, officials, merchants and their clerks, physicians and nurses, lawyers, clergymen, army and navy men, journalists, superintendents, teachers, salesmen, engineers and farmers—there is hardly a field of activity not represented among those in which K. I. Shorthand has been adopted.

It is the ideal method for stenographers, too.

Learn K·I· Shorthand Simplified Stenography in 5 evenings

This simplified shorthand is for you, whether you are employer or employee. You can afford to learn because it takes so little time and so very little money. You can depend on its service always—every hour in the day or whenever you need it. K. I. Shorthand is never forgettable. Given the opportunity, it soon becomes more natural to write than longhand.

It conserves your time.

It does your remembering for you.

It captures precious ideas before they get away. It enables you to record accurately facts, messages, conversations, orders and statements that you will need to use later.

It is so standardized that your stenographer can read your notes as easily as her own. Write your letters or instructions any time or any place in K. I. Shorthand; then hand them to your stenographer to transcribe on the typewriter. Great saving of time; wonderful convenience.

Everybody Can Learn

We say you can learn K. I. Shorthand in five evenings—actually in FIVE HOURS, after which you gain speed by easy practice. It is not our intention to be sensational in making that statement. It is a positive fact—proved in thousands of instances—incontrovertible! And, mind you, it is not only the exceptional individual who learns K. I. Shorthand with such ease. Anyone of average intelligence may do it that quickly.

Rev. Paul E. Winger writes: "I didn't even have to study K. I. Shorthand; I absorbed it." Mrs. Ella Ullman writes: "I learned with as much pleasure as quickly and as easily as if I were reading a novel." H. N. Rowell, a lawyer, writes: "My son of fourteen years learned your system so quickly and writes so accurately that I have learned it myself in spare quarter hours and am using it in my practice."

As Simple as A B C

You will pick up speed with amazing rapidity. That, too, is not strange. It is possible because your brain is not burdened with rules of shading, writing symbols on, below or above lines, no maze of arbitrary memory-burdening word signs. Everything is clear, simple and concise—easily assimilated. You have the feeling that you are doing a thing to which you have long been accustomed. Your hand races along with your brain.

That fact that many who could not grasp the old systems are today expert practical writers of K. I. Shorthand proves its simplicity and learn-ability.

The fact that it is used in Government offices, in the Army and Navy, in courts and in public and private business institutions, proves its practicability—its capacity to meet every demand of everyday service.

K. I. Shorthand marks the end of hard-to-learn, complicated stenography.

The road to the splendid opportunities available to stenographers is shortened for every young man and woman. Now the months of hard study-grind at a business school is a deliberate waste of time, energy and money.

Now, too, progressive men and women of all ages and all callings who are keeping pace with the times may enjoy the advantages of shorthand in promoting their efficiency.

Easy to Learn at Home

You can learn K. I. Shorthand at home at convenient odd moments. Even those who are not accustomed to study learn K. I. Shorthand readily. Every student receives all the help needed to become a proficient stenographer without taking a single hour more than necessary.

A stenographic education that possesses so many advantages should cost more than other systems. As a matter of fact the K. I. Shorthand Course is offered for only a fraction of the usual charge for a course in stenography. Price does not now stand in the way of anyone who wishes to know shorthand.

Keep this in mind if you make comparisons: K. I. Shorthand is not merely a set of small text books but is a complete correspondence course of tuition with a Certificate of Proficiency that you may obtain when you show that you have gained it.

No Matter What You Do, You Need K. I. Shorthand

It is amazing what a variety of ages and interests our students' roster reveals.

Here is a schoolboy of fourteen who learned K. I. Shorthand upon the advice of his father who studied one of the old systems and knows better than to have his boy go through the same ordeal.

Here is a lady advanced in years to a point where you might suppose one would not need stenography, a grandmother, in fact, learned K. I. Shorthand by snatching a few half hours from household tasks and is happy that she did so.

A wife and mother, thrown upon her own resources, yet without trained earning ability, speedily mastered K. I. Shorthand, and today holds a well-paying position as stenographer in an important administrative department of one of our largest cities.

An executive of big business takes a daily trip through the plant making jottings in K. I. Shorthand, resulting in valuable ideas and improvements.

True life pages like these can be cited plentifully from the records of our students. Learn K. I. Shorthand yourself and see how efficiently it serves you.

Quick Rise to Good Position
"Recently, when I enrolled for the K. I. Shorthand System, I knew absolutely nothing of the first rudiments of shorthand. Today I am holding a position as stenographer in the office of the Inspector of Buildings, doing technical shorthand work, which of itself I think sufficient recommendation of your system."
Mrs. M. E. FULTON

A Veteran Doctor's Enthusiasm.
"I am now past 83 and use K. I. Shorthand for my professional work in making records of cases. Am greatly enthused with your simple, easy-to-learn system."
A. P. DAVIS, M. D.
Above is part of a letter to King Institute entirely in K. I. Shorthand

From a Noted Authoress
"A truly wonderful thing is K. I. Shorthand. It surely is simplified stenography that anyone can learn in a few hours; and then it is a pleasure to speed up in writing one's own thoughts or taking down what others are saying. I am amazed at your beautiful easy method of acquiring such a valuable accomplishment."
Grace Miller White
Who wrote "Tess o' the Storm Country" and other famous books and screen plays.

90 Words a Minute in One Week
"I learned K. I. Shorthand within five hours and in one week afterwards I was able to write 90 words per minute. I set down all my notes in K. I. Shorthand and can read them weeks afterwards. I believe that everybody should learn K. I. Shorthand, as it is simple and also inexpensive."
BYRON W. CREW

Took Dictation in Two Weeks
"K. I. Shorthand is rapid enough for all practical purposes. I learned the principles in five hours and after two weeks of practice in spare time, could write almost as fast as one would dictate."
W. Rudolph Allen

"The Secret of White Clothes Is Plenty of Soft Water."

All the "Waters", —the Soaking, the Boiling, the Rubbing and Rinsing waters should be soft. One Hard water "Sets" the stain and "Hardens" the fabric.

You can have a tub of soft water instantly by adding two tablespoons of HRH to the water. Soft water means soft washing and the most beautiful results. Dainty fabrics last twice as long.

HRH is but 10c a package, enough for 5 or 6 washings. It saves a cake of soap every wash day. HRH is a twin sister of Absorene, the great wall paper cleaner, and may be had of the same dealers.
